G. O. P. COMMAND CONSIDERS PLANK FOR AMENDMENT ON 'STATE RIGHTS'

Landon Leaders Sending Up "Trial Balloons" Following Upsetting of Original Strategy by New York Wage Law Decision.

UNPREPARED AND NOT SURE HOW FAR TO GO

Declaration for Grant of Power to Experiment in Social and Economic Legislation Is Proposed at Cleveland.

By RAYMOND P. BRANDT,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, June 6. — While delegates crowded into Cleveland today for the Republican convention, obviously determined to nominate Gov. Alfred M. Landon of Kansas for the presidency, the high command of the party devoted itself to consideration of the political wisdom of coming out for a constitutional amendment giving the states authority to occupy the "No-man's Land" referred to by President Roosevelt last Tuesday in commenting on the Supreme Court decision invalidating the New York State minimum wage law.

President Roosevelt, who personally had consistently stated the New Deal was constitutional, admitted Tuesday, it will be recalled, in answering a reporter's question that there was a field in which neither the states nor the Federal Government could function to regulate wages or working conditions.

The Landon leaders are sending up "trial balloons" in guarded conferences and off the record interviews in an effort to find out how a proposed amendment would be received by the delegates and the voters. They obviously were unprepared for the court's decision that the "due process" clause of the Fourteenth Amendment prevented the states from fixing minimum wages for women.

Strategy Upset.

The court's action deprived the party of a strong argument against Roosevelt and his program for "the more abundant life." The proposed strategy had been to harp on the fact that the President had gone far beyond his constitutional powers in attempting to regulate business and agriculture on a national scale. The position was to have been that "the Republican party is the party of the Constitution" and they intended to demand that no attempt be made to change it either by amendment or by "packing" the court; that any needed "social justice" legislation was a matter for the states. The G. O. P. in effect was going to be "for" state's rights and against Roosevelt's invasion thereof. They were to be aided by the American Liberty League, which, about a month ago challenged both political parties to include written platform planks pledging no change in the Constitution.

The minimum wage decision made this grand strategy impossible. The substitute hastily devised here at Cleveland but as yet unapproved by the elder statesmen, tentatively calls for indorsement of a constitutional amendment granting power to the states to experiment with social and economic legislation. How far this amendment should go is causing serious concern among the leaders, old and new.

Among those conservatives who favor some sort of an amendment the disposition is to limit the power granted to the states merely to regulation of minimum wages and maximum hours for women and children. Others seem willing to go much farther than this to permit the states to become, if they desire, laboratories for social and economic experiments, as envisioned by the late Justice Holmes and Justice Brandeis.

Chance to Corner Roosevelt.

Advocates of this "states' rights" proposal believe that if it is handled properly, Roosevelt and the Democrats can be maneuvered into an embarrassing position both at Philadelphia and in the campaign. They also say that if the Cleveland convention fails to take any action on an amendment the Republicans will be forced into the position where they can be attacked as favoring the exploitation of women

HOOVER FAVORS STATE REGULATION OF PAY AND HOURS

Would Amend Constitution if Necessary, He Says, Discussing Supreme Court Decision.

By the Associated Press.

OGDEN, Utah, June 6.—A declaration that the States should be given authority—by constitutional amendment if necessary—to regulate both the hours and wages of women workers was made by former President Herbert Hoover when he paused here between trains tonight on the way to the Republican national convention at Cleveland.

"Something should be done to give back to the States the powers they thought they already had," he said, commenting on the recent United States Supreme Court decision declaring a New York State law regulating wages unconstitutional. "If the States are not able to find constitutional authority for laws preventing sweated wages and hours, they should be given that authority. There seems to be some division of opinion as to whether the States could enact laws in view of the Supreme Court decision, but I believe that, if they cannot do so, the Constitution should be amended so they can."

"I have written a few paragraphs of my speech to be delivered at Cleveland, but I haven't picked out a subject," he said. "My speech will be on principle, however, and will not depend on which way the wind blows at the convention."

SECURITIES WORTH $104,000 MISSING AT BROKERS' OFFICE

Wall Street Clerk Says They Disappeared While He was in Another Room.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Detectives tonight were seeking a clew to $104,949 worth of securities which disappeared from Shields & Co.'s office in a skyscraper at 44 Wall street. Robert Ayers of the brokers' company said $55,462 was in negotiable bonds and the remainder in stock certificates.

Police were notfied after a clerk, Stephen Cosman, of Passaic, N. J., reported the securities had disappeared while he was in another room changing clothes. The securities, he told police, had arrived in 22 pieces of registered mail and had been put in a mail cage basket.

The building is adjacent to 48 Wall street, where $1,456,000 in Government bonds disappeared Jan. 28, 1935. A messenger reported he had placed the securities on a counter ledge in the Bank of Manhattan and they disappeared. No clew ever was found.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 6.—Summary methods employed by Northeastern Arkansas planters in combatting the "cotton chopper strike" called by the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union have drawn attention to the county convict leasing system which is practiced in Crittenden, St. Francis and Cross Counties, the strike area.

Under this system, which amounts to peonage, certain landowners contract with the County Courts for the use of prisoners, obtaining their services for the cash payment of "costs," in some instances for only a percentage of the costs of the trials at which they were convicted.

The prisoner must then work out his fine and costs on the landowner's plantation at the rate of a credit of 75 cents a day. Thus a man unable to pay a $75 fine would be sent to "the farm" for 100 days —plus as many days as necessary to defray the costs, which are variable and frequently amount to nearly as much as the fine.

Average Term Three Months.

The average term on a farm is about three months, but some prisoners have served as long as a year, others have been quickly rearrested and served almost continuously for several years. Sometimes a planter, in need of labor, may manage to obtain a reduction of "his Negro's" fine and effect his release ahead of time. Should David M. Benson, professional labor organizer, who was quickly convicted at Forrest City yesterday and still is in jail there, be unable to pay his fines, which total $1060, or make bond he would be liable to serve a minimum of about three years and 10 months besides serving out the costs which have not been announced. Benson was convicted on a variety of charges, ranging from "interfering with labor" to failing to have a driver's permit, as reported in these dispatches yesterday.

Several union members, all Negroes, are already on the farms, having been rushed there after perfunctory "trials" at which they were convicted on such charges as "trespassing" and "vagrancy." Others were arrested, warned to go to work and released when they agreed to do so.

Arrests to Break Strikes.

Neither Deputy Sheriff L. E. Rea of St. Francis County nor Deputy Sheriff P. D. Peacher of Crittenden County, credited with "breaking the strike" in that county, made any bones about arresting strikers as a means of fighting it.

Both told the writer such action was necessary "to break it up quick and avoid trouble." The activities of Deputy Rea were cited by the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union when it induced Federal Attorney-General Cummings to send an investigator into the field.

Rea, who learned that Sam E. Whitaker, a Chattanooga attorney, had been designated as the field man, observed to the correspondent: "I understand Sam Whitaker is coming down here to quiz me about kidnaping two Negro women. Well, I'm ready for him. In the first place it wasn't two women —it was three. In the second place, I didn't kidnap them. I wouldn't do anything illegal. Never have, in 14 years as a deputy. What I did do was to charge 'em with trespassing. They were trying to get other Negroes out on strike. Well, they are serving at the farm now."

Deals for Prisoners.

The "farm" referred to by the deputy is the Cross County plantation of Rush Conner, near Parkin, which the writer visited. Conner obtains prisoners from St. Francis County by payment of costs. He just signed the contract last week. He made a better bargain with the Cross County authorities—he only pays half the costs there.

The farm where Deputy Peacher of Crittenden County sends his prisoners is near Earle and he operates it himself on land he has leased. He agreed to permit the writer to inspect it, said that everything was nice and neat.

In effect, the landowner who leases prisoners, regulates their working hours, may punish them when he deems fit. He houses them, feeds them, provides them with necessary clothing and medical attention and hires armed guards who watch over them day and night.

Visit to a Prison Farm.

The principal prison farm in this area is the Conner plantation, in Cross County. There the owner, Rush Conner, took the writer on a tour of inspection, constantly lamented the cost of maintaining the prisoners, the necessity of occasionally buying them groceries in addition to feeding them farm produce.

"Why they get paid 75 cents a

THREE ARRAIGNED IN FLOGGING LAID TO BLACK LEGION

'Brigadier - General' of Order, Former Councilman and Steel Worker, Held on $50,000 Bond.

DETROIT PROSECUTOR SUSPENDS DETECTIVE

Hears Investigator, Brother of Dismissed Court Clerk, Took Part in Initiation Ceremonies.

By the Associated Press.

DETROIT, June 6.—A "Brigadier General" of the Black Legion and two other men were arraigned today on charges of participating in a flogging by the masked night riders, the latest to be disclosed.

Charged with kidnaping and assault in the flogging of Robert Penlan late last year, Char [illegible] former Ecorse village councilman; Howard Lawrence, a steel plant worker, and Wilbur Robinson, suspended Detroit street railways employe who admtited he was a "Brigadier General" on recruiting duty, pleaded not guilty, and were held under $50,000 bond each.

They will be given a hearing Monday with three others arraigned yesterday in the same case. The State charges Penlan was abducted, "tried" by a mob of masked men, tied to a tree and beaten for non-attendance at meetings.

Detective Suspended.

At the same time Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea announced he had suspended one of his investigators on information that the detective had taken part in Black Legion initiation ceremonies.

The investigator, N. Ray Markland, a former Mayor of suburban Highland Park, will be dismissed if the charge against him is substantiated, McCrea said.

Markland's suspension followed the dismissal of his brother, Clyde Markland, as clerk in the court of Circuit Judge James E. Chenot, who is presiding at the State's charges that the Black Legion conducted a reign of terror among factory workers and farmers in many parts of the State. Both Marklands denied any connection with the order.

Two men were arrested late today by Detroit police who said they admitted being officers in the Black Legion. The men are Andrew Martin and Ernest Martin, brothers. Detectives said Andrew told them he is the State Adjutant of the Black Legion and that Ernest said he is a Colonel. They said they joined the Legion in 1932.

While a search for "higher ups" in the Black Legion was pressed, homicide squad detectives announced they had found the "white Russian" who addressed the meeting May 12 at which the abduction of Charles A. Poole was planned.

The man gave his name as Victor Nicholas Schultz, and said that he had been invited by a fellow employe in an automobile plant to make speeches against Communism.

Identifies Prisoners.

"The next thing I knew, I was in the Black Legion," John A. Ricca, assistant prosecutor, quoted him as saying. Schultz said he had heard Harvey Davis, Black Legion officer who with 14 others is charged with the "execution" of Poole, deliver a speech accusing Poole of beating his wife.

Schultz also identified several of those held for Poole's murder as having attended the meeting, which the State charges they left in order to take Poole into the country to kill him.

Capt. Ira H. Marmon of the State Police said he was convinced that Roy Pidcock, whose body was found hanging from a rafter in a tool shed on Fighting Island near here a few hours after Poole's body was found in a roadside ditch May 13, had been beaten and killed by the Black Legion.

NOMINATES SELF IN SPEECH

Massachusetts Entry for Lieutenant-Governor Breaks Precedent.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., June 6.—State Senator Joseph A. Langone Jr., broke political precedent at the Democratic State convention today by making his own nominating speech for indorsement as the party candidate for Lieutenant-Governor.

Langone, Boston undertaker, praised his "able leadership" during four years in the State Senate. He boasted that while Republicans had laughed at him saying "that little guinea boy hasn't a chance" he upset Republican control of the Senate "for the first time in 150 years." He said he was the first man who had the "audacity and courage to oppose the thieves of State street."

NICARAGUA PRESIDENT QUITS, GOES INTO EXILE

Sacasa Forced Out by National Guard; Espinosa Declines to Take Place.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, June 6.—Juan B. Sacasa, President of Nicaragua since 1933, resigned today under pressure from the National Guard and fled into exile.

Dr. Julian Irias, Minister of Government, assumed charge of the Government immediately, officially advising Vice-President Rodolfo Espinosa—who was ill at the Mexican legation—and asking him to take over the administration in accordance with the constitution.

Espinosa declined to assume office and announced he had resigned. It is expected Irias will remain nominal head of the Government until Congress elects a president to fill out Sacasa's term, which ends Jan. 1, 1937. Presidential elections are scheduled for next November.

(Gen. Anastacio Somoza, head of the National Guard, who forced Sacasa's withdrawal two days ago announced that "from now on" the Government will act with energy and go straight to the point in all matters.)

Sacasa, who had been a virtual prisoner in his residence on Tiscapa Hill since the National Guard revolted last week, was allowed to take a train to the Port of Corinto, where he boarded the mortorship Cuzco. His destination was said to be La Libertad, El Salvador.

Somoza took over Tiscapa Hill, and its garrison, which had fought the National Guard soldiers in last week's outbreak, disbanded peacefully. Somoza claimed that the National Guard controlled the whole country.

Some political observers believed Carlos Brenes Jarquin, Deputy in Congress from Sasaya, would be chosen provisional President.

POTATOES HIGHEST IN 9 YEARS

Price in Chicago 75 cents a Peck Wholesale.

CHICAGO, June 6.—The highest potato prices in nine years were paid by merchants and housewives today. A crop shortage, largely as a result of frosts and drouth in many important producing regions, has caused potatoes to soar sharply here and in other large market centers. Top prices are equivalent to approximately 75 cents a peck wholesale.

A shortage of potatoes second only to that of 1927 was reported by the Department of Agriculture. Prices on new potatoes here were quoted up to $5 a hundred pounds on carload lots as against $1.80 a year ago. In 1927 the price went to $7.50. Old potatoes, Idaho russets, sold yesterday for $4.75 as against $1.65 a year ago and $6.25 in 1927.

BANGOR, Me., June 6.—Gov. Louis J. Brann saved a veteran angler from drowning in the Bangor salmon pool today. Brann, fishing with Charles Peavey, saw Frank Cowan tumble into the Penobscot River from a boat. The Governor and Peavey rowed 100 yards to the spot, and Brann grasped Cowan by the shoulders and hauled him over the boat's gunwale as he was sinking the second time.

By the Associated Press.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., June 6.—Striking Remington Rand workers planned mass picketing of the company's plant when it attempts to reopen Monday. The strike is in its third week.

The company announced the Syracuse and Tonawanda plants would be thrown open Monday to "loyal" workers, that $15 cash would be paid to all employes returning and that "jobs were available for able-bodied men and women." Union leaders immediately announced that $7-a-week strike benefits would be paid to all strikers, beginning Tuesday.

NEW YORK VICE SYNDICATE CASE IS GIVEN TO THE JURY

"Lucky" Luciano and Eight Others Accused in Compulsory Prostitution Trial.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The case against Charles "Lucky" Luciano and eight other accused overlords of a compulsory prostitution syndicate in New York City went to a special jury tonight.

All but three of the defendants are liable to two to 20 years on 62 counts. Thomas Pennochio, alias "Tommy the Bull," described by the State as treasurer of the vice syndicate, is liable to life on each count as a fourth offender under the State law and James Frederico and Jesse Jacobs, as second offenders, are liable to 20 to 40 years on each count.

Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook, appointed by Gov. Herbert Lehman to hear New York's rackets cases, named 1932 as the year when evidence indicated the vice ring was formed.

Of some witnesses in the trial he said: "A prostitute is at once a victim of an enticer and her life is full of lies, but I say she is not unworthy of belief merely because she is a prostitute. You must give her story the same weight as you would to a reputable person."

Thomas E. Dewey, descendant of Admiral Dewey, was the prosecutor.

FARMER PINNED UNDER TRUCK AFTER UPSET, FATALLY HURT

Leslie Howell Sr., Dies; Was Trapped for 10 Minutes Before Son Got Aid.

Leslie Howell Sr., a farmer residing near Manchester, died at his home last night of injuries suffered in the afternoon when a truck he was driiving on a road on his farm struck a rut and overturned, pinning him beneath. He was 42 years old.

Riding with him at the time was his son, Leslie Jr., 5 years old, who was thrown clear of the truck and suffered bruises of the left arm. The truck was an open top cab.

Howell remained pinned beneath the truck for about 10 minutes while the son ran to the house for help. After he was extricated he was taken to the house and a local physician was called. He had suffered a skull injury, internal injuries and lacerations of the body.

40,000 ATTEND BYRNS FUNERAL AT NASHVILLE

President, Secretary Hull, Postmaster-General Farley, Congressional Delegation There.

By the Associated Press.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 6.—Funeral services for Speaker Joseph W. Byrns were attended by 40,000 persons today among them President Roosevelt.

With the President's party was a congressional delegation of 60 Representatives and 14 Senators. Many of the Congressmen had worked with the late Speaker, who died suddenly Thursday, for most of his 27 years in the national House. Also at the services, at the War Memorial Auditorium, were Secretary of State Hull and Mrs. Hull and Postmaster-General Farley.

After the service the President started to return trip to Washington aboard his special train shortly after 4 p. m.

Three Ministers Speak.

Three ministers paid tribute to the Congressman. They were the Rev. James Shera Montgomery, House chaplain; Dr. W. F. Powell, Baptist minister of Nashville, and the Rev. Costen J. Harrell, pastor of the Methodist Church of which the Speaker was a member.

When the service, which lasted for more than an hour, drew to a close, the President followed the casket of the man he had called his "steadfast friend" to Mount Olivet Cemetery where the body was placed in a vault pending selection of a burial place.

The coffin was placed in a mausoleum during a brief service which only members of the family attended. The President left his car and stood at attention as the coffin was removed from the hearse and taken into the tomb.

Not many miles from the cemetery are the tombs of Andrew Jackson, on "Old Hickory's" homeplace, "The Hermitage," and that of James K. Polk, who is buried on the Capitol grounds.

While the funeral procession moved away from the auditorium National Guardsmen fired a 17-gun salute from nearby Capitol Hill. The military honor is the same as that for a Cabinet officer. The 75-millimeter field piece boomed out at minute intervals.

The President Arrives.

When the President arrived at the auditorium, the audience stood silently. He took his place at the front of the hall floor, at the right side of the platform, to stand with them while the casket was carried in.

From the station to the auditorium the Chief Executive rode in a funeral procession led by a military band playing Chopin's "Funeral March."

There followed National Guard units of infantry and cavalry, pallbearers, the President's party, the congressional delegation and Ten-

BLUM WINS CONFIDENCE VOTE ON HIS PROGRAM

French Chamber Tally Is 384 to 210 After Rightist's Racial Taunt of Socialist Premier Causes Dramatic Uproar.

FORTY-HOUR WEEK AMONG PROPOSALS

Stirring Day Marked by Increase in Ranks of Strikers to Almost a Million and Picket and Student Fighting.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, June 6.—The French Chamber of Deputies tonight voted its confidence in the efforts of Premier Leon Blum's Leftist Government to meet the nation's pressing problems. The vote was 384 to 210. Blum's social and economic program embraces the major demands of almost 1,000,000 strikers.

In an uproarious scene of a dramatic session, the Socialist Premier, at one point, had walked out of the Chamber when taunted from the Right with being a Jew.

Husky sergeants-at-arm kept Rightist and Leftist Deputies from fighting while the Premier's foes shouted "Jew!" and "Back to Moscow!" After Blum strode out, the tumultuous Chamber was suspended, but he came back soon to serve notice that there would be no devaluation of the franc and that he would not order the army or the police to evacuate factories held by striking men and women.

Late at night, after the tumult had died down, the Deputies gave Blum the vote of confidence, on a motion that the Government would carry out the program of the People's Front "as rapidly as possible," and particularly approving its efforts to settle the strikes.

Guards Drive Off Strikers.

While Blum was addressing the Chamber, pickets, besieging the plant of the afternoon newspaper, Paris Soir, struggled with Republican guards, who rescued a taxicab driver running newspapers from the beleaguered paper. Flying a red flag, a truck, from a concern which delivers virtually all Paris newspapers, stopped the taxcab loaded with newspapers by crashing into it near the Paris Soir plant.

Republican guards drove off the strikers who had manhandled the taxidriver and destroyed the papers. But the fighting was resumed when the guards tried to pull the truck driver from his seat. Guard reinforcements rushed up and again drove off the strikers. Later the strike committee called off its men.

Similar troubles were reported outside the plant of the newspaper Instransigeant, and the strike committee then withheld wine from the workers to prevent disorders.

Two hundred Nationalist students, shouting "France for the French!" clashed with police in the Latin Quarter. A dozen were arrested and the others dispersed. Fist fighting was reported on the Marseille docks.

On another front, employers gave their first flat refusal to meet workers' demands. The United Employers' Association of the Lille textile industry announced it would give "no raises of salary and in no case will take the initiative to reduce working hours or give paid vacations."

Refusal to Be Blocked.

The stirring day began with Blum's announcement of a far-reaching social and economic policy, his request for a vote of confidence for his program and his warning that the Left would refuse to be blocked in its fight for social reform. His plan proposed bills to give the strikers the 40-hour week and to meet other demands.

The Premier declared the occupation of hundreds of factories by the "folded arms" strikers was regrettable, but said such occupation is less dangerous than fighting in the streets around the factories." Employers, he added, had not asked that force be used to evacuate the plants.

Louis Marin, Rightist leader of the Chamber, charged the Left with responsibility for "great fears for the provisioning of Paris" as a result of the strikes. He contended hospitals had been deprived of necessaries and doctors were without gasoline to run their automobiles. Deputy Joseph Denais alleged one big Paris hospital had been unable

CURTIS WANTS SOLID MISSOURI VOTE FOR LANDON

He Thinks It Would Be Good Politics to Unite State's Delegation for Kansan on First Ballot.

TWO OUT OF 30 IN FAVOR OF KNOX

In Fight for Committee Woman, Mrs. John Wyeth Seems to Be in Advantageous Position.

By CURTIS A. BETTS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., June 6.—National Committeeman Arthur M. Curtis of Springfield, originally friendly to the candidacy of Frank Knox of Chicago for Republican nomination for President, today undertook to influence the Missouri delegation to cast its entire 30 votes for Gov. Landon of Kansas on the first ballot. Twenty-eight of the votes are virtually certain and only the two from the Eleventh (St. Louis) District remain to be brought into line.

The feeling is so strong that Landon is to be the nominee that Curtis and other Missouri leaders are convinced that good practical politics requires that there be no division in the delegation.

If Landon should not be nominated on the first or the second ballot, they believe his chances will be ended and that the Missouri votes could then be handled in whatever way seemed advisable.

Change in Two Months.

The Eleventh District convention was the only one in Missouri which the Knox leaders were able to control in the selection of delegates, and there the Landon forces were routed. However, since the district delegates were chosen nearly two months ago, the Landon strength has increased so rapidly there now appears to the local party leaders little reason for holding out two delegates.

The four delegates-at-large from Missouri are instructed to vote for Landon as are 16 district delegates. Six more district delegates are from districts which adopted resolutions favoring Landon, but which did not issue instructions to the delegates.

The two uninstructed delegates from the tenth district, Rush H. Limbaugh of Cape Girardeau and Charles E. Prather of Advance, announced several days ago their intention to support Landon, which leaves only the two eleventh district delegates, Frederick Stueck and Harry R. Bracy, to be brought into line.

Not many of the Missouri delegates had arrived tonight, but Curtis talked to several who are here, and the opinion was that Missouri should have its feet on the Landon bandwagon when the balloting begins but always be ready to leap to another wagon if it should appear that Landon could not win.

Fight For Woman's Post.

The delegation will meet Monday to elect the National Committeeman and Committeewoman. Curtis is unopposed for re-election, but a lively fight has developed over the position of committeewoman.

While there are five candidates, Mrs. John Wyeth of St. Joseph, former vice chairman of the Republican State Committee, seems to be in the most advantageous position. Though there is no open support of Mrs. Wyeth by the Landon organization in the state, it is generally known that many of the more active men in the Landon group favor her candidacy.

William F. Phares of Maryville, former chairman of the State Committee and Landon's Missouri manager, has been active in her behalf and the Kansas City delegates, who are solidly for Landon, are supporting her. It is not unlikely that several ballots will be required for election, as each of the other four candidates has some support. Mrs. Victor Renley of Liberty has been making the most active campaign for the place. She is vice chairman of the State Committee and is from the Third Congressional District, in which Mrs. Wyeth also resides. Mrs. Wyeth captured the delegation from the district in a contest in the district convention.

Others in Race.

Mrs. Lon O. Hocker of St. Louis, former National Committee Woman, is said to have the support of four delegates from St. Louis and Miss Cleta Smith of St. Louis to have the support of two delegates.

Mrs. Gladys Stewart of Ava, has the support of the two delegates from the seventh district, but it is expected they will go to Mrs. Wyeth after the first ballot.

A. L. Shapleigh of St. Louis probably will be chairman of the delegation and the State's member of the platform committee probably will be Herman Langworthy of Kansas City.

Maxim Gorky Slightly Better.

BLUM WINS VOTE OF CONFIDENCE AFTER UPROAR IN CHAMBER to procure oxygen. Marin said the Government must lift sanctions against Italy as "the last chance to avoid war."

Starting the Uproar.

Xavier Vallat, the Rightist, started the Chamber uproar by shouting: "It is the first time that a Gallic-Roman country has been governed by a Jew!" But, shortly afterward Blum walked out amid shouts, jeers and desk banging and Edouard Herriot, Chamber president, suspended the session. Blum returned with the declaration that "the people's front is and will remain hostile to devaluation—don't expect either monetary manipulations or devaluation from us."

The violent personal attack on the soft-spoken Premier caused some Deputies, in Chamber lobbies, to express fear the incident might grow into a general anti-Jewish movement. Vallat, the attacker, had declared: "I am saying out loud what everybody is thinking."

The Premier's Program.

Blum, appearing first before the Chamber, had declared he sought to revive French economy, to wipe out unemployment, to increase purchasing power and to provide a little well-being and security for those, who, by their labor, create the real wealth."

He announced as his foreign policy peace for all Europe through collective security. At the same time, he decreed co-ordination of France's national defenses under former Premier Edouard Daladier.

Then he asserted he would introduce bills to provide for political amnesty (demanded particularly by Communists), a 40-hour week for labor, collective labor contracts, paid vacations, a new public works plan, including scientific laboratories, sports facilities and tourist attractions; nationalization of the armaments industry; higher prices for farm products through the creation of boards, and longer compulsory education.

Bank of France Revision.

Blum also promised to seek legislation for revision of Bank of France statutes "guaranteeing a preponderance of national interests in its management" and a revision of decree laws to relieve Government jobholders and war veterans whose pay and pensions have been cut.

His longer range program, he asserted, would embrace provisions for a national unemployment fund or dole and revised old age pension system, for farm debt and crop-loss relief and for "soak-the-rich" tax reforms.

Blum made no mention of war debts.

The Premier, in saying tax reforms to increase levies on the wealthy would follow, described his plan as "a broad system of tax simplification and lightening, relieving producers and business, asking new resources only from acquired wealth, repression of tax evasions, and, above all, general recovery and (economic) activity."

He then announced his peace policy was based on the League of Nations, organization for collective security, and hope for an arms limitation treaty. "The country's will is evident," he said. "It wants peace. It wants it unanimously. It wants it indivisible with all the nations of the world and for all the nations of the world.

"It identifies peace with respect for international law and contracts and with fidelity for engagements made and words given.

Hope for Collective Security.

"It ardently hopes for the organization of collective security to permit the stopping of the wild armaments competitions into which all Europe is being led and, on the contrary, to lead to its logical corollary, which is an international understanding for publicity, progressive reduction and effective check on national armaments."

Blum told the Chamber he would ward off any "attack on democratic institutions"—meaning an attempted dictatorship—"with a force in proportion to the threats or the resistance."

He promised to publish within a few days "the first balance sheet of the economic and financial situation." He said:

"The Government is not fooling itself on either the nature or the seriousness of the difficulties awaiting it. It does not intend to hide them from the country any more than from itself."

He gave warning against obstructionist tactics and suggested the Chamber would "understand how perilous it would be to disappoint the eager hope of the entire nation for relief, chance and renewal."

An Unbalanced Budget.

Frenzied cheers of the Leftist majority drowned out the first objections from the Right in the Chamber to Blum's program. Then Vallat, a leader of the Croix de Feu, militant Nationalist formation, cried, "Jew!" Blum's Cabinet cheered.

Jean Chiappe, former prefect of police, who lost that post because police fired on mobs during the rioting of February, 1934, joined in the tumult directed against Blum. Vallat charged the Premier had "entirely surrounded himself by Jews,' and attacked Blum's political prophecies, including one of 1932 that Adolf Hitler never would rule Germany.

Herriot told Vallat: "You have pronounced inadmissible words!"

Communist deputies, led by a huge former coal miner, started for the Rightist benches. A flying wedge of sergeants-at-arms intercepted them.

Blum, after walking out and returning, declared he would refuse aid to "certain leagues," apparently meaning the Croix de Feu, "who would like to take our role as arbitrators."

He also intimated the Government was resigned to the prospect of an unbalanced budget, demanding: "Is there any man who would say we must establish a rigorous equilibrium between spending and receipts?"

Blum, in demanding the vote of confidence, warned the Deputies of "grave consequences" if the new program were delayed, but said his government would not demand "full powers," as did Premier Pierre Laval. Instead, he explained, the cabinet would ask for an "extension of constitutional powers" and would take no steps "without the explicit permission of Parliament."

Rightist Deputies and Conservative Senators insisted tonight they could see grave dangers of "national bankruptcy" in the new program. Paul Reynaud, leading advocate of devaluation, warned Blum: "If you carry out your program you will double the inflation before the end of the year and the working class will be the first victim." There must be devaluation, Reynaud declared, if France is to "avoid a catastrophe."

Blum ousted Jean Tannery, veteran head of the Bank of France, and placed Emile Labeyre, attorney of the Tribunal of Accounts, in the governorship.

Replacement of the Bank of France governor, came on the heels of allegations by financial leaders that the bank already had started the printing presses to keep the Treasury in funds. It was estimated that more than 2,000,000,000 francs ($132,000,000) in gold had left the bank in the last week in a steady stream abroad. Finance Minister Vincent Auriol announced the appointment of Labeyre "must not be considered a change in the Government's position regarding currency."

Industrialist Opposition.

Bitter opposition is in store for the 40-hour work week which Blum would give the workers. Leftist strikers have urged that the Government insist the reduction of hours be accompanied by increases in pay, not only on an hourly basis, but in the total amount received by each worker each month.

Opponents of the plan contend it would place a terrific burden of higher prices on the public and be disastrous to foreign trade. They say French goods, already at a disadvantage in many foreign markets because of currency differences, would have to compete with the goods of countries having no such restrictions as to working hours.

The National Economic Council, a semi-official industrialists' organization, has declared that, while the plan is a praise-worthy reform in principle, it cannot be put into effect without injuring French industry—unless there is an international agreement for other countries to do the same thing. This council has estimated the 40-hour week, applied to public works alone (which in France include the railroads), would place an additional tax burden of 1,000,000,000 francs (about $66,000,000) annually upon the public.

C. S. Gignoux, editor of a leading industrial publication, La Journee Industrielle, has suggested a compromise plan by the industrialists. "The 40-hour week is neither the Panacea it is made out to be by some, nor the horror it is made out to be by others," said Gignoux. "While some industries, already badly pinched, cannot support it, it might be effected in others in which the cost of labor affects prices to a lesser extent."

The Strike Situation.

New features of the strike situation tonight included a police announcement they would make no arrests of strikers unless blood was spilled.

Deputy Charles Baron announced the American oil companies had authorized a 10 per cent wage increase in their French refineries—an action expected to avert a gasoline shortage.

The Government filed charges of spreading false news against the Royalist newspaper Action Francaise. The paper had announced the Paris transportation system would be tied up by the strike.

Authorities also announced they were starting action against a private radio station which reported a supposed strike movement in one of the country's largest banks.

An unofficial count showed 135,000 additional strikers joined the movement today in Paris and the provinces.

A walkout of sleeping car employes sent tourists to coaches in several railroad centers.

Workers joined the strike ranks in Versailles, St. Germain, Meudon, St. Cloud and in other Paris suburbs.

In the vicinity of Rouen more than 12,000 workers went on strike. At Arras, in the north, the strike affected the coal mines. A few plants in and around Paris settled strikes this morning but at least 60 others were added to the striking list.

Steel mills, synthetic gasoline plants, chemical factories, dye works, and power plants joined the movement in the north in a series of towns and cities.

LANDON 'SAGACIOUS BUT NO COOLIDGE'

William Allen White Says Kansan, a "Grinner," Has No Blowholes in Character.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Governor Alf Landon of Kansas was praised tonight by William Allen White, Emporia, Kan., publisher, as "straight, loyal, more than ordinarily intelligent."

In an address broadcast from Cleveland and transcribed here, the Kansas editor said of the Republican contender for the presidential nomination:

"I do not know whether he would make a good President or not; neither does he. No man does. He has no blow-holes in his character. . . .

"As a politican he runs with his pack, but he is a leader of the pack. He always has been alive with the progressive facts in Kansas. He has never flirted with his opponents, nor fought them for the fun of it. He has probably plenty of faults that I do not see but he does not lie to his friends nor deceive his enemies. He says 'No' much more easily than he says 'Yes.' . . . He is not a backslapper. . . . He is a grinner and a giggler. . .

"He has made a decent fortune, perhaps half a million or less; probably less.

"He is as sagacious politically as Coolidge but there the resemblance stops. He is no Kansas Coolidge."

White also praised Mrs. Landon as a "good housekeeper," adding: "She knows what is going on but tries to hide it. She submerges herself. She is not unlike Mrs. Coolidge or Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt."

BORAH AGAINST PLANK FOR GOLD STANDARD

To Return to It, He Says, Would Thoroughly Injure Agriculture Interests of Country.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Senator Borah, Idaho candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination, spoke out strongly today against adoption of a platform plank calling for return to the gold standard.

Preparing to leave for Cleveland tomorrow night, the Idaho Senator issued a statement today saying that a return to the gold standard would injure the agricultural interests.

Asserting that one of the platform issues most interesting to him was opposition to a declaration for returning to the gold standard, Borah said:

"I do not believe in a declaration in favor of return to the gold standard. It would not only be politically unsound, and I believe unwise, but unsound as a monetary proposition.

"We could do nothing which would more thoroughly injure the agricultural interests of the country than return to the gold standard.

"The 21 governments of Europe which have abandoned the gold standard have reduced unemployment to a minimum; six have wiped out their deficit, and all are on the road to recovery.

"This is another instance in which we may return to the Constitution, about which much will be said at Cleveland.

"The Constitution says Congress may regulate the value of money. The men who framed the Constitution would have been astounded to hear some one say private interests should regulate the value of money."

HAILE SELASSIE'S RECEPTION

Many Officials at London Function but Others Send Regrets.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 6.—Emperor Haile Selassie held a reception in exile today, but numerous important diplomats and British Government officials sent their regrets.

Present were the Ambassadors of Argentina and China, the Ministers of Finland, Iran, Nepal, Iraq, Cuba and Uruguay and the Charges d'Affaires of Japan, Paraguay, Colombia and Egypt. Others present were: Former Premier David Lloyd George, Viscount Cranborne, Parliamentary Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs; Commander Evangeline Booth of the Salvation Army, Sylvia Pankhurst and the deans of St. Paul's and Westminster.

WALTER E. ZIEGENHEIN IS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

Companion's Weapon Fired After Jamming; Shooting at Target at Lake of Ozarks.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 6.—Walter E. Ziegenhein, 33 years old, 7027 Gravois avenue, vice-president of John L. Ziegenhein & Sons, Inc., St. Louis undertaking establishment, was gravely wounded today when struck by a bullet while he and friends were shooting at a target on the Lake of the Ozarks in Camden County.

Examination at a Jefferson City hospital showed the bullet had passed through the right lung and was lodged in the left lung near the heart.

Clifford Kempe, 3161 Oregon avenue, St. Louis, told Jefferson City police Ziegenhein was struck when Kempe's pistol was accidentally discharged after having jammed. The bullet glanced from a boat in which they were riding and hit Ziegenhein, Kempe said.

Gus Kurth of the Oregon avenue address also was a member of the party.

G. O. P. COMMAND CONSIDERS PLANK FOR AMENDMENT and children by the "over-reaching of inefficient, harsh or ignorant employers," described by Chief Justice Hughes in his dissenting opinion.

The "states' rights" argument is that if the Cleveland convention approves the amendment, the Republicans can claim to be supported by the opinion of Chief Justice Hughes and the late Justice Holmes and can logically ask Roosevelt to tell the country, how, in the face of the adverse decisions by the Supreme Court on his national program, he intends to carry out the promises of his first campaign.

William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette, the Kansas member of the powerful resolutions or platform committee, sounded the amendment key note in an editorial this week. The editorial was in part as follows:

"No other agency than Government can bring justice into the relations of those who work with the machines and those who own the machines. The Supreme Court has honestly, even if tragically, called our attention to the need of a power in government which now obviously is restricted. That need is the issue of the hour. The Republican convention must not sidetrack it.

"Our party did not dodge the Dred Scott decision. It must not blink this. The Republican party must not let the Democrats fire the first shot in a new battle for human freedom."

Shift in Sentiment.

Before White arrived here Thursday night, there was talk that this editorial might cost him a place on the resolutions committee. At that time the advance guard here had not realized the import of the decision of Monday. Within 24 hours, however, sentiment for a constitutional amendment developed sufficiently to permit his election to the place by the Kansas delegation.

Additional support for an amendment is expected tomorrow night when Senator Borah of Idaho arrives as an interested observer at the convention. Borah is neither delegate nor alternate and will not have the privilege of the floor or platform unless the convention votes him an invitation, which is unlikely. His opponents, however, cannot take him out of the newspapers and he is expected to state his position on a constitutional amendment and on Gov. Landon. His New York campaign manager, Representative Hamilton Fish, has already declared for an amendment and his other leaders have indicated that they expect him to come out for a "states' rights" amendment.

On the platform in general, the Republican leaders now are hoping to be able to keep it to less than 1500 words. In addition, however, there may be a series of denunciatory resolutions attacking the New Deal.

Hoover to Address Convention Wednesday Night.

By the Associated Press.

The convention order of business, published today, disclosed that former President Herbert Hoover's address had been set for shortly after 8 p. m., Wednesday. It will be broadcast over a national hookup (shortly after 7 o'clock, St. Louis time).

The address is expected to be confined to campaign issues. When Hoover finishes, the platform committee is scheduled to bring in its report.

The convention is to be called to order at 11 a. m. Tuesday.

Senator Vandenberg of Michigan announced today he would not accept second place on the ticket. Vandenberg is a candidate for nomination for President.

A statement by John D. M. Hamilton, spokesman for Landon, that 400 votes on the first ballot had been pledged to the Kansan, drew from Edward Hayes, chairman of the Knox-for-President Committee, a declaration that the Republicans could not carry Illinois. "If we have to start off every speech by apologizing for the fact that our candidate has supported the New Deal."

Hayes said Knox might get as many as 261 votes on the first ballot and still more on later ballots.

GREEN TELLS LEWIS HE CAN QUIT A. F. L.

Hot Exchange of Letters by Leaders in Craft-Industrial Union Dispute.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—John L. Lewis, leader of the United Mine Workers, and William Green, president of American Federation of Labor engaged in a bitter exchange of letters today in the industrial and craft union fight.

The miners under Lewis are seeking to organize labor by big industrial unions, a program opposed by Green, leader of those favoring craft unions.

Giving Lewis the choice of remaining with or quitting the Federation, Green flatly rejected Lewis' invitation to "return to the union that suckled you." He ignored Lewis' warning that "self-destruction" awaited him if he persisted in plans for ousting ten big unions from the Federation.

Adressing Lewis as "Dear Sir and Brother," Green issued this ultimatum: "If you persist in your determination to divide the forces of labor, I will still continue to protect and preserve our common heritage, the American Federation of Labor. You, alone, can determine whether you will remain with or leave the American Federation of Labor."

Asserting Lewis had made it "impossible" for the Federation to "unite and solidify" its forces in a campaign to organize the steel industry.

Reminding Lewis the Federation had "created" the United Mine Workers, Green said it also had "saved" the mine organization in 1927 with a contribution of more than $500,000. It was in 1927 the so-called Jacksonville wage agreement of the minters broke down and many mines went on a non-union basis.

In his letter to "Dear Bill," Lewis said the U. M. W. had declared itself "for a definite policy" and that "it calls upon its loyal sons for support of that policy."

Engineers Refuse to Amalgamate With Firemen and Enginemen.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, O., June 6.—Delegates to the Triennial Convention of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers voted unanimously today to refuse amalgamation with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen. Committees representing both groups carried on negotiations from July, 1933, to July, 1935, when D. R. Robertson, president of the Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, withdrew his committee.

The Grand International Auxiliary, composed of wives and widows of locomotive engineers, installed officers, all of whom were re-elected. Mrs. Ella D. Turner of St. Louis, Grand President, has three more years to serve.

NOLTE ADVOCATES CIVIC COMMITTEE TO PLAN RELIEF

Comptroller Wants Steps Taken at Once to Have Program Ready for Fall and Winter.

RECALLS SUCCESS OF CITIZEN GROUPS

Calls Bond Issues for Purpose Unsound — Says State Must Accept Its Responsibility.

Appointment of a large representative committee of citizens at once to work out a program for dealing with the relief problem with which St. Louis will be confronted next fall and winter was urged by Comptroller Nolte yesterday.

Nolte, in a statement issued from his office in the City Hall, recalled the work of the original Citizens' Committee on Relief and Employment, the Crisis Committee and the Committee of 71 which proposed the first relief bond issue in 1932. The excellent work of these committees, he said, evolved the plans which have been used so far in dealing with the relief problem.

He suggested that to get the full force of the community behind the necessary program the large representative committee should be named by the presidents of United Charities, Inc., Jewish Federation, Catholic Charities, Community Fund, St. Louis University, Washington University, Chamber of Commerce and the Church Federation.

Should Start at Once.

"Work on a legislative program, to be ready when the State Legislature meets in January, should be undertaken by the committee at once," Nolte said. "The committee should see to it that the State of Missouri recognizes and accepts its responsibility for solving the problems of relief and unemployment.

"In working out a plan of action this large committee should keep in mind the superior taxing powers of the State and Federal governments; that it is unsound to continue issuing bonds for relief purposes; that unless our collection experience improves we are confronted with a large deficit at the end of the fiscal year which makes the support of relief from municipal revenue a serious problem; the large amount of delinquent taxes due the city of St. Louis; and the fact that private drives for relief will again be necessary to supply resources necessary for adequate relief needs.

"Under our form of government the people will contribute, whether through taxation or private drives, only such amounts for relief as they think justified by the real need based on facts properly presented. A large committee of interested citizens is as essential now as it was at the beginning of the depression. It is only by co-operation of such a committee with city officials that St. Louis can take its place with other communities in solving the relief problem in an orderly and effective way."

$9,118,7000 for Relief.

Since 1930, Nolte recalled, the city has appropriated $9,118,700 for relief of which $1,525,000 came from general municipal revenue, the rest from the two bond issue funds, one of $4,600,000, the other of $3,600,000. After allowing for the $738,000 appropriation made last week for June, July, August, and September, Nolte said, there will be $606,296 remaining in the relief bond issue fund.

"Certain groups and individuals, some of them not even residents of St. Louis," he added, "are now criticising what St. Louis has done and is doing when, as a matter of fact, this city has as good a record in handling relief as any city in the United States."

Nolte enumerated some of "the more serious errors in policy" which have left the relief problem still pretty much muddled after six years of depression.

He mentioned the refusal of the Federal and State governments to recognize the necessity for long rang planning, and their tendency to "play poker" with local communities, which resulted in inequitable distribution of Federal relief money among cities.

"Most Costly Error of All."

The insistence of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, no longer in existence, on reorganizing local relief agencies as units of the FERA was another error, Nolte said. He referred, too, to the "scrapping" of the FERA and the substitution of WPA, which he said was the "most costly error of all."

Constantly changing policies of the Federal and State governments, and the failure of the State government in Missouri to accept the full measure of its responsibility have made the situation particularly difficult, Nolte said.

"The WPA coined the words 'employables' and 'unemployables' and pledged the WPA to take care of the 'employables'," Nolte added, "but the WPA repeatedly has refused to give a working definition of the words. As a result, all those on relief not absorbed by WPA are classed as 'unemployables' in spite of the fact that a large number are 'employables' according to accepted personnel standards."

CONVICT LEASING HELPS CRUSH STRIKE OF COTTON CHOPPERS

day regardless of whether they work or not," Conner said, oblivious of the fact that the prisoners don't actually receive a cent. "Even on rainy days and Sundays. And some of them are always getting sick. Of course, if they get too sick, so sick they are worthless, we just turn 'em loose.

"Costs a lot to feed them, too, even with what we raise on the place. They get three good meals a day. And I have to hire three guards, that costs $35 or $40 a month apiece and board."

Working Under Armed Guard.

As the landowner conversed he drove slowly over the plantation, close to a big cotton field, where some of the prisoners were working. Steadily they "chopped cotton," a guard standing over them with a rifle, a revolver strapped to his side. In another field free laborers were working to whom Conner paid the prevailing wage of 75 cents a day.

Another guard appeared on horseback. A revolver was slung at his hip and a rifle was carried in a saddle holster.

"Some prisoners just naturally try to run away," Conner said. "Then we have to catch them. That makes us a lot of trouble. And others don't seem to take an interest in their work. They ought to be glad of the chance to be outdoors."

Prisoners who are recaptured, he continued, are whipped, and others are "strapped if they need it." But he emphasized that there was "nothing inhumane about it," explaining that "we don't beat them like they do in Florida and Georgia and other places."

Hours From Dawn to Dusk.

The prisoners work in the fields from dawn to dusk, starting hoeing at this season as soon as it is light enough to see and quitting at sunset. In winter they cut wood, clear out underbrush, do other chores around the place. On the day the writer visited the farm there were 28 prisoners, including the strikers mentioned by Deputy Rea. There were 18 Negro men, six white men and four Negro women. One of the women was pressed into service as a cook at the "barracks," another aided her. The other two worked in the fields.

Conner remarked with satisfaction that the prisoner was a good cook, chuckling as he observed that she was "a college graduate." Some times, he said, it was necessary to hire a cook so he was always glad when a cook appeared among the prisoners entrusted to his care. The place where the prisoners are confined consists of a rough, unpainted board shack resembling a tenant house on the edge of a field bordering a branch of the St. Francis River.

Crude iron bars are nailed across the windows. The inside is divided into three sections, separated by timber grill work and padlocked doors. One side is for white men, the other for Negroes. Women prisoners are kept in a loft upstairs.

Chains in Bunk House.

The bunks, arranged in tiers, jammed together, are nothing but crude wooden shelves covered with thin ticking. Chains are on the floor, but are seldom used, Conner said, "unless we get a regular outlaw."

In the rear is a small, narrow room which serves as a mess room and kitchen. When the writer inspected it two days ago, hundreds of flies buzzed over aluminum plates, laid out for the evening meal. The quarters looked cramped but last year 47 prisoners, the "top" to date, were confined there.

Prisoners, Conner said, are fed beans, potatoes, other vegetables, rice, coffee and meat—usually "sow belly." It has been found they work better on a "steady diet." As we were about to leave the quarters, Conner caught sight of a Negro prisoner lying in one of the bunks.

Peering through the bars, the farm owner asked if he was sick. The prisoner replied feebly that he had "the shivers," just "kept on shivering."

Going outside, Conner called the cook, asked if the Negro had been given any medicine.

"Just some salts," the woman reported.

"That's good," the plantation owner replied, "that's what he needs."

The Prisoner Who Came Back.

On the drive back through the farm Conner delivered a long exposition on the care and feeding of prisoners, asserted the farm was "better than a jail," told of a Negro who "liked it so well he came back."

It developed that this man became ill, offered to serve out the remainder of his time later if he could go to a Memphis clinic and be cured.

"He wasn't any use to us," related Conner, an elderly man in shirt sleeves and suspenders, with close cropped gray hair, "so we turned him loose. But I'll be dogged if he didn't come back. Yes, sir, there he was one day on the back porch big as life. We had heard he was dead."

Many prisoners, Conner said, are "repeaters," some becoming trusties. Telling of life on the farm, Conner observed: "It's not as bad as its painted by lots of folks who have never seen it. Of course, it ain't exactly what you would call a summer resort."

Use of System Limited.

Such farms as have been mentioned, part of the background of the strike area, are not general throughout the State. Some counties maintain their own farms, raising produce for public institutions and may use prisoners from other counties. Still other counties do not employ the farm system.

Attorney-General Carl Bailey of Little Rock, who discussed the penal system with the writer several months ago, asserted that under the State's "pay as you go plan"—prohibiting counties from making commitments in anticipation of revenue—the poorer counties were unable to maintain prisoners in jails and were forced to resort to the leasing system.

U. S. Investigator Asked to Look Into Union Leader's Case.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Attorney-General Cummings was asked today to direct an investigation of disturbances at Forrest City, Ark., where M. V. Moody, attorney for the Southern Tenant Farmers' Union, on strike for higher wages in the cotton fields, was attacked Friday. The appeal was sent by Gardner Jackson, chairman of the National Committee on Rural Social Planning, a group including several members of Congress which is backing the sharecroppers' strike. A special assistant to the Attorney-General, Sam Whitaker, was sent to Arkansas to investigate reports of peonage. Jackson asked Cummings to direct Whitaker to investigate incidents of Friday, growing out of the trial of David M. Benson, a union organizer, immediately and make public a report on the situation existing in and aaround Forrest City.

WHAT DID IT PROFIT YOU OR US? PARK ASKS WAR VETERANS

Governor Addresses Convention of Missouri D. A. V. at Sedalia; Appeals for Peace.

By the Associated Press.

SEDALIA, Mo., June 6.—Speaking before the convention of Missouri Disabled American Veterans, Gov. Guy B. Park today expressed "a wish and prayer that no boy now being reared in the United States shall engage in war at any future time."

"You men are living examples of the horror of war," Park told the veterans, "and what did it profit you, or us? Patriotism, of course, but after 18 years, what is the condition of this and other countries? What has been the benefit to civilization?"

He said the best guarantee of peace was preparedness.

Convention sessions will continue tomorrow. Other speakers today included Dr. Robert C. Cook, medical director of the Veterans' Administration hospital at Excelsior Springs; Edward J. Wieland, manager of the Veterans' Administration hospital at Jefferson Barracks, and D. S. Lamm, Sedalia.

nessee friends of the speaker and his family.

For about 20 minutes after entering the auditorium, the Chief Executive and audience remained standing, facing the platform where 400 wreaths in many designs were displayed against a background of black and white bunting.

Escort for Coffin.

The Rev. Mr. Marrell led the procession with the coffin into the hall. From the Scriptures he read a funeral service, "The Lord gave and the Lord hath taken away, blessed be the name of the Lord . . . "

Behind him came Dr. Powell and the Rev. Mr. Montgomery. There followed the pallbearers and after them the coffin. Behind the casket walked a guard of honor of two guardsmen who during the service stood one at each end of it.

In slow procession then came the congressional escort, led by Tennessee's two Senate members, Kenneth D. McKellar and Nathan L. Bachman. Afterward came friends and associates. Among them was Norman H. Davis, Tennessean who is United States' Ambassador-at-Large.

A quartet sang, "Crossing the Bar," one of two hymns which Mrs. Byrns told those in charge of the music were the Speaker's favorites.

Outside the auditorium thousands who had been unable to get into the hall heard the service over loudspeakers.

MAN AND WIFE WILL RECEIVE M. D. DEGREES

Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Rector to Be Graduated Together From Washington U.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Edwin Rector, 23 South Taylor avenue, will be graduated as physicians Tuesday from the Washington University School of Medicine. Another married pair and a mother and her daughter also will receive degrees at the commencement exercises.

Mr. and Mrs. Rector, who came here from Seattle when they entered the medical school, have been married for four years. They became acquainted when they were pre-medical students at the University of Washington.

Next year she expects to be an interne at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, while her husband will be at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Boston. Both expect to go into private practice ultimately, but do not expect to have offices together because she will specialize in pediatrics while he will specialize in pathology.

Rector, 34; Wife, 27.

Rector is 34 years old, his wife, 27. He worked as an instructor in cytology while attending school and his wife did research work in the same field and in pediatrics. "But we often had to borrow money to get through," Rector added.

During the four years, they were always in the same classes and helped each other. Their grades usually were about the same, never varying more than a point or two in any subject, Mrs. Rector remarked. Before entering medical training, Rector was a general science teacher in an Olympic (Wash.) high school.

The mother and daughter who are graduating are Mrs. Maud Gillespie Harris and Miss Josephine Marie Harris of 120 East Adams avenue, Kirkwood. Mrs. Harris will receive the degree of bachelor of science in education. Her daughter will get a doctorate in Latin and Greek.

Mrs. Harris Is Teacher.

Mrs. Harris, who teaches sixth-grade classes in the Adams School, Kirkwood, already had taken some college work when she began attending classes during the summer and at nights at Washington University. In all, she spent six summers at the university.

Her daughter, who intends to teach also, took subjects in fields which never brought them together in the classroom. However, there were times, Mrs. Harris said, when they were able to help each other with school assignments. R. C. Harris, husband and father of the graduates, is a lumber dealer. Another daughter, Miss Elizabeth Harris, holds a master's degree.

The second married pair are Mr. and Mrs. Jack Eugene Morris, who will receive degrees of master of arts in education. He is a teacher at Central Elementary School, Ferguson. He received his bachelor's degree from Central College, Fayette, Mo., his wife from Illinois College, Jacksonville.

Three young women will graduate from the School of Law. They are: Miss Susan Harding Beckwith, 5730 Maple avenue; Miss Agnes Eilers, 1616 North Kingshighway, and Miss Mildred Margulis, 6412 Enright avenue.

CLEVELAND, June 6.—Police hunted tonight for a supposed fiend thought to be responsible for the beheading of three men. Two schoolboys discovered the head of an unidentified young man in an isolated gully, and the body was found later in a nearby shallow grave.

The bodies of Edward Andrassy, 28 years old, and an unidentified middle-aged man, both decapitated, were discovered in a ravine in the same vicinity last fall. The latest victim had been dead not more than 48 hours.

WARDEN PUNISHES CONVICT ACQUITTED OF KILLING LOEB

Demotes James Day to Lowest Grade and Sends Him to Solitary Confinement.

JOLIET, Ill., June 6. — Warden Joseph Ragen of Stateville Penitentiary disclosed today that James Day, 21-year-old convict acquitted Thursday of the murder of Richard Loeb, would receive punishment in prison for the killing.

Warden Ragen demoted Day from Grade A Convict, the highest, to Grade E., the lowest, and ordered him into solitary confinement for 21 days.

"Day violated prison regulations," Ragen said. "He killed a man. There is a difference between the law courts and prison punishment."

For the three weeks, Day will have bread and water only once a day, with one full prison meal once every five days, no exercise periods and no companionship. He has been in solitary confinement since January 29, the day after killing of Loeb, but has received full prison fare and a brief exercise period each noon.

As a Grade E prisoner, Day loses the privileges of writing once a week, attending shows and ball games, Ragen says, and it will take Day at least 26 months to work himself back to the Grade A class.

TAX BILL FIGHT IS TRANSFERRED TO CONFERENCE

Eight Senate Conferees Designated to Give Room for Those Favoring Roosevelt's Idea.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—With the fight over the tax bill transferred to the Senate-House conference, Congress still has legislative odds and ends to finish before adjournment.

Leaders viewed as unlikely passage of any additional major legislation.

They expect to obtain action on five big bills now in conference, or on which conferees have agreed, dispose of some secondary measures, then wind up the Congressional session shortly after June 15.

In a rare Saturday meeting, the Senate acted on a series of bills, mostly minor, then began marking time with the House until Monday, when both chambers will recess for a week.

One of the more important measures approved and sent to the House would reduce large benefit payments to farmers under the new farm program.

The funeral of Speaker Byrns Nashville and the departure of Republicans for the Cleveland Convention left comparatively few members of Congress in Washington.

During the recess over the convention period, conferees of the tax bill and the deficiency-relief, District of Columbia and Interior Department appropriation bills will have an opportunity to attempt reconciliation of Senate-House differences.

Eight Conferees Named.

One of the first Senate actions today was appointment of two Republicans to the tax bill conference committee. Senators Couzens of Michigan and Keyes of New Hampshire had refused to serve, but today Hastings of Delaware and Metcalf of Rhode Island accepted appointment.

Vice-President Garner reserted to unusual procedure by designating eight Senate conferees. That made room for three members inclined to be friendly to the program of President Roosevelt and the House for stiffer taxes on undistributed earnings of corporations. The House is expected to name its conference delegation Monday.

Some talk arose in Senate quarters of a possibility that Senate conferees might deadlock in a four against four vote. Before they can recede from any amendment, a majority of the conferees must agree to discard it.

In any event, a protracted conference row appeared probable because of the drastic Senate revisions of the House bill.

Black to Renew Fight.

Senators Black (Dem.), Alabama, and La Follette (Prog.), Wisconsin, who worked on the Senate floor for higher undistributed corporation profits taxes, were planning a renewal of the fight in the conference. They withdrew an amendment yesterday to insert steeper levies on undivided profits upon assurance that the conferees would consider it.

Conferees on the deficiency-relief bill, carrying $1,425,000,000 for continuing WPA operations in the next fiscal year, planned to assemle again Monday.

The way for quick final approval of an anti-price discrimination bill, designed to protect independent retailers from monopolistic competitors, was opened when conferees formulated a compromise.

Provisions and Penalties.

Chairman Van Nuys (Dem.) Indiana of the Senate conferees, said the agreement included provisions to make unlawful discriminatory rebates, allowances, advertising service charges. Fines up to $5000, a year in jail, or both, would be provided for violators.

Under the measure the Federal Trade Commission would have power to "fix and establish quantity limits and revise the same as it finds necessary, as to particular commodities or classes of commodities where it finds that purchasers in greater quantities are so few as to render differentials on account thereof unjustly discriminatory or promotive of monopoly."

Senator Austin (Rep.), Vermont, said the Vandenberg amendment added by the Senate to eliminate from the bill price differentials to manufacturers on purchases of materials was dropped by the conferees. This amendment would have permitted unlimited quantity discounts to automobile manufacturers and other big industrialists.

Austin's amendment to permit price changes on perishable goods and to meet emergencies was accepted by the conferees.

Another bill, to require registration of lobbyists, also is awaiting ratification of a conference report by both Senate and House. Only House confirmation of a conference agreement is required to send the liquor tax bill, setting up an independent liquor control bureau, to the White House.

Little chance for enactment of the sip subsidy, Wagner housing and substitute coal regulation bills was seen by most congressional chieftains.

Nevertheless, there was a possibility that the House would call up the coal bill Monday and that the Senate would make the ship subsidy bill its unfinished business.

CENTENNIAL EXPOSITION OPENED AT DALLAS, TEX.

Secretary Roper Takes Part and Pageant, "Texas Under Six Flags" Is Given.

DALLAS, Tex., June 6.—With special ceremonies the gates of the $25,000,000 Texas centennial exposition were opened at noon today.

The exposition was officially opened at noon by Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper with words flashed around the world in two minutes and six seconds by telegraph, cable and radio. An electrical impulse snapped shut a pair of scissors poised between a ribbon serving as a barrier to the exposition.

A pageant, "Texas Under Six Flags"—those of Spain, France, Mexico, the Lone Star Republic, the Confederacy and the United States—was given in the Cotton Bowl. Those who joined in the broadcast cia, Spanish Foreign Minister, speaking at Madrid; Andre Maurois, French writer, at Paris; Frank Chapa, representative of the Mexican Government; Gen. Andrew Jackson Houston, grandson of Gen. Sam Houston, at Houston; Dr. Bolling Lee, descendant of Gen. Robert E. Lee, at Richmond, Va., and Secretary Roper.

The participants in the pageant, which included floats depicting scenes in Texas history, paraded through the streets to the exposition grounds just before the opening.

Officials estimated 50,000 visitors were on the grounds shortly after noon.

7 HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS EARN SCHOLARSHIPS

Five Girls and Two Boys Selected on Grades, Leadership and Personality.

At graduating exercises of the public high schools this week, five girls and two boys will be presented with four-year scholarships to Washington University, earned by them through scholastic attainments, leadership, intellectual promise and personal characteristics.

The winners and their average grades in high school, are:

Frances Louise Wells, 16 years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar B. Wells, 6309 Lucille avenue, average grade, 92.57 per cent, Beaumont High.

Vivien Steffens, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Steffens, 4439 Swan avenue; 91.875 per cent, Blewett High.

Lois Louise Grundmann, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Grundmann, 3212 Greer avenue; 92.78 per cent, Central High.

Doris Mae Losch, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marion H. Losch. 4067 Phillips avenue; 93.939 per cent, Cleveland High.

John Wilkins, 18, son of Mrs. Julia Wilkins, 2122A Allen avenue; 93.43 per cent, McKinley High.

John Eibert Jr., 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Eibert, 4255A Juniata street; 95.42 per cent, Roosevelt High.

Lois Elizabeth McCulloch, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. E. McCulloch, 5208 Ridge avenue; 91.303 per cent, Soldan High.

Not Scholarship Alone.

An honor graduate of each graduating class in each high school is given a scholarship by Washington University, the selections being made by the school faculties. For some time the choice has not been on the sole basis of ranking scholarship, which formerly was the test, but it happened that Miss Losch, Wilkins, Eibert and Miss McCulloch stood at the head of their large classes. The other winners were within the first five in order of grades.

Miss Wells is the daughter of a mathematics teacher at Beaumont High. She was elected to the National Honor Society, considered one of the highest honors the faculty could bestow, and she won second place in an interscholastic oratorical contest. She has not planned her career.

In six out of her eight school terms Miss Steffens, whose father is a salesman, was on the honor roll of students. It is her desire to specialize in mathematics. Miss Lillie R. Ernst, principal of the school, reported to the Board of Education: "Vivien is an unusually intelligent student, who shows considerable originality. She made a score of 105, the highest made on the Ohio psychological examination. In addition to her mathematical interests she has shown marked literary ability."

Miss Grundmann's father is principal of Zion Lutheran School, which she attended. For three years in high school she achieved honors for having "all E" marks. Teaching or literary work is her aim.

For seven out of eight terms Miss Losch, daughter of a general foreman of the Missouri Pacific Railroad shops, won academic "Cs" at Cleveland for her scholastic record. She belongs to the National Honor Society and wants to be a Latin teacher.

Youth's Mother Is Widow.

When J. C. Edwards, principal of McKinley High, told Wilkins he was to receive the scholarship, Wilkins replied: "You don't know how happy this is going to make my mother." She is a widow. Wilkins, who was excellent in debating, may take up engineering or specialize in science.

Eibert, son of a metal worker, is an accomplished pianist, a member of the National Honor Society and the winner of a Harvard book prize. He intends to enter chemical engineering.

Miss McCulloch, whose father is plant engineer at the General Motors Fisher body plant, has won two-year and four-year scholarship seals at Soldan and belongs to the National Honor Society. Social service work has attracted her for a career.

All of the winners participated in various school club and athletic activities.

F. L. SMITH, ILLINOIS, FACES FIGHT FOR JOB

Move to Defeat Him for Re-Election as National Committeeman.

By BOYD F. CARROLL,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., June 6.—A fight over the attempt to defeat Frank L. Smith of Dwight, Ill., for re-election as Republican National Committeeman for Illinois, and there by eliminate him—officially, at least—from any control in Republican political affairs in Illinois is expected when the Illinois delegation to the Republican national convention here holds its caucus Monday night.

Smith is opposed for the National Committee post by George Harding of Chicago, wealthy Republican politician, who is said to control several wards on the South Side of Chicago. Harding was one of the sponsors of the candidacy of C. W. Brooks, Republican nominee for Governor of Illinois, and has the support of Brooks for National Committeeman.

While both sides are claiming a majority of the 57 votes of the Illinois delegation to the national convention which will elect the committeeman political observers are inclined to believe that the move to defeat Smith will be successful.

Smith is making a determined fight to retain a place of power in Illinois Republican politics, a fight he has been waging since the United States Senate in 1928 refused to seat him after he had been elected as United States Senator from Illinois. The refusal to seat him in the Senate followed an inquiry by a Senate committee into campaign expenditures in the election of Smith. This committee, headed by former United States Senators James A. Reed of Missouri, reported that $458,782 was expended to elect Smith, and about $200,000 of this was contributed by officers of public utility corporations, at a time when Smith was chairman of the Illinois Public Service Commission.

Smith, who is completing his first four-year term as National Committeeman, today declined to comment on the outcome of the contest, other than to say "it is a horse race." He declared he would not withdraw, and would carry the fight to a vote by the delegates in the Illinois caucus. "We will know the result after the delegates vote," Smith said, asserting that if there was any withdrawal it would have to be by Harding.

Opponents of Smith had not opened their headquarters here tonight and could not be reached for a statement.

FARM BUREAU SEEKS CROP CONTROL PLANK

11-Point "Mandate" to Be Delivered to Both Republican and Democratic Conventions.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 6.—A demand that crop control be included in tthe farm plank of both the Republican and Democratic platforms was made tonight by the board of directors of the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Soil conservation also must be included, the board said, in what they described as a "mandate" to the party conventions.

A managed currency "regulated on an index of basic commodities" was another point in the 11-point platform the directors said the Federation's 500,000 farm families would support at the polls.

The Farm Bureau claims credit for devising the Roosevelt administration's Farm Subsidy-Soil Conservation Act following invalidation of the AAA.

To Be Presented Monday.

A committee headed by Farm Bureau President Edward A. O'Neal will present its platform demands to the Resolutions' Committee of the Republican convention at Cleveland Monday. The platform:

1. "Effective adjustment and control of the volume of farm goods so as to balance the supply with total demands of markets at price levels which will give agricultural commodities the purchasing power existing in 1909-1914."

2. A "permanent system of commodity loans" to prevent seasonal surpluses from "unduly affecting market price levels."

3. Maintenance of a "well rounded, practical" soil conservation and land-utilization program.

4. Expansion of domestic and foreign farm outlets, "and if necessary, the use of Federal revenue to control or remove seasonal surpluses of farm products from the domestic market."

5. "Full protection" of the domestic farm market from "competing imports that influence prices below parity levels."

6. Reduction of "excessive" industrial tariffs.

Control of Monopolies.

7. Further development of a farmer-owned and controlled credit system to provide short and long-term loans "at interest rates commensurate with those available to other American industries."

8. Federal control of monopolies.

9. Lower transportation costs on roads, railroads and waterways.

10. Marketing agreements and other legislation to help farm co-operative marketing, purchasing and service associations to "stabilize distribution, marketing, production and processing of farm crops and farm supplies."

11. A managed currency "regulated on an index of basic commodities to maintain a dollar with a constant purchasing and debt paying power."

RANKIN WANTS PARTY CAUCUS ON HOUSE FLOOR LEADERSHIP

Again Announces He Is Candidate; O'Connor Now Acting in Post.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—In his second formal statement in as many days, Representative Rankin (Dem.), Mississippi, announced again today he would be a candidate for House floor leader to succeed William B. Bankhead, who moved up to the speakership on Thursday after the death of Speaker Joseph W. Byrns.

He said a petition to call a party caucus on the leadership question would be circulated early next week, and that the caucus would be sought for either a week from tonight or the following Monday, June 15, before the House convenes after its recess during the Republican national convention. He said he would confer with other possible candidates Monday. "We can get the 25 necessary signatures to the petition in 30 minutes," said Rankin.

Representative O'Connor of New York, chairman of the Rules Committee, has been acting as floor leader since Bankhead's election as Speaker. The general impression was until Rankin announced his candidacy last night that he would continue until next January, when a new Congress convenes. O'Connor is expected to be one of the leading contenders in the leadership fight, this year or next.

CITY SEEKS NEW TRIAL IN SUIT OVER AUTO INJURIES

Woman Awarded $58,000 in Case in Which Car Glanced Off Traffic Buttons.

Motion for a new trial was filed yesterday by the city of St. Louis in the suit in which it was held jointly liable with George Rogul, 1514A Clara avenue, a dry goods peddler, for injuries suffered by Miss Annabelle Blackburn, 23 years old, in an automobile accident. A jury in Circuit Judge Charles B. Williams' court returned a verdict for $58,000 in favor of Miss Blackburn against both defendants.

As a result of her injuries, Miss Blackburn's left leg was amputated at the knee. She was knocked down by Rogul's car when it was diverted to the sidewalk at the southwest corner of Euclid and Easton avenues after striking traffic buttons marking a safety zone at Euclid and Easton.

Miss Blackburn, who was waiting for a street car, alleged that reflectors on the buttons were dirty, which prevented Rogul from seeing them. The accident happened on the night of Feb. 1, 1934.

ADMITS ASKING GRAND JUROR TO HELP FIX DRUKMAN CASE

Brooklyn Man Had Previously Served on Three Investigating Bodies; Held on $10,000 Bond.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6. — Charles Nagel, who has served on three former Brooklyn grand juries, was ordered held on $10,000 bond today after admitting at the trial of five officeholders and politicians charged with bribery and embracery that he pleaded with a grand juror to help "fix" the Drukman murder case.

Supreme Court Justice Erskine C. Rogers issued the order after Nagel under close questioning said a man whose name had not previously been brought into the case had asked his assistance in "fixing" jurors who were to try Harry and Meyer Luckman and Fred Hull. They were at first released and at a later trial were convicted of murdering Samuel Drukman.

Nagel said he went to a grand juror during the Drukman investigation of his own volition and, without hope of financial reward, sought to help the murder defendants.

Others defendants in the present trial are former Chief Assistant United States Attorney Henry G. Singer, Detective Giuseppe Dardis and Jacob Silverman.

Nature's Tree Trimmers, Cicada, Due This Week

Insects, Incorrectly Called 17-Year Locusts, Arrive at Set Day and Hour; to Appear Mostly in Northeast.

By the Associated Press.

ITHACA, N. Y., June 6.—Nature's tree trimmers, the 17-year "locusts," or more properly, the cicadas, are out or due this week in their biggest North American invasion. They trim twigs and ends of branches as thoroughly as a pruner's knife. That is their only certainly known damage. It may be harmful to small trees, but is sometimes a real benefit to bigger ones, resulting in more foliage.

The cicadas make no discrimination in young and old trees. Plantings of young apple, peach and pear trees may be severely injured. The cicadas will attack any variety of tree but oak. Hickory and fruit trees are preferred.

The trimming is the result of the females boring into the twigs to lay eggs. The bored twig a few weeks later breaks off at the point where the eggs were laid.

Nowhere else in the 17 years life of these insects is there any identified damage. They spend the 17 years underground, living on juices of roots. Their long underground life may be injurious to plants. It may also be indirectly beneficial. Science has little evidence on either point.

Amazing Timing.

The cicadas show an amazing sense of timing. They emerge from the ground not only on a fixed year, month and day after a 17-year imprisonment—but they choose the hour of 5 p. m. for coming out. After 17 years they miss the 5 p. m. hour by varying figures, but come so close that entomological books recognize that clock time as the maximum emergence. How these insects manage such accurate timing is unknown. The timing is the more unusual, too, on account of the varying forms they assume underground. Theirs is not a 17-year sleep.

A few weeks from now the newly-hatched cicadas will fall from trees, visible as tiny near-white specks, larvae one-twelfth of an inch long. They have two pairs of legs. They use the front legs to burrow quickly underground. After a year the structure of the front legs will change, giving them better digging abilities. After several years the beginning of wings show. In a following stage the wings become well developed. Next the locust becomes a brown larvae, about an inch and a quarter long, with red eyes.

All this time it has been burrowing at depths averaging about two feet. A few have been found much deeper. In April of the seventeenth year the insect gets ready for its fairy act.

Burrows to Surface.

It burrows to within a quarter of an inch of the surface. Sometimes it builds a mud chimney at the surface. In either position it waits for what seems to be the magic hour of five on the right day. When the brown insect emerges he or she crawls quickly to anything elevated above the ground. Grass will do if trees are not handy.

The next hour is spent in a fairy-like metamorphosis. Out of the back of the brown insect rises a pure white, winged, fully developed cicada, a creature seldom seen, and beautiful in twilight or night illumination. The eyes of this new flying creature are red. Very quickly after emerging from its brown body the "locust" turns to a blackish gray.

The color may be the reason for the misnomer "locust." The insects are properly called cicada, there are 27 major varieties of them in the United States, thousands all over the world and they have been known since prehistoric times.

They are not locusts but their dark colors match those of the biblical as well as modern locust swarms which destroy all vegetation. It is said that in this country early settlers mistook the 17-year cicada for real biblical locusts in a new land.

The Song of the "Locust."

Almost the moment the cicadas lose their white color, the males start the siren-like shriek which is the loudest known insect sound. The females are silent. The siren is the mating call.

The adult cicadas live about 30 days. This year's brood, known as X, is the largest of the 27 varieties in the United States. Each brood has its own year of emergence. In the South the period is 13 years instead of 17. The X-brood is expected this year mainly in 14 Northeastern states. Scientists are interested in learning whether the cicadas are diminishing.

WINS DOUBLE INDEMNITY SUIT ON HUSBAND'S LIFE INSURANCE

Widow Upheld in Contention Death Was Accident Caused by Pulling A Hair in Nose.

A verdict for $10,416 was returned in Federal Court in East St. Louis yesterday in favor of Mrs. Agnes Kassly, 1101 North Ninth street, East St. Louis, and against the New York Life Insurance Co. The award represented double indemnity on a $5000 policy taken by John J. Kassly, husband of the plaintiff, who died in September, 1934.

Testimony showed that Kassly's death was the result of a ruptured blood vessel caused by his pulling a hair from his nose, his death occurring about four weeks after he had taken the insurance policy. The insurance company contended that Kassly was suffering from a liver ailment at the time and the ruptured blood vessel could not be the sole cause of his death.

Federal Judge Wham directed the jury to award Mrs. Kassly $5416, the face value of the policy and interest from the time of her husband's death. The remaining $5000 of the award was made by the jury.

EDEN SAYS BRITAIN IS READY FOR WESTERN EUROPEAN PACT

Especially Welcome if Air Agreement Is Included; He Expects Hitler Reply Soon.

By the Associated Press.

LEEK WOOTTON, WARWICKSHIRE, England, June 6.—Britain is ready to enter a non-aggression mutual assistance agreement in Western Europe, Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden said in an address tonight.

Such an arrangement, he pointed out, "would be all the more cordially welcomed by this country if it embodied the idea of an air pact as proposed last year, and if it were accompanied by arrangements for limitations of forces."

He said Great Britain was confident that Fuehrer Hitler would reply soon to Britain's questionnaire regarding his ideas on a peace structure for Europe.

The Foreign Secretary hinted at possible modifications in the form of the League of Nations.

"We must keep the League in existence," he asserted, "and approach any modifications necessary in its structure with a desire to make it as effective as possible for the maintenance of peace."

The genius of TOSCANINI
immortalized on
New Victor Higher Fidelity Records

Before Arturo Toscanini retired as conductor of the Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York, the maestro made a number of new recordings for Victor. Thereby the thrilling brilliance of this great genius of the baton has been preserved forever.

The first of these new recordings to be released is an album of Wagnerian Excerpts. This is exceedingly fitting, since Toscanini's rise to fame was to a large extent based upon his outstanding interpretation of the Wagnerian operas.

Wagnerian Excerpts. Arturo Toscanini and Philharmonic-Symphony Orchestra of New York. Preludes to Acts 1 and 3, Lohengrin; Dawn and the Rhine Journey, Götterdämmerung; The Siegfried Idyll.
Five 12-inch records, in album with explanatory notes, $10.

These amazing higher fidelity records, made by the latest electrical process, capture the fire, the dash, the dynamics of masterly performances. Hear them at your Victor dealer's.

TOTAL RELIEF COST IN THREE YEARS $4,096,433,000

Of This, Government Gave $2,905,701,000, States $522,779,000, Local, $667,952,000.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—In a final report on the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, Harry L. Hopkins said today that relief activities cost the Federal Government nearly $300,000,000 more in 1935 than in 1934.

His report showed also that from Jan. 1, 1933 to Dec. 31, 1935, when the Federal Government ended the dole, the total cost of relief was $4,096,433,37. Of this amount the Federal Government supplied $2,905,701,296, or 70.9 per cent; state governments, $522,779,649 and cities and towns $667,952,422.

Although the new work relief program which was started last August attained its goal of 3,500,000 jobs in December, FERA spent $1,359,980,575 during the year. This compared with $1,065,004,451 in 1934 and $480,716,270 in 1933. Because of the delay in getting the new program under way, $935,930,085 was required to taper off FERA instead of the $880,000,000 estimated when the $4,880,000 work relief fund was made available.

CWA, PWA, CCC Not Included.

Hopkins' report, made as Senate and House conferees sought for an agreement on a new $1,425,000,000 appropriation for the Works Progress Administration, did not include the $833,965,000 of Federal funds spent on the old CWA, WPA expenditures, or activities of other agencies such as PWA and the Civilian Conservation Corps.

During the three years state and local relief contributions amounted to $663,000,000—$196,697,393, or 24.9 per cent of the total cost in 1933; $224,564,038, or 15.3 per cent in 1934; $241,745,894 or 13.3 per cent in 1935.

Federal expenditures for the three years varied from $385,599,738 in New York to $2,193,756 in Delaware. In all Southern states the Federal contribution was 90 per cent or more of the total, but the report said the cost of relief was much less there because of the smaller payments to families.

Figures for Four States.

In Missouri the total amount spent for relief from Jan. 1, 1933, to Dec. 31, 1935, was $82,112,000, of which the Government furnished $63,446,000. The State provided 10.9 per cent, and cities and towns 11.8 per cent.

The total in Illinois was $308,672,000, of which $232,791,000 was from the Government. The State's percentage was 20.1; local communities, 4.5. The Arkansas total was $41,527,000, of which $40,057,000 was Federal, the State furnishing .7 per cent and localities, 2.8.

In Kansas the total was $54,745,000, of which $39,949,000 was Federal, .9 per cent State and 26.1 local.

SOUTH CHINA REVISES VIEW ON WAR ON JAPAN

Leaders Disclaim Intent to Embarrass Nanking or to Act Independently.

By the Associated Press.

HONGKONG, June 6. — Canton government leaders issued statements tonight disclaiming any desire to wage an independent war on Japan. The Southwestern Political Council here last night ordered provincial armies in South China to mobilize for an anti-Japanese expedition. Leaders today denied also that their action was intended to force a crisis with the Central (Nanking) Government.

They explained their decision to send Kwangtung and Kwangsi provincial armies northward as an anti-Japanese expedition called the "National Salvation Forces" amounted merely to a patriotic offer of services against Japanese aggression and a request for permission to reinforce Nanking's troops in the North.

(The Southern troops, estimated as high as 100,000, have been reported occupying towns in Hunan Province and heading northward).

To some Hongkong observers, however, the explanations were not entirely convincing. These persons contended there was reason to suspect official connivance at leakage of news concerning troop movements which might have been calculated to alarm Nanking, but which later could be repudiated. Now Nanking apparently had called Canton's bluff by doing nothing, observers said.

Whether the southern troops would be recalled has not yet been stated.

There was a better atmosphere in Canton, where yesterday tension was high, with prices soaring and citizens storing up rice against an emergency. The currency was recovering substantially.

(At Shanghai, it was felt Canton had completed its gesture designed to embarrass Nanking in the face of Japan and that the south would make no further move until Nanking does. Canton leaders were quoted as saying: "The actual launching of an anti-Japanese campaign must be inaugurated by Nanking." They stated, however, that South China wants resistance to Japan's extension of military control in the north.)

JURY IN PWA FRAUD CASE APPARENTLY IN A DEADLOCK

Seven Men Accused of Conspiring in Connection With Texas Irrigation Project.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—A jury of the District of Columbia Supreme Court was still out tonight, apparently deadlocked, more than 24 hours after it received the case of seven men indicted for conspiracy to defraud the Government in 1934 in connection with a $4,853,000 irrigation project in Willacy County, Texas.

The indictment charged the defendants with attempting to induce the PWA to substitute California redwood in construction of a conduit from the Rio Grande River for an open, concrete, gravity canal. They were accused of attempting to effect closed bidding on redwood so other materials would be excluded.

The defendants: William A. Harding, former member of the Willacy County District Board; Frank P. McElwrath, Corsicana Tex., contractor; Perry A. Welty and Charles A. Olberg, former PWA engineers, and L. C. Hammond, H. W. Cole and James B. Barry, San Francisco lumbermen.

Sues Kent and Wall Street Journal.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—A $200,000 libel suit was filed in the District of Columbia Supreme Court today by Robert H. Lucas, former Commissioner of Internal Revenue and executive director of the Republican National Committee, against publishers of the Wall Street Journal and Frank R. Kent, columnist. Lucas told the Court an article by Kent, Sept. 10, 1935, in the Journal, was calculated to injure his reputation as an attorney. He said Kent falsely accused him of inspiring propaganda against Alfred E. Smith and promoting the candidacy of a Broken Bow (Neb.) grocer named George W. Norris in opposition to Senator George W. Norris.

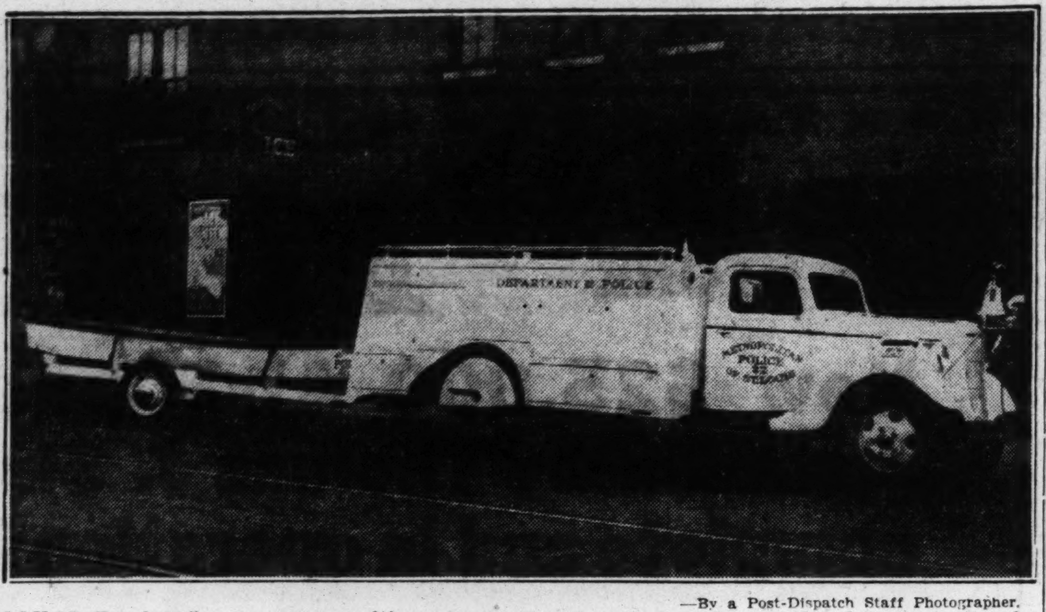
Police Department's New Life-Saving Truck



—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

"SQUAD Truck 22," new emergency life-saving truck and trailer which were placed in service by the Police Department yesterday. The truck, built at a cost of about $2500, is equipped with a two-way radio set and a large variety of devices for use in emergencies.

NEW RESCUE TRUCK PLACED IN SERVICE

Police Unit Carries Various Life-Saving Devices—Boat On Trailer.

A new emergency life-saving truck, designed for all types of rescue work, was placed in service by the Police Department yesterday. The truck, on a light truck chassis with a streamlined white body, will be known as Squad Truck 22, replacing the old rescue truck which has been in service since February, 1935.

Designed by Bert L. O'Brien, superintendent of the police garage, 3919 Laclede avenue, it carries equipment similar to that of the old vehicle and in addition a two-way radio outfit, a detachable crane and chain for moving automobiles and other large objects, a ventilator blower powered by a gas engine for use in gas-filled manholes or buildings; a generator to supply portable electric lights and a trailer to carry the eight-foot rowboat and life preservers which were part of the old truck's equipment.

O'Brien said the total cost of the truck and the new equipment was about $2500. The body, made by a St. Louis firm, cost $1000 and the chassis $750. Much of the equipment was made by mechanics at the police garage, where the truck will be stationed.

The radio transmitter is of the crystal control type, with a power output of 10 watts, slightly higher than that of scout car transmitters. The set operates on a frequency of 33.1 megacycles. It is planned to place the vertical steel rod antennae on a swinging base so that it can be lowered when not in use.

O'Brien said the old truck had been sent out on 688 calls during the 16 months it was in service and the department decided a more modern and better equipped vehicle was justified. The old machine had been converted from a beer truck at a cost of $1700.

Equipment transferred from the old car to the new included warning lanterns and signals, inhalators, hydraulic jacks, a 10-foot hook ladder, portable spotlight, flare torches, and a large assortment of tools for various rescue purposes. The truck is sent to all major fires and used in other major emergencies.

True Bills Returned After Legislature Investigates Gasoline and Auto Taxes.

By the Associated Press.

JACKSON, Miss., June 6.—Joe S. Price, former State Auditor of Public Accounts, and three others were indicted by the Hinds County grand jury today on information submitted by a legislative investigating committee of charges of frauds in connection with the collection and refunding of gasoline taxes during Price's term of office.

Price was indicted on a charge of embezzling $1261.26 collected by his office from the sale of motor vehicle license tags.

The indictment is identical with one reported several days ago against C. G. Muse, a former clerk in Price's office. The two men are charged in the separate indictments with the embezzlement of the same funds.

R. A. Billups, of Greenwood, head of a gas and oil distribution business, was indicted on seven charges of obtaining money under false pretenses and on three charges of conspiracy to violate the State gasoline tax laws. R. M. Echols, of Jackson, was indicted on six separate charges of false pretense and on a single charge of conspiracy with Billups to violate the gasoline tax laws. Noble Evans, of Greenville, was indicted on a charge of conspiracy.

It scoops the Rubber Industry on sheer QUALITY!

NO rubber-maker who is entirely mass-minded could have produced the incomparable new Double Eagle Airwheel.* It will probably never be a big-production tire, being special and select in its every aspect.

It is not intended to compete with tires of standard level—it transcends their field—embodying as it does all that we have learned in building 250,000,000 other Goodyears which long have held world leadership.

It scoops the rubber industry on the high ground of quality, and to the man who can afford the very best it gives advantages he cannot afford to do without.

PATHFINDER
World's first-choice economy tire—real Goodyear calibre—makes it safe to be thrifty

SPEEDWAY
Genuine Goodyear quality at lowest price—a great tire that is a great buy for little money

WE set out here at Goodyear to make this Double Eagle beyond doubt the safest, most luxurious tire money could command—designed, fitted, finished to the new needs of the modern fast maneuverable cars.

Building it we combed the earth for super-materials, even developed new ones of special strength and temper, then proved these by awful weeks of test runs on the Bonneville Salt Flats under blistering heat at continuous speeds of 96 miles an hour.

We aimed for, and perfected, not a thick, heavy, stiff-treaded tire—but a lithe, supple, cool-running, easy-riding carrier of sparkling beauty that would yoke lavish comfort to matchless safety.

You'll get the picture when we tell you frankly it will deliver far longer—far safer mileage than any tire we have ever built, including even our famed wear-defying "G-3" All-Weather.

THOUGH you had half the money in the world you simply could not put finer equipment on your car than Double Eagle Airwheels and their infallible companion the blowout-safe Goodyear LifeGuard* Tubes.

You'll be surprised at how little more they cost—but what's important to you, their mission is not to save money but to save life.

NEW FOODS OPEN SWEDISH SEASON

Warm Weather Heralded in Restaurants by "Salad Jona" and "Stromming."

Swedish food, introduced to America along with Swedish glass and sculpture is justly famous. The early summer season provides tempting dishes which make their first appearance of the year on restaurant menus. Delicious smoked Halmstad salmon, gigantic strawberries and fresh grilled Baltic Sea herrings are an infallible sign of the beginning of summer.

Most restaurants in Stockholm make a feature of seasonal dinners, advertising them in the newspapers and stressing the endless variety of fresh vegetables. Swedish vegetables grow rapidly in the hectic spring and thanks to prolonged hours of sunshine come to maturity and unusually tasty.

Most Stockholmers and many foreign visitors partake of their first vernal meal in the musty cosiness of "Den Gyldene Freden" (Golden Peace). This unique eating place is located in an ancient house in the "Old City Between the Bridges." Established as a tavern in the early eighteenth century it was the favorite meeting place of Carl Michael Bellman, Swedish poet and composer, and his cronies. Today it is owned by the Swedish Academy which annually awards the Nobel Prize in Literature.

The restaurant consists of two cellars with vaulted brick ceilings. Ancient army drums serve as lighting fixtures. In this historic atmosphere the smorgasboard, the "stromming," a succulent smelt-like fish, and the "Salad Jona" whose ingredients are kept in deepest secrecy, taste especially good.

Flag Day in June.

Flag Day for Sweden is June 6. Outdoor concerts will mark the day and the blue and yellow flag will fly above castle and cottage. This day coincides with the "name day" of King Gustaf V and is celebrated in the stadium erected for the Olympics in 1912. A gigantic flag is raised to national music, there are parades and bands playing. In the evening a program of music and speeches is staged at Skansen, the outdoor museum, located on a hill in Djurgarden Park. The origin of the Swedish flag, said to be the second oldest in the world, is unknown. Romanticists insist that some ancient chieftain wove the gold of his lady's tresses and the blue of her eyes into his personal battle standard.

Sweden is the birthplace of history. For more than 15,000 years the same race has inhabited the country and the intermingling with other peoples and races has been slight. All along the Bohuslan or western coast are quaint and curious rook carvings picturing sailing craft and sailors with weapons of three thousand years ago. Out in the Baltic Sea rise the ruins of the mediaeval city walls and many cathedrals of Visby on the island Gotland. For the adventure loving Vikings this island was the halfway station on their route as they brought in loot and bartered treasure from Oriental markets. Legend has it that the island was once submerged and the green blue waters of the Baltic move ceaselessly over the yellow sand of its lowlying beaches.

Old Buildings Restored.

Research and restoration work has gone forward for more than 13 years and more than two miles of masonry have been scrutinized inch by inch and splendid remnants of many demolished buildings have been brought to light. It has been definitely established that the part of the wall which faces the harbor and the Baltic was erected more than 800 years ago. Another section goes back to the eleventh century. The wall is studded with crenelated towers from which the Gothlanders fought invaders from across the sea. Some of these towers were used as lookouts, others as arsenals and others as prisons where captives languished.

Travelers to Lake Vattern country may see the famous bridal crown of Visingso which is now kept in the little church at Brahe. The old sexton unlocks the oak chest which stands in the sacristy and the visitor may see the lovely and touching relic which has been worn by generations of happy brides through three centuries. This bridal crown, set with strands of rock crystal was made for Ebba Brahe, daughter of a landowner. Ebba was loved by Gustavus Adolphus but since she was not of royal blood they were unable to marry. Eventually she married a statesman and in dying bequeathed her crown to the happy brides of Visingso, to be worn as they walked to the altar.

Stockholm is one of the most beautiful capitals of Europe. New architecture rises beside old historic buildings. The Town Hall and Town Library are two outstanding examples of modern architecture. As one travels further north one comes into the peaceful countryside of brilliantly colored houses and colorful costumes worn by women. Each section has its own national costume and may be easily distinguished. The women wear scarlet caps and brilliant aprons over the sober black of voluminous skirts. Here music and the intricate measures of the folk dance are universal and important.

MICHIGAN OFFERS WINTER SPORTS IN SUMMER

Skiing and Tobogganing Becoming Very Popular With Summer Guests.

Skiing and tobogganing are sports no longer limited to the winter season. Someone discovered that the sand dunes on the west coast of Lake Michigan make an excellent ski run. All that is required is a pair of skis that have been waxed and a grassy dune. As yet there are no speed records for there are dunes to suit every speed and purpose.

Entertainment for summer visitors will be featured at Petoskey. A gigantic checkerboard using discs 10 inches in diameter will be set up in Arlington Park. One of the outstanding events of the season is the staging of "Hiawatha" by a cast of full-blood Ottawa Indians at the Petoskey High School Stadium. This performance supplements the annual Indian pageant, "Glorifying the Ottawa Indian."

There are still traces of past Indian generations in Michigan. North of Vanburen Park, a state park covering 90 acres of well-shaded land, quantities of arrow chips may still be found on the sand hills indicating that a large Indian village was located at this point in ancient times.

Coloma and Watervliet are two important vacation towns on Paw Paw Lake. All the favorite land as well as water sports are available and it is possible for the summer visitor to rough it during the day and yet return to the music of "swing" bands for the evening.

BASS FISHING SEASON TO OPEN IN WISCONSIN

June 21 Is Date Officially Set on Large and Small Mouth Variety.

The Wisconsin bass fishing season opens officially on the twenty-first of June. There are a score of well-stocked streams in Marinette County where the fisherman may have his choice of large and small mouth bass as well as wall-eyed and Northern pike that range from 10 to 30 pounds in weight.

The mink farms near Green Bay attract many visitors. Here each mink has its own enclosure. The extra house within each enclosure has been placed there to prevent the killing of young by the mother. One hour before meal time the full grown mink take their exercise which consists of racing back and forth in a beaten path within their five by ten foot grounds. It is said that 500 skins are required to make a perfectly-matched mink coat.

CHARTER THE "CALIFORNIA"

U. S. Line Schedules Sailings on Panama Pacific Liner.

The turbo-electric liner California from the Panama Pacific Line has been chartered by the United States Line for a summer schedule of sailings to Europe. Bookings on American ships have been unusually heavy this season. The California which has been used on trips to California via Havana and the Panama Canal has a great many features beside complete air conditioning.

Apple Blossom Time.

Etretat in spring is one of the loveliest sights imaginable. The beauty of Japan in the cherry-blossom season cannot surely surpass the Normandy landscape white with apple bloom. The Grand Val d'Etretat and the surrounding country seem as though covered with snow at this time of the year; and no better view of it can be got than from the golf links on the cliffs, close to the famous Porte d'Aval.

Schools close in Finland for three months in the summer, the idea being that children must get the full benefit of the summer.

Cowling Goes to Texas to Represent Ford at Exposition at Dallas

General Salesmanager of Ford Motor Co. Stops in St. Louis to Address Dealers.

En route to Dallas, to represent Henry Ford and Edsel Ford at the opening of the Texas Centennial Exposition, W. C. Cowling, general salesmanager of the Ford Motor Co., stopped in St. Louis Friday to attend a dealers' breakfast and conferences at the Jefferson Hotel.

Cowling was accompanied by H. C. Butkiewicz, vice-president of the Universal Credit Co.; J. D. Hutchins, general manager of the commercial division of the Ford company; A. S. Hatch, general manager of the Lincoln division of the Ford company, and A. R. Barbier, advertising manager for the Ford company.

Cowling said that he discerned no signs of any tapering off in the demand for automobiles and expected that June sales would hold up steadily. "There is a tremendous demand for cars," he declared.

Effect of Shows in Fall.

Asked about the effect on sales and conditions in the industry of holding the auto shows in November instead of January, Cowling said that no one could tell anything for certain until the end of the year. He noted that the effects had been hard on many dealers, especially because of the severe winter. Up to the present, he said, results have been disappointing in some respects, but employment has been steadier and better distributed and the public has benefited in a price way. Eventually, Cowling believed, car buying and employment will be pretty well leveled off.

Cowling said that the Ford "R and G" used car plan was working out well for Ford dealers and the public, as were other used car plans designed to give buyers of used cars definite assurance and guarantee of car condition and appearance.

Says Used Car Buyer Benefits.

Buyers of used cars, he declared, today are in the position of new car buyers with Ford dealers, as they can feel that a used car now has something substantial back of it and that their used car transportation bargains now are actually bargains. Cowling noted that such are conditions in selling automobiles that if 4,000,000 new ones are sold, the dealers, altogether, have to handle and sell nearly 12,000,000 cars—new and used—before the 4,000,000 new car deals and the consequent trade-in deals and resales, are completed.

Cowling and his fellow executives departed after the meetings here, so as to arrive in Dallas in time for the exposition opening ceremonies yesterday. They plan to hold a number of meetings for Forld dealers in the Southwest before returning to Detroit.

Ford Exhibit at Dallas.

Ford has an elaborate building and exhibit set-up at the Dallas exposition. Its main building faces on a lagoon, around which are some of the finest buildings. At the front, it faces the Court of Honor and Federal Building. It is built of steel, concrete and sheet rock in the ultra modern motif.

Exhibits show methods used in building Ford V-8's, a chief feature being a display of the uses of raw material of the Southwest.

A pageant of transportation showing the development of the modes of travel from the Indian sled to latest V-8 is presented from the Edison Institute at Dearborn. Cotton (40 per cent of the world supply being grown in Texas) and mohair (80 per cent of the world supply coming from that State) are shown as important factors in automobile manufacturing.

Around the lagoon, the Ford Co. shows reproductions of 10 famous roads of the Southwest, among them the Santa Fe Trail, the Butterfield Stage Road, the Yuma Road and the Old Spanish Trail. Many roads traveled by visiting cars en route to Dallas were once parts of these old trails.

Motorists Learning About "Gas" Mileage Factors in Road Test

"The thousands of motorists who have signed as test drivers in the road competition conducted by the Standard Oil Co. are daily uncovering new bits of information regarding their care and the gasoline and oil mileage they secure," a statement declares. "They have come to appreciate that they control some of the factors, but that they have no control over others.

"They are learning the difference in mileage between city and country driving, because they are keeping a record of their gasoline purchases, and the number of miles driven between purchases, plus the nature of the driving done since the last stop.

"Temperature, road surface conditions, wind direction and velocity all play their part in gasoline mileage. Motorists have noticed that traveling against the wind can affect their gasoline mileage as much as 30 per cent."

According to H. R. Cochran, St. Louis manager for the Standard Oil Co., it was realized some time ago that little information was available regarding the average mileage which the average motorist could get from his car. There were innumerable laboratory tests, road tests conducted by specialists, all of which were of considerable value, but in the final analysis no authoritative information was available regarding average driving conditions and average mileage. Cochran asserts that such information can be of real value.

Would Assemble Cars in Cuba.

A bill to prohibit importation of assembled automobiles into Cuba was recently introduced in the House of Representatives in Havana. The preamble of the measure says that some 4000 to 5000 Cubans would find work if all motor vehicles were imported unassembled, as is required by Argentina.

On Their Way to Texas Exposition

Cowling, of the Ford Motor Co., Detroit, and other executives at the Union Station Friday when they stopped off to attend a dealer breakfast and meeting, breaking their journey to Dallas to attend the opening of the Texas Centennial Exposition. Rechtin, assistant manager in St. Louis.

Sensible Care Said to Mean Efficient Old Age in Car as in Men

"Efficient old age in a motorist or in an automobile is only possible through good judgment, proper food, sensible care and wise use of energies. Luck has very little to do with it," says John D. Collins, sales manager of the Tide Water Oil Co., in commenting on the death of Thomas Gordon of Grand Rapids, Mich., at the age of 106 years and the discovery by its makers of the oldest Chevrolet still in active service.

"These are two perfect examples," says Collins. "Gordon was an active motorist to the time of his death, and was America's oldest licensed driver. How many of us could handle a car at the age of 106 years in such a way that licensing authorities would grant us a permit to drive? The records show that Gordon kept himself and his cars in good conditon, drove moderately and carefully and was always considerate of others.

"Much the same can be said of Hiram H. Dohner of Quentin, Pa., who has kept his Chevrolet roadster in constant operation since 1913 at a total cost of one one-hundredth of a cent per mile for repairs and general maintenance. No man could drive any automobile continuously for 23 years unless he gave it the greatest consideration, the most careful care and the most reliable fuel and oil.

"In a letter Dohner has just told me: 'It is with pleasure that I advise you that I have used Veedol motor oil in my 1913 Chevrolet, except for one trip, and I can tell you the car to date has traveled 250,000 miles with a cost of $250 for repairs and general maintenance.'"

L. R. Wilkinson, the Tide Water representative for St. Louis, said yesterday that Veedol sales in St. Louis in the first five months of 1936 were double those in the same period last year.

Airplane Passenger Statistics Reveal Increasing Business

Increasing popularity of air travel in the Central Valley from Chicago to New Orleans is revealed in passenger statistics of Chicago and Southern Air Lines, which inaugurated three-mile-a-minute schedules May 1, using twin-motored Lockheed Electra transport planes.

"In May we carried 900 passengers," Carleton Putnam, president of the air line, said. "This was an increase of 51 per cent over the previous month, when 595 were carried. It is an increase of 236 per cent over May, 1935, and is substantially better than the best previous passenger-month in the history of the company."

Putnam attributed the increase partially to the new equipment and schedules, but said that a major factor in this increase is the rapidly mounting prosperity of the Central Valley. More and more business men are finding it necessary to hurry to the many marketing points in the valley. We expect even greater increases in passenger business through the summer and fall.

New Service Station

Service station at Grand and Chouteau avenues just completed by the Industrial Oil Corporation, distributor of Tidewater products in St. Louis. It stands on a lot 135 by 135 feet, and has the latest type of computing gasoline pumps to insure accurate gallonage, Lincoln Engineering greasing and general lubrication equipment and the newest type of wash rack. It has been so designed as to be easy of entrance from both Grand and Chouteau. E. J. Simon, vice-president of the Industrial Oil Corporation, says that the new station will be operated on a 24-hour schedule and will service batteries and tires.

Says "Trouble Shooting" In Cars Will Soon Be Matter of Pure Science

General Manager Oberheu, of United Motor Service, Addresses Meeting Here.

Automobile "trouble shooting" will soon become a matter of "pure science," F. A. Oberheu, president and general manager of United Motors Service, declared Thursday at a meeting of 200 authorized United Motors distributers and service station operators at Hotel Chase. The meeting was one of a series which Oberheu is conducting in 21 key cities in connection with the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the United Motors Service organization.

"Present-day motor cars, with high-compression engines, sustained high speeds, automatic chokes, current and voltage regulators and other controls, cannot be properly tested and serviced with obsolete and inadequate equipment," he said. "A motor car is too complex for the diagnosis or guess of a mechanic, no matter how good he may be.

"Mechanics need modern, scientific instruments to make accurate tests, in order to know exactly what they should do to insure satisfaction to the car owner. Then mechanics should have the right kind of tools and machinery to service the job properly.

"Equipment is manufactured today for testing every part of the car, likewise equipment for servicing every part of the car in the most economical manner. The ultimate result of the use of such equipment will be more economical motor-car service and greater confidence on the part of the public."

Oberheu urged dealers to get behind the safety movement in their communities and to make greater use of information about parts and service methods.

W. H. Eichelberger, general sales manager, is assisting Oberheu in the meetings in the various cities. The meeting here was presided over by H. P. Schaller, United Motors Service branch manager.

New Color Process Used To Preserve Auto Paint

First of the Buick dealers in St. Louis to install the new "Kulr Kote" process service for improving the appearance and preserving automobile paint is the Kuhs-Buick Co.

This service has been widely used by dealers on the Pacific Coast and in Western states for several years, according to Fred G. Shepherd, zone representative for the manufacturer, and is now being introduced on a national scale.

"Kulr Kote" embodies a nonharmful cleaner and a pigment matching in color that of a car. It is applied by factory-trained workmen.

Auto Trailer Salon Exhibit Opened Here By Covered Wagon Co.

Two-Story Building on Delmar Boulevard Taken Over for the Purpose.

The Covered Wagon Co., Mount Clemens, Mich., has established at 5885 Delmar boulevard, one of the largest trailer sales salons in the Middle West. It has taken over a two-story building where a complete line of covered wagon trailers is on exhibit.

The new streamline trailer coaches for 1936 includes the master model, the de luxe model and the custom coach with luxurious appointments and the comforts of a modern home. These coaches are styled to match the streamline flow of today's automobiles.

Pullman type seats are now a feature, serving as daytime lounging quarters with a takedown table between to provide dining facilities for four or six. At night this compartment can be converted into a bed for two while a forward davenport bed can be fixed for two more.

The kitchen has an enamel sink, running water, china cabinet, cupboards, pantry, large ice box, vegetable bins, pots and pans storage space, and two-burner cooking stove.

Windows and doors are waterproof and dustproof. All are screened. Walls and roof are triple insulated for coolness in summer and warmth in fall or winter. Heating stoves are standard equipment to keep the trailer warm, regardless of outside temperature.

Covered Wagons have linoleum covered floors or carpet to harmonize with the wax finished walls and compartments of mahogany. Toilet facilities, electric lights, head room of six feet, two inches, automobile type body construction, special railroad type coupling and patented drawbar to eliminate sidesway and "pull" on the car, are among other features.

Pioneer Trailer Coaches, Inc., a Missouri corporation, will distribute these coaches throughout Missouri and Illinois.

Statistics show that more than 300,000 house type auto trailers are on the highways of this country, and a noted business analyst has predicted that within 20 years a large part of the population of the United States will be living or touring in them.

Contest Awards Given At Breakfast Meetings

The Weber Implement and Automobile Co. and Mound City Motors are conducting a contest for their metropolitan St. Louis dealers in which retail salesmen are credited with points for deliveries of new De Soto and Plymouth cars.

Prizes are awarded at a breakfast meeting each Wednesday morning. At the end of the contest quota awards will be given to dealers as well as salesmen.

Safety Patrols Guard Children.

More than 700,000 children are now under protection of school safety patrols in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Maryland, and it is expected the total will reach 800,000 before the end of the school term. Plans are under way to organize safety squads in more than 3000 playgrounds and recreation centers for the summer vacation.

Chevrolet Co. Buys Former Durant Plant In California City

Will Add Its 315,000 Square Feet of Space to Its Assembly Factory at Oakland.

The Chevrolet Motor Co. has purchased the former Durant plant at Oakland, says an announcement by M. E. Coyle, president and general manager of Chevrolet.

"Our present assembly facilities at Oakland have proved inadequate to meet the demand for Chevrolet passenger cars and trucks," said Coyle. "We have, therefore, acquired this additional plant, which contains 315,000 square feet of floor space.

"By Jan. 1, 1937, Chevrolet will have completed necessary rearrangements in both Oakland plants and then will operate them as one unit.

"Both passenger car and truck capacity will be increased when the new plant goes into operation."

The Durant plant was built for assembly purposes and is well adapted to Chevrolet operations. It consists of a main building 600 feet long and has three wings extending to the rear, one 600 feet deep and two 400 feet deep.

This purchase will increase the number of Chevrolet assembly plants to 24.

Pontiac Co. Building Axle Plant as Part of $6,000,000 Expansion

Installation of machinery for a new axle plant, which is the major item in a $6,000,000 expansion program, is now under way at the Pontiac Motor Co. plant at Pontiac, Mich.

When the new axle plant gets into operation, it will add 850 men to payrolls now close to an all-time high for Pontiac. The new development is expected to get into operation in a few months, when all axles for Pontiac cars will be built at Pontiac as well as a part of the requirements for another General Motors division.

This newest development in the steady expansion program under way here will mean that in a few months the Pontiac Motor Co. will be building as high a percentage of all parts used in Pontiac car manufacture as was true in the late twenties.

Foreign Affairs Continue to Dominate the News and Prices Of Shares Are Off for the Week

Steels, Oils and Mining Issues Are Strong at Times—Better Tone at Final Session of Period—More Gold on Way Here.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—All major divisions of industry except automobile production were more resistant than normal to the seasonal slow-down this week.

In the stock market the steels, oils and mining issues were strong at times in the face of declines in other sections of the list, but as the week closed sellers had the advantage throughout. The latest French franc crisis left the district jumpy.

Measured by the Associated Press average of 60 shares, the market declined 1.2 to 60.7.

Steel operations advanced to 68.2 from 67.9 per cent of capacity. Although steel circles said demand has not swelled as expected owing to price rises scheduled for the third quarter, they were encouraged by the miscellaneous buying.

Stock sales during the week amounted to 3,832,220 shares, compared with 4,566,860 the preceding week (5 days), and 4,180,114 the corresponding week last year. Total sales from Jan. 1 to date were 246,416,393 shares, compared with 107,354,553 last year and 204,034,766 two years ago.

Cram's Reports, Inc., estimated automobile output for the week at 101,896 cars compared with 108,346 last week. The slackening, which was slightly more pronounced than usual at this time of year, occurred in spite of the continued brisk pace of sales of both new and used cars.

Freight Decline Less Than Seasonal.

Freight carloadings declined 5.3 per cent to 646,859 cars for the week ended May 30. The less than seasonal drop was attributed to the incrase in coal shipments despite the holiday.

Electricity production was another department to make a better than seasonal showing. Although it edged down from the previous week on the holiday let-down, the total of 1,922,108,000 kilowatt hours was 18 per cent ahead of the like week a year ago.

The F. W. Dodge report of residential building contracts for the 37 states east of the Rockies showed an advance of 16.4 in the past five weeks, duplicating the contra-seasonal behavior of last year.

A burst of warm weather brought more evenness to the gains of retail trade with advances for the country running 12 to 17 per cent over last year. Wholesale activity also gained.

Improvement at Week-End.

A faint recovery breeze revived spirits and prices in the final market of the week.

While the buying was nothing to write home about, many leaders managed to hold fractional advances, with scattered issues showing wider improvement.

European problems still appeared far from solution, and the tax controversy at Washington continued as an important influence in financial affairs, but most traders seemed to feel that things stood a chance of getting better rather than worse.

The apathy of the day's feeble rally, however, was exemplified by the total turnover of 253,710 shares, the smallest volume for a Saturday since June 29, last year.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks emerged with a gain of .2 a point at 60.7. At this level the composite was about midway between the high and low of 1936 to date.

Although advices from Paris indicated the new French Government was moving to end the strike, little optimism was in evidence over the French fiscal crisis. The change of governors of the Bank of France indicated to some observers that the time was rapidly approaching when a decision must be reached regarding the future status of the franc.

Despite the coolness of United States Treasury officials to the idea, bankers thought it likely that Great Britain and America might co-operate to prevent demoralization of international currencies in the event France devalues its monetary unit or breaks loose from the gold standard.

Exchange Dealings Quiet.

Foreign exchange dealings were quiet, with sterling and the franc closing slightly higher. At the same time it was announced that arrangements had been made for the shipment of more than $25,000,000 additional gold from Paris and Amsterdam to New York.

There was not much change in the domestic economic picture. There was a decline of around 6,000 cars in this week's automobile production, but this had been expected and the motor stocks were undisturbed. General Motors was up ½ point at 61½ and Chrysler gained ⅝ at 93⅜.

The week's output of 101,896 units compared with 79,855 a year ago. The Automobile Manufacturers Association pointed to the combined sales total of its members for the first five months of this year. The figure stood at 1,592,381 units. This was an increase of more than 26 per cent over the same period last year.

Helpful was the report of the Commerce Department showing an upturn in both exports and imports to and from every major country in the world in April.

Merchandising stocks were relatively lively, apparently reflecting hopes of expanding business when the ex-soldiers get their bonus the middle of this month. Among the share gainers were Sears Roebuck at 71¾, Montgomery Ward at 42½, May Department Stores at 51½, Allied Stores at 9⅞, U. S. Steel at 59¼, Bethlehem at 50⅞, Radio at 11½, General Foods at 39⅝, Certain-teed at 10¼, and U. S. Hoffman Machinery at 12¾.

Glidden was an exception, dropping a point to a new year's low at 41. The stock was off yesterday on a lower six-month's earnings statement. Budd Mfg. also eased to 13¾ following publication of refunding plans.

Bonds were steady. Wheat lost ⅝ to ⅞ of a cent a bushel and corn was down ⅛ to ⅝. Cotton yielded 10 to 75 cents a bale.

COMMODITY PRICES UP ON BROAD FRONT

Lack of Rain Continues to Be a Major Factor in Price Movements.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Commodity prices rose on the broadest front of the year this week.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 important commodities stood at 71.85 against 71.36 last week and 73.44 in the same period a year ago.

Although the gain chalked up by the index was not large, more individual staples shared in the advance than at any other time this year, 18 showing increases in price, four losses and 13 remaining unchanged.

Lack of rain continued to be a major factor in price movements. The June 2 weather and crop bulletin of the Department of Agriculture lists 27 states whose telegraphic reports include such phases as, "rain badly needed," "drouth continues," "crops need rain," and "conditions critical." This is more than 60 per cent of the 43 states included in the survey.

Rainfall for the country as a whole, measured by 138 climatological stations scattered through 44 states, was less than normal again.

Texas, Wisconsin, Iowa and the Pacific coast received better-than-normal rain. Drouth in the Southeast and Northwest continued.

Cool Weather Helps.

The relatively cool weather during the dry spell is credited by some commodity men with having kept the situation from becoming serious in many sections of the country.

Food prices were practically unanimous in moving into higher ground. With sugar unchanged, eggs, cocoa, coffee, flour, lard and butter were marked up.

Cocoa, after moving a narrow range for more than a year, began to climb a little over a month ago. The 10 per cent jump since then is attributed by the trade to low stocks and the largest demand in history.

Livestock quotations moved sharply higher from last week's low point, including hogs, cattle and lambs. With little change in underlying conditions in the seven days, analysts hold that the low level of prices acted to bring buyers into the market.

Agricultural products slipped back with the decline of heavily weighted wheat overbalancing small upturns in corn, rye and cotton.

Industrial and textile prices improved with the persistent uptrend in industrial activity. Hides, rubber, coal, turpentine and linseed oil were among the gainers. Steel scrap bids were lowered by what the trade considers to be a production decline in the offing. Cotton cloth continued in good demand at better levels.

What Index Shows.

The long slump that carried tin prices to the lowest point in several years during the week was based on large stocks, a predicted drop in consumption this summer, and uncertainty over the agreement among the various producing countries.

The index and its components, based on 1926 as 100, follows:

INDUSTRIAL ACTIVITY AT PEAK OF YEAR

Associated Press Index Level at Highest Since Late June 1930.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Industrial activity nosed into new high ground for the year today, the Associated ings index and a new 1936 top in former high 89.4. This compares with 89.0 last week and 70.3 a year ago.

The present level is the highest since the latter part of June, 1930. Activity has been comparatively stable during the past month, the index ranging between 89.4 and 89.0.

Underlying this week's upturn is a sharp rise in the freight carloadings index and a new 1936 top in residential building. Coal movement was responsible for the increase in loadings, fuel shipments rising against the normal holiday week decline. Residential contracts rose 16.4 per cent in the last five weeks, tracing the same contra-seasonal pattern evidenced last year.

Automobile output registered the only decline, on a seasonally adjusted basis, for the week. Along with cotton manufacturing, electric power production and steel mill activity, however, it has been moving in a narrow range for several weeks.

The index, with its seasonally adjusted components, based on the latest available statistics and with 1929-30 as 100, follows:

	Latest Week.	Week Ago.	Year Ago.
Composite index	*89.4	89.0	70.3
Automobile prod.	89.7	89.9	80.4
Steel mill activity	91.5	91.1	53.0
Cotton mfg. activity	104.9	103.8	80.4
Electric power prod.	107.9	107.3	95.4
Residential building	*48.1	45.6	29.2

$25,661,000 More Gold Engaged Abroad for Shipment to the U. S.

International Dollar Rates Fluctuate Within a Narrow Range as Week Ends—French Developments Watched.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—International dollar rates fluctuated within a narrow range today with leading European currencies showing modest improvement.

In New York the British pound sterling gained ¼ of a cent at $5.01⅝, French francs were .00 1-16 of a cent higher at 6.58 5-16, Holland guilders were unchanged at 67.58 cents and Swiss francs remained at 32.30 cents.

Notwithstanding the slight improvement in the French currency, international banking quarters reported new engagements of gold abroad for shipment to the United States amounted to $25,661,000, of which $19,418,000 was taken in France and $6,243,000 from Holland.

These engagements, unusually large for a Saturday, brought the total movements since April 24, start of the current unsettlement, to $324,900,000, of which $261,700,000 has been taken in France, $35,900,000 in Holland and $4,100,000 in England.

Based on the franc at its final New York rate, the dollar was at a premium of 75-100 of 1 per cent compared with 76-100 or Friday and 75-100 a month ago.

The gold stock in this country, as recorded by the Federal Reserve Board, compares as follows:

Week ended June 3—$10,409,000,000
Preceding week — — 10,388,000,000
Same week last year— 8,916,000,000

COTTON MARKET LOWER ON REPORT OF RAIN

Increased Offerings Follow Private Word of Precipitation in Eastern Point.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Following an early advance, cotton reacted sharply today under selling prompted by private reports of showers in Eastern belt sections.

October sold from 10.99 to 1081 and closed at 10.83, with the general market ending steady at net declines of 2 to 15 points.

New crop positions sold 4 to 7 points net higher soon after the opening on Wall Street and commission house buying.

The official weather map did not indicate any break in the Eastern belt drouth, but private reports of showers in northwestren portions of South Carolina led to some increase in offerings.

July remained within a narrow range, closing 2 points lower. New crop deliveries showed net losses of 10 to 15 points.

Cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 68,426 against 56,379 last year.

Washington Commerce Notes

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—An upturn in new financing for capital investment, rather than refunding, is noted in the Securities and Exchange Commission's April analysis of registrations under the Securities Act. About $36,300,000, or 6.2 per cent, of the net cash proceeds of issues tabulated was intended for expenditure on plant, equipment and other assets—the largest amount yet reported for one month by the SEC. Securities with estimated gross proceeds of $751,012,738 became effective, also a new monthly record.

Further growth in the backlog of rail equipment orders was disclosed in the monthly report of the Association of American Railroads. Class 1 roads, the association said, had on order May 1, 18,467 new freight cars, compared with only 1449 on the same date a year ago. New cars put into service in the first four months increased to 5916 from 755 in the comparable period last year.

In wake of the flight of capital from France and movement of gold to the United States, New York City member banks reported to the Federal Reserve Board a sharp rise in deposits held for foreign banks. The total rose to $378,000,000 in the week ended Wednesday, an increase of $30,000,000 over the preceding week and $117,000,000 higher than a year ago.

A slight decline in industrial production, as shown in latest business statistics, is attributed by the Commerce Department to "the seasonal tendency common at this period of the year." It estimates May production "probably as between 15 and 20 per cent" higher than in the same month last year. Retail sales were described as making a good record.

Continuation of an upward trend in aircraft production in the first quarter was noted in a Commerce Department report. Output was figured to have increased about one-third compared with the first quarter last year, with 456 craft turned out against 349 in the 1935 period. Of the total 216 were for domestic civil use, 173 for the military and 67 for export.

Exports of fertilizer in the first four months more than doubled in value compared with the corresponding 1935 period, the Commerce Department reports. The total was $7,084,500 against $3,086,000. A tendency toward self-sufficiency in supplies of fertilizer was noted, with the proportion of exports to imports growing.

A substantial gain in German sales of railroad equipment in the world market has been reported to the Commerce Department. A recent order for 40 locomotives from South African railways was noted. Last year German locomotive exports jumped to 157 from 79 in 1934. In contrast, foreign business of American producers has continued small.

Despite a drop from the March figure, air express carried in April was more than double the volume for the comparable month last year, the Bureau of Air Commerce reports. The total was 483,505 pounds against 235,335 in April last year and 535,736 in March.

UTILITIES AND OILS FEATURE CURB SALES

Week-end Market Very Quiet and Course Is Irregular.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Curb market stocks followed an irregular course in today's brief session, with utilities and oils furnishing the main interest on the upside.

Fractional improvement was shown by Electric Bond & Share, Creole Petroleum, Gulf Oil, International Petroleum, Niagara Hudson Power, New Jersey Zinc and Technicolor.

Issues holding unchanged or losing minor amounts included American Cynamid "B," Atlas Corp., Fisk Rubber, Excello Aircraft, Hudson Bay, Pennroad and Wright Hargreaves.

Trading was extremely quiet, total sales approximating 66,000 shares, compared with 121,000 two weeks ago, the last Saturday the market was open.

NON-FERROUS METALS TRADE FEATURED BY SLUMP IN TIN

Price Rebounds Some From a 2¼c Setback to Low for the Year.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Erratic price movements in tin claimed the major interest in non-ferrous metals last week.

After breaking 2¼c a pound, establishing new lows for the year, tin regained 1¼c of the loss. The recovery reflected renewed consumer buying and the advance in sterling exchange.

Lead business generally continued in good volume at steady prices. Estimates putting away shipments at 32,000 to 34,000 tons were disappointing, but on the other hand the explanation offered for the shrinkage of 6000 to 8000 tons from the preceding month was that April's deliveries were unusually large.

Inertia again marked the copper market. Foreign and domestic trade was slow, with prices holding steady and unchanged. Abroad, buying interest was restricted by political and economic unsettlement in France.

Zinc purchases were reported at 4800 tons, or 2800 tons over the previous week. Special significance was attached to the fact that buyers were taking larger tonnages for future shipment, with some specified for August and September delivery.

Maintenance of steel operations on the upgrade reflected desire of consumers to anticipate needs prior to price advances for the third quarter.

Antimony was quiet and unchanged, with maturing needs setting the buying pace.

UTILITIES AND RAILS LEAD IN BOND MARKET

Modest Demand for an Assortment of Low-Priced Members of the Above Group of Liens.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Modest demand for an assortment of low-priced utilities and rails provided the principal source of strength in the bond market today.

United States Governments slid back for minor losses near the close after holding unchanged to a shade higher during the early part of the abbreviated session. Government bond circles attributed the slight recession to the absence from the street of many dealers and traders who extended Friday's annual outing of the bond club to a week-end holiday.

Foreign affairs continued to dominate the news. Investment quarters were particularly interested in the efforts of the new Socialist Government in Paris to quiet labor unrest which has further complicated an already precarious economic situation prevailing in the republic for several months.

The general run of foreign dollar bonds displayed a liking for higher levels, but the volume was too small to judge accurately the basis for the improvement. French 7½s, German (Dawes) 7s and Italian 7s were a little higher, and the two Japanese issues that suffered a sinking spell late in the week as a result of Sino-Japanese tension, also were steadier.

Corporate bonds closing minor fractions to more than a point higher included Southern Railway 4s at 62¼, New York Central 5s at 94¼, "Katy" adjustment 5s at 57¾, International Telephone 5s at 91⅝, St. Paul 5s at 20¼, and American & Foreign Power 5s at 74½.

The Associated Press averages ranged from an advance of .1 of a point in the utilities to a similar decline in the industrials.

Sales of all bonds totaled $3,559,000, par value, against $4,518,000 Saturday two weeks ago. The market was closed last Saturday.

TRENDS IN THE TRADES

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Both in volume and price trends, print cotton cloths showed improvement last week, it was reported in selling quarters. The gray goods division also accounted for larger sales at prices generally above the low levels of the last few weeks.

Floor Coverings—Hard surface floor covering is reported moving in better volume on liberal reorders from retailers. Jobbing circles estimate stocks of roll goods and rugs have been depleted by the past month's active retail buying.

Glass—"American Glass Review" notes further improvement in demand for flat glass for building purposes, with other branches of the industry preparing for the usual summer quiet.

Hardware—Favorable weather conditions are helping to maintain a good level of activity in the wholesale market, according to dealers. Retailers have been active buyers of garden hose, lawn mowers and tools.

Lubricants—Quotations on Pennsylvania bright oil stock, used in blending lubricating oils, have been advanced ½ cent a gallon.

DROUTH RELIEF IN NORTHWEST EASES WHEAT

Sharp Price Range at Minneapolis Also Exerts Influence on Other Centers—Corn Price Lower.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 6.—Dominating all else in the wheat market today was a partial break-up of drouth conditions northwest, together with consequent downturns of prices.

A maximum fall of 3¼ cents a bushel for July wheat contracts took place at Minneapolis, where there had been an all-night rain. In Chicago, Winnipeg and Kansas City markets, however, bearish effects were only moderate, and a general trade verdict was that for the most part the rains had been light, and not the widespread drenching which was hoped for to dispel drouth.

Wheat in Chicago closed nervous, ⅝@⅞c under yesterday's finish, July 84¼c, Sept. 84⅞@85c; Dec. 87@87⅛c. Corn ⅛@⅝c down, July 60¼@⅜c, Sept. 57¼c, Dec. 52⅜c. Oats unchanged to ⅛c off, July 24¾@⅞c, and rye showing ¾@⅞c decline, July 53¾.

In provisions, the outcome was unchanged to 5 cents lower.

Relief from Drouth.

From the outset, wheat values were responsive to evidence that substantial relief from drouth had been given to at least some sections where dearth of moisture has been menacing crops northwest both sides of the Canadian border. Chicago wheat prices steadied, though, after September contracts here had touched 84½ cents, 1⅛@1¼ cents overnight tumble. Indications at this juncture were that rains elsewhere than in Minneapolis were much less copious, and it was concluded by many traders that the drouth, taken as a whole, was far from ended.

An opposite influence nevertheless was the official weekly forecast pointing to likelihood of cooler temperatures and frequent showers ahead in spring wheat areas, conditions that were generally construed as bearish. Furthermore, the weather prospects for winter wheat states next week, Kansas in particular, were looked upon as ideal relative to harvest work. Serving also as a drag on prices was lack of export demand for Canadian wheat.

Corn Is Down.

Some of the selling of wheat today was based on chances that the rains would spread westward, especially into parts of North Dakota, where moisture dearth has been severe. On the other hand, extreme weakness displayed by the Minneapolis market today was ascribed in some degree to the fact that prices there had recently reflected the dry weather crisis to a more radical extent than was the case in other leading wheat centers.

Corn, oats and rye, as well as provisions, all sympathized somewhat with wheat weakness. Improved crop prospects for corn were likewise a factor, together with liberal primary receipts. Moderate selling of rye was credited to the Northwest.

Wheat futures purchases yesterday totaled 17,727,000 bushels, corn 2,581,000. Open interest in wheat was 65,344,000 bushels and in corn 21,059,000.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, June 6.—July wheat lost more than a cent at the week's final session on report of Northwest rain. Other grain futures were offered lower.

Liverpool wheat closed ⅛@¾d lower after ½@¾d higher start. Winnipeg wheat opened ⅜@½c lower and early was ⅞@1c off. The close was 1⅛c net lower.

Local wheat receipts, which were 67,500 bu., compared with holiday a week ago and 9000 a year ago included 15 cars local and 3 through. Corn receipts, which were 48,000 bu., compared with holiday a week ago and 34,500 a year ago, included 23 cars local and 9 through. Oats receipts, which were 40,000 bu., compared with holiday a week ago and 22,000 a year ago, included 18 cars olcal and 2 through.

ST. LOUIS CASH GRAIN

In the cash grain market Saturday, soft wheat was nominally 1@1½c lower. Supply was comparatively large and generally of good quality, but in spite of good inquiry, nothing was done. Buyers and sellers were apart. Hard wheat No. 2 sold at 90c. One car changed hands. Corn was 1½@3c lower for yellow and unchanged to 1½c lower for white. Trading started slowly, but a good demand developed and a clearance was made. Mills, feeders and industries took the yellow corn, while elevators and outside order buyers bought white. Oats were ½@1c lower. A fair clearance was made of the somewhat improved supply. Mills, shippers and elevators were the buyers.

30 PCT. GAIN IN COTTON EXPORTS IN 10 MONTHS

Increase in Value, However, Only 23 Per Cent, Bureau Says.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—A Bureau of Agricultural Economics report said today that the "moderate upturn" in United States exports of farm products which began in October, 1935, was maintained during April.

The volume index of farm products exported from the United States during April stood at 52, the same as in March, but was four points above the index of 48 for April, 1935. The volume exported during the period 1909-1914 is used to equal 100 in computing the index.

For the 10 months ending April 30 the index was 61, compared to an index of 55 for the same period a year ago, and the bureau said the increase represented a gain of 11 per cent in volume.

Cotton Export Index.

Total exports of agricultural products from July 1, 1935, to April 30, 1936, were valued at $681,769,000, a gain of 16 per cent over the comparative period of 1934-35, when the total value was $588,373,000.

The April index for cotton exports was 71, the highest since December, 1935, and a gain of four points over the index of 67 for April, 1935. Exports of fruits hit the unusual high of 300 on the index, exceeding the exports of the preceding four months and marking the highest since 1930. Increases also were recorded by unmanufactured tobacco, wheat and lard, as compared with April of last year. However, exports of cured pork and other grains fell below the total for April, 1935.

Cotton Exports Gain.

Foreign markets were reported to have absorbed 5,716,000 bales of American cotton during the 10 months ended April 30, a gain of 30 per cent over the 4,410,000 bales taken during the corresponding season a year earlier. However, the bureau said the cotton sales were made at a slightly lower price, and the gain in value of cotton exports was only 23 per cent. The average export value of cotton this season was 12.3 cents per pound, compared to 12.9 cents a year ago. Exports to Italy, Spain, Sweden, China and British India were said to have taken a downward turn, while the shipments to most other countries increased sharply.

While cotton prices were somewhat lower than last season, most of the fruit exported this season was at higher prices than a year ago. Exports of leaf tobacco for the 10 months were 380,780,000 pounds, valued at $132,617,000, compared to 324,818,000 pounds, valued at $113,525,000 a year earlier.

NEW DEALER USED APPROACH OF OXFORD GROUP ON PROBLEM

Assistant Attorney-General Blair Says "Quiet Period" Helped Solve Difficulty.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKBRIDGE, Mass., June 6.—Harry Blair, assistant United States Attorney-General, told a group of professional and business men at an Oxford group meeting today how the group's ideals helped him solve a legal problem confronting the New Deal.

Blair, husband of Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, former chairman of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee, said he became affiliated with the movement last February while greatly troubled with the official matter. Mrs. Blair has been in the group a year.

"I will not go into details," said Blair, "but the head of a Government department, a United States Senator from the West, and other influential persons wanted a suit brought. I had studied the matter carefully and had decided the suit should not be brought. While in Florida on a needed rest I met Frank (Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman founder of the group). I told him my problem. We had a 'quiet time.' Then Frank told me what guidance he had received. I thought nothing much of it at the time but the matter worked itself out along Frank's suggestion. And I've found out that my 'quiet time' every morning gives me a better start for the day."

SPRINGFIELD, N. J., June 6.—Blasting all open championship records to bits in a heart-throbbing finish, dapper little Tony Manero, 31-year-old Italian-American professional, shot the greatest round of the tournament today to snatch the American Open crown from "Lighthorse Harry" Cooper, the hard-luck man of golf, by a two-shot margin.

Four strokes back of Cooper, starting the final round, Manero came from behind in the stretch like a Man O' War to capture the greatest scoring Derby ever witnessed in a national title tournament. He ripped two strokes off the Baltusrol course record with a closing 67, five under par, finished four shots under the former American record with a 72-hole total of 282, and made it a world mark by bettering by a stroke the best previous performance made in a British open championship.

Born and raised in the little town of Elmsford, N. Y., just north of New York City and a product of the caddie ranks, Manero represented the Sedgefield Country Club of Greensboro, N. C., in sweeping to the most spectacular victory since Gene Sarazen scored his second title victory four years ago.

Heart Breaker for Cooper.

Succeeding to the title yielded without much of a struggle by Sam Parks Jr., Manero produced successive rounds of 73, 69, 73 and 67 for his record-smashing total. Never before a serious championship contender, in 10 years of trying, Tony simply went wild at the climax of the dizziest shot-making tournament on record.

They were getting ready to pay off on Cooper until Tony came along to hand "Lighthorse Harry" the most heart-breaking defeat of a career studded with disappointments in major competition. The Chicago professional, playing the

The Wild Horse tried to sneak over to third from second while Carl Hubbell was pitching to Joe Medwick in the opening inning of yesterday's double-bill between the Cardinals and Giants but Catcher Harry Danning's throw got to Third-baseman Eddie Mayo in time, and Pepper was ruled out by Umpire Charley Moran.

Whitbread Regains District Golf Title, Beating Bockenkamp

By W. J. McGoogan.

Elliott Whitbread, Westborough Country Club star, recaptured the St. Louis district golf championship, defeating Dick Brockenkamp, Algonquin, 4 and 3, in the 36-hole final of the 21st annual tournament at Westwood country club yesterday.

Whitebread last won the title in 1930, while Bockenkamp, a two-time victor, was champion in 1920 and 1921.

Bockenkamp took the lead at the first hole in the morning and finished the first 18 holes 1 up. Whitbread squared the match at the nineteenth hole, saw Bockenkamp go 1 up again and it was not until the twenty-sixth that he took the lead. Then he won four holes in succession as Bockenkamp's putter continued to act badly. After that it was just a question of how many holes it would take, although Dick won the thirtieth to be 3 down, only to see Whitbread win the next, then halve one to finish on the thirty-third green.

At the beginning of the day Bockenkamp was putting in great form and he finished the morning round with a 77 to 78 for Whitbread, but in the afternoon Dick just couldn't get a putt to drop. He was getting them up to the hole but they would not go down, while the farther the match went the better Elliott became. Dick required 42 strokes going out in the afternoon and was only two under 5s for the remaining six holes, while Whitbread had a 38 on the out nine and was only one over par for the last nine.

Whitbread marched steadily to the title, playing perhaps the best golf in the championship fight and it was only against Bockenkamp that he was ever down. He was slightly bad around the greens in the morning but his driving was fine and in the afternoon he got the touch to his short game.

The Morning Round.

Whitbread gummed up the first hole, after hitting a splendid drive around the dog leg to the left, but took a 5 to be one down when Bockenkamp got his par.

They were both trapped at the second and halved it with 4s, while Bockenkamp lammed out a great drive at the third about 300 yards long, followed with an equally great pitch shot, to go 2 up.

Dick pushed his tee shot to the

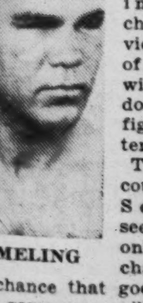
WRAY'S COLVMN

Anyhow, It's Good Business.

MIKE JACOBS still out-Rickards Tex Rickard. That stroke of signing Schmeling to meet Champion Braddock in September, provided he beats Louis, was just what the doctor ordered.

It will boom the old box office play.

It will protect Mike in case his contract boy Louis, loses.



SCHMELING

It leaves Mike in full control of the situation if Louis wins.

But it can't in the least change the conviction of most of us that there will be no Braddock-Schmeling fight next September.

The reason, of course, is that Schmeling seems to have only a gambling chance to win—the chance that goes with every good game man willing to tackle an uphill task.

Reports say that Schmeling is better than he ever was. We can concede that and still believe he is not good enough to beat Louis, who has fought 13 fights since January and won all but two by knockouts. Schmeling has fought ten fights since 1930, lost twice, was knocked out another time and could only draw with poor old Woodchopper Uzcudun.

Last year he fought two fights—stopping Steve Hamas and outpointing Paulino in a return bout. You can't figure a winner from a record like that, especially when Max must concede weight and about nine years of youth to his opponent.

It Could Happen.

LOUIS and Schmeling, two counter punchers by preference, can make a pretty dull fight of that million dollar show next June 18, if each waits for the other to do the leading. Matching counter fighters usually results in a dull display, with the

MRS. McGARRY WINS IN SOUTHERN GOLF

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., June 6.—Mrs. Mark McGarry of St. Petersburg, Fla., won the Southern women's golf championship today by defeating Miss Betty Jameson of San Antonio, Tex., in the 36-hole finals, 2 and 1.

The Florida matron, a great match player, was the steadier through the 35 holes of the final match. She ended the morning round all square with the 17-year-old Texan and picked up two holes on the out nine in the afternoon. Holding to the lead the remainder of the way she closed out the match on the thirty-fifth green with a par 4 as Miss Jameson was taking a 5.

The victory gave Mrs. McGarry her first major golf tournament championship.

a Trainer J. Fitzsimmons entry.

Granville ran a remarkable race. He got away fast, was restrained for the first six furlongs, began to move up in run down back stretch, was forced to go wide turning out of back stretch and entering final quarter mile he was still way out in the track but closed fast. Caught Mr. Bones, at the sixteenth pole and outgamed him to the finish. Mr. Bones, showing smart improvement over his recent effort, was sent to the front with a rush, raced Jean Bart into defeat in the first seven furlongs then drew away, saved ground, and held on with rare courage. Hollyrood broke very fast, was eased back going into the first half mile, began to close ground and stood long drive gamely. Corundum broke slow and trailed far back for the first six furlongs, came to the inside and finished fast. Brevity got away well and clear of interference, made his bid in run down back stretch but stopped badly when the real test came. Teufel unusually unruly at the gate, got away good, but lacked speed and failed to close any ground. Memory Book was well up in early part, but tired badly. Jean Bart was a stout factor for a mile then quit. Red Rain never a factor. He was outrun from the start. Isolater was eased up at end.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The champion hard luck horse of the year finally broke his jinx today as William Woodward's Granville, a son of Gallant Fox, staged a finish reminiscent of his famous sire to win the 68th running of America's oldest race—the Belmont Stakes.

Reversing the order of the finishes that saw him lose three important races by hair-line decisions, Granville got up in the final stride to nose John Hay Whitney's Mr. Bones, a rank outsider, out of the purse of $29,800. Hal Price Headley's Hollyrood, also a long shot, was another eight lengths back, showing the way to seven other high class three-year-olds, including J. E. Widener's Brevity, the 4-to-5 choice.

The victory, worth 16 to 5 to the backer of the triple entry that also included Isolator and Teufel, was the fourth triumph chalked up in the classic in seven years by the New York banker. Gallant Fox won in his white and red spotted silks in 1930; Faireno came through in 1932 and Omaha, also sired by the Fox, took last year's renewal.

Judges Consult Camera Record.

None was more thrilling than today's victory, witnessed by more than 30,000 spectators, the largest crowd in recent years at a New York track. Unlike his other races, Granville was held off the early pace by Jimmy Stout and then set down as the field made the turn leading into the stretch. At that, however, Granvillle just managed to take the decision in a finish so close that the judges called for a photograph before posting the numbers. He ran the mile and a half in the good time of 2:30.

The performance of Brevity was as much a surprise as was the showing made by Mr. Bones, and Hollyrood, held at 25 to 30-, respectively. Brevity, on the basis of his fast closing seconds in the Kentucky Derby and Withers Mile after being knocked about at the start, was heavily played. When it came to the running, however, he was not in it after the first mile and a quarter.

The Widener colt was in third place with Granville at his heels as Mr. Bones flashed past the marker

AL SMITH PITCHES 2-HIT SHUTOUT; DUROCHER'S BOOT COSTS REDBIRDS OPENER

Second Called After 7 Innings—Heusser Knocked Out of Box in First Contest, Parmelee in Second—Munns Does Fine Job of Relief Hurling Against Hubbell.

By J. Roy Stockton

They played baseball and mud pies at Sportsman's Park yesterday afternoon and the New York Giants, who played most of the baseball, cut two games off the first place lead of Frankie Frisch's Cardinals, who were responsible largely for the earthen pastry antics that kept many of the 27,000 customers in their seats for one hour and three minutes after the last play of the baseball program.

Carl Hubbell was far from being at his best in the first game. The Cardinals pounded him for 12 hits, but they wasted their last fine opportunity by reason of unfortunately over-cautious base running and an unearned run that crossed the plate in the seventh inning gave Hubbell the decision, 4 to 3.

In the second game, Al Smith was the big hero. That stoutish young man, a product of the South St. Louis municipal diamonds, hurled his third straight shutout, giving the Cardinals only two hits in the seven innings that preceded the rain and mud-pie performance, and winning by the comfortable score of 7 to 0.

Meet Mr. Leslie Munns!

There were a few scraps of comfort and cheer for the Cardinals, despite the fact that their first-place margin was cut in half. In the first game, Leslie Munns, allegedly a competitor for baseball's Wild Man of Borneo title, pitched seven and two-thirds brilliant innings. Cheers about Munns' performance are tempered by the fact that he has had occasional flashes of pitching brilliance before this. But just the same, it was very encouraging to see him stand the Giants on their ears, after they had bombarded Ed Heusser with gusto and no consideration for the fact that he is the Wild Elk of the Wasatch.

The Giants made three of their four runs in that first game off Heusser. There were four singles in the first inning, but only one run, thanks to a double play that interrupted the New Yorkers' free and easy swinging. In the second, Eddie Mayo hit a home run, Bartell was hit by a pitched ball and was forced by Hubbell, and when Joe Moore doubled, scoring Hubbell, Munns was called from the bull pen.

And Mr. Extra Caution!

Munns was in trouble in two innings, but pitched himself out of one dangerous situation, holding the Giants in check after they had filled the bases with one out. In the seventh, however, Joe Moore singled and was forced by Whitehead, who stole second. Terry flied to Medwick and after Ott walked, Leiber grounded to short, but Durocher, after getting into position to field the hot grounder, missed connections and as the ball rolled to left field, Whitehead scampered home with the run that proved the New York margin of victory.

Durocher opened the seventh as if he would quickly atone for his very pardonable error. He smashed a triple over Hank Leiber's head, but it was at that point that too much caution crept in—an unheard-of-thing in the Gas House precinct. Mike Gonzales was coaching at third base and the Senor makes few mistakes. Perhaps this was not one. Perhaps only the fortunes of war. Perhaps orders had been issued. At any rate, when Frisch hit a high bounder over Hubbell's head, the customers were nonplussed, flabber-gasted and saturated with chagrin when they saw Durocher standing there at third base. He could have scored easily. Whitehead caught the ball with just enough time to get Frisch at second and when Munns struck out and Terry Moore popped to Bartell, the triple was wasted and the final chance to score against Hubbell gone.

Parmelee Bites the Dust.

LeRoy "Tarzan" Parmelee was knocked out of the box by his former teammates in the second game, the second straight time he suffered that indignity at their hands. He breezed through the first inning as if set for a fine afternoon, but in the second Leiber singled, Mancuso singled and Mayo doubled and the only thing that prevented a score there was a fine play by Stuart Martin and Brusie Ogrodowski. Stuart ran out and retrieved the ball when it bounced back from the pavilion wall and his throw reached Ogrodowski just as Leiber slid for the plate and Hank retired himself by brushing the glove that held the ball.

In the third Parmelee hit Smith with a pitched ball and Joe Moore, Whitehead and Leslie singled to score one run. Ott then hit a low liner to center and Terry Moore made a catch that ended all talk

CALDWELL'S HOMER GIVES BROWNS A SPLIT WITH MACKMEN

SMASH BREAKS A 3 TO 3 TIE; THOMAS LOSES OPENER, 6-5

Brownie Pitcher Unable to Hold Five-Run Lead — Athletics Score Six After Carey Fumbles Grounder for Third Out.

By James M. Gould
Of the Post-Dispatch Sports Staff.

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—One really must forgive those Browns. They fully intended to move out of the cellar this afternoon by winning two games from the Athletics but they failed to consult the fates, Rabbit Warstler and Tommy Carey and so had to be content with breaking even in a doubleheader. They lost the first game, 6 to 5 and won the second, 5 to 3.

The first game was a heartbreaker for Al Thomas pitched scoreless ball and held the Mackmen to three hits in the first six innings. But, in the seventh, with two out, Hayes sent a simple grounder to Carey who fumbled and set the stage for a six run rally which was climaxed by Warstler's homer with two on.

Caldwell Wins Own Game.

Earl Caldwell, Hornsby's starter in No. 2, personally conducted his own victory. With the score all even at 3-3, after eight frames, Caldwell came to bat in the ninth with Carey on second and proceeded to hit the ball into the left field seats. A rather unique way for a pitcher to win his own game but decidedly effective.

Had the Browns taken both games they would now be in seventh place. As things stand, however, even a victory in tomorrow's final cannot move them up and they are then due to visit a couple of the tougher cities—New York and Boston.

Nevertheless, the Browns deserve some credit for their record on this trip as they have won seven and lost eight, a percentage of .463 or more than 100 points better than their pace for the season.

In both games today, the Browns outhit the Athletics. In each affair, they collected 11 hits, the Mackmen getting eight in the opener and only six in the nightcap.

Bottomley Scores on Passed Ball.

In the first game, the Browns made Fink look good in the first, but rather bad thereafter. Bottomley opened the second with a double to right, moved up on Bell's out and scored on a passed ball. Carey opened the third with a two-bagger and, after Thomas had sacrificed and Lary had struck out for the second time, crashed the gate when Clift doubled. Fink had even more trouble in the fourth. He walked Bell, first up, and Beau scored from first when West hit a tremendous double to center. Hemsley sacrificed West along and Carey scored him with a single, Tommy's second hit. Thomas then sacrificed and Lary bounced a single to left which scored Carey with the third run of the inning.

Three times in the first four frames, the Athletics got their first man on, but they neglected, in each case, the formality of getting him all the way round.

All Athletics' Runs Unearned.

It was not until the seventh that the Athletics broke through and took a bad error on a simple ground ball by Carey to give them the chance. They took full advantage of the chance, however, for, with the bases filled, and two out, Pinch Hitter Dean doubled for three runs. Thomas then walked Finney and Warstler sent the Mackmen ahead with a homer into the left field seats. All these runs, of course, were unearned.

Dietrich then went in to pitch for Uncle Connie. West singled and after Hemsley had sacrificed moved to third on Carey's infield hit. While Higgins held the ball at third Carey sneaked to second. Coleman batted for Thomas and walked to fill the bases, but Lary bounced into a double play.

Knott pitched the eighth for the Browns and got by. In the ninth, the Browns got their first two men on, but after Bottomley had sacrificed Bell struck out and West accepted a third strike.

Solters' Triple Scores Run.

Again in the second game, the Browns opened their attack early, scoring two in the first on Lary's bunt, Solters' triple and a long fly from Bottomley's bat.

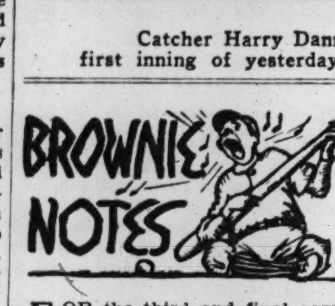
Caldwell, though, didn't go so far as Thomas before being scored upon for the Mackmen came back with a run in the second half on Warstler's triple slowly played by Coleman and Moses' infield out.

This 2-1 ratio in favor of the Browns was maintained until the fourth, when the Athletics tied it up on a pass to Moses, his steal and Higgins' single to left.

It took three hits to put the Browns one run ahead in the sixth. Clift started with a single, but was forced by Solters. Bottomley singled Julius to third and Bell scored him with a hit to deep short. And, Caldwell had to do plenty of pitching to prevent a tie or worse in the last half. Warstler singled and Moses walked, but Puccinelli rolled out, Warstler run down on Higgins' drive to short and Johnson obliged by striking out.

As in the first game, the seventh inning was hurtful for Hayes hit a homer to tie the count at 3-3.

In the ninth Carey led off with a double and Caldwell picked this spot to hit his homer. 'Twas the winning wallop.



FOR the third and final game the series tomorrow, the probable pitchers are either Ivy Andrews or Jack Knott for the Browns and Lee Ross for the Athletics.

Philadelphia fans like their new catcher, Charley Moss. The kid comes from Meridian, Miss., and was recommended by Eric McNair, the Red Sox infielder, who comes from the same city.

The attendance of 9000 while not exactly stupendous, was satisfactory. Philadelphians have plenty of places to go over the week-end and they generally go, too.

This Herman Fink certainly started the first game with a rush. He pushed over a third strike on Lary, made Clift swing at a third one and disposed of Solters on a pop fly.

The Athletics' present shortstop is A. Niemiec. You can fashion your own quip out of that. His first name really is Al.

In the opener, the first four Brownie hits were doubles. The fifth was Carey's second hit — a single which scored a runner.

Thomas was determined to sacrifice in the fourth and he bunted on a third strike and advanced his man.

The first game today was the second of the trip which Thomas lost by throwing a home-run ball at the wrong time. The other was in Chicago.

Hornsby didn't care so much about West's taking a third strike to end the opener so he benched him in favor of Coleman in No. 2. The Rajah believes if they're enough to call, they're good enough to hit at.

DOWN WENT DANNING—And Over the Plate Went Terry Moore

—By a Post-Dispatch Staff Photographer.

CUBS' SIX-RUN RALLY IN SIXTH HELPS TO BEAT DODGERS, 10-4

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 6.—Paced by First Baseman Phil Cavarretta, who hit a homer and a three-run double, the Cubs continued their batting spree through the third straight day today, pounding the Brooklyn Dodgers for a 10 to 4 victory.

A six-run splurge in the sixth, with Lefty Clark and George Earnshaw the pitching victims, put the game on ice for the Cubs, despite Brooklyn homers by Frenchy Bordagaray in the first and Linus Frey in the eighth.

Tex Carleton gave out nine hits to the Dodgers, but held them hitless in four of the nine innings to chalk up his sixth victory of the season.

Cardinals Lose Two Games To the Giants 4-3 and 7-0

of all other catches he ever made. Moore ran in for the ball and just a she was diving for it, it took a dip to his right, after the fashion of a sliced golf ball. But Terry Moore saw the dip, stuck out his right hand as he skidded over the turf and caught the ball. Before he could scramble to his feet and throw, Joe Moore had scored the second run of the inning.

Parmelee was knocked out in the fifth. Joe Moore tripled and Whitehead singled. Leslie walked, after a wild pitch had advanced Whitehead to second. Ott then lined a home run to the pavilion roof, his eleventh of the season, scoring behind Whitehead and Leslie. Parmelee stayed on the hill while Leiber grounded out, Mancuso doubled and Mayo walked, after which Bill Cox, a recruit from Columbus, took over the pitching. Whitehead's double and Leslie's single scored the Giants' seventh run in the sixth.

It was raining lightly through the sixth and seventh innings and as Collins flied out for the third out in the seventh, it turned into a downpour.

Time was called and after 15 minutes or so the skies cleared, but the infield was almost a hog wallow. The chances of putting the field into condition for play seemed remote, but Manager Frisch is a die-hard. He pointed and argued with Messrs. Quigley, Magerkurth and Moran and finally they agreed to see what the groundskeeper's helpers could do.

Eleven men with brooms appeared at Frisch's command. They swept water from one place to another. When they had swept and swept and swept, they put down their brooms and there was a parade of bucket-carriers, who scattered moulder's sand on the muddy field, patting mud pies here and rolling mud rolls there.

Meantime several thousand of the original 27,000 cash customers were enjoying the exhibition of men at work, punctuating the proceedings with raucous calls for the athletes to play ball.

After one hour and three minutes of hard work by the broom wielders, the bucket carriers, the moulder's sand scatterers and the sand rakers, the field was still a sad looking thing and finally Umpire Quigley, who should have known better sooner, announced after a conference with his comrades, that the game had been called.

There was a loud booh of protest from the remaining customers, who had grown to like the business of watching. And as there was no steam shovel at work in the neighborhood, and not even a cellar digging project, they all packed up and went home. That is, all but the broom, bucket and rake boys. They stayed at work, for the show must go on and there will be another game this afternoon.

RED BIRD NOTES

PAUL DEAN and Hal Schumacher probably will be the starting pitchers in the final game of the series with the Giants this afternoon.

The doubleheader attracted 27,000 cash customers.

Danning was behind the plate in the first game, his first appearance since the 17-inning game of April 29, in which he suffered a fractured finger.

Stuart Martin sacrificed on his first trip to the plate againsts Hubbell and in the third he tripled to left center, making 17 straight games in which he had hit safely. Stuart hit with a count of two strikes and no balls.

The Giants filled the bases with one out in the fourth inning of the opener, but Munns pitched out of danger. Mayo and Bartell walked and on Hubbell's bunt, Mayo was forced at third, Munns to Frisch. Joe Moore then beat out a high bounder to Stu Martin for the first hit off Munns, after which Whitehead forced Bartell at the plate and Terry forced Whitehead at second.

Ott walked to start the fifth, but Leiber hit into a double play and Munns stopped Danning's hot grounder with his chest and threw out the runner. The crowds gave the recruit a cheer when he went to bat in the home fifth.

Pepper Martin made four straight singles in the first game and went out running three times. In the first he was out stealing third; in the third, he tried to steal second, and in the sixth, Hubbell threw to first as Pepper dashed for second, and he was out, on Terry's relay to Whitehead.

With Leiber on second and Mancuso on first in the second inning of the second game, Mayo doubled against the right-field wall, but Stuart Martin ran back and took the ball as it bouhded back from the concrete, and his throw to Ogrodowski caught Leiber sliding for the plate.

Stuart Martin's batting streak was stopped in the second game. He was called out on strikes twice and fouled to the catcher on his other trip to the plate.

Lefthanders have caused the Cardinals much trouble this season. Recent winning streaks have been halted by Al Hollingsworth of the Reds, Ed Brandt of the Dodgers and now Hubbell and Smith of the Giants.

EAST ALTON, ILL. TRAPSHOOTER HITS 200 IN ROW

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, June 6.—Still dominating the field, Hale C. Jones of East Alton, Ill., smashed 200 straight targets in the Missouri singles competition of the State trapshoot here today to establish a record consecutive run of 295 for two days of firing.

Barred from a State title by his out-of-State residence, Jones was awarded the Elliott Cup, a trophy presented annually by R. W. Elliott, of Kansas City, to the shooter turning in the most straight hits in the singles and classification matches of the State event.

The Missouri championship went to G. H. Allen, of Raymore, after breaking a three-way deadlock with Charles Ehler, of Slater and Elliott of Kansas City in a shoot-off.

The trio scored a 195 out of a possible 200 in the regular firing before Allen captured the shoot-off by breaking 24 of his 25 chances. Elliott broke 23 and Ehler 22.

Mrs. Lela Hall of Stratsburg, world's champion woman shot, earned the State women's crown with a score of 192 on 200 discs. Back of her were Mrs. R. W. Elliott of Kansas City with a 173, Mary Null, also of Kansas City with a 173, and Florence Mos of Kansas City, Kan., also with a 173.

To 10-year-old Raymond Fienup, of St. Louis, went the State junior championship with a count of 119 on 200 birds. His brother, four years older, was his only opponent and finished far back with a 58.

Forty-four marksmen, most of them from Kansas City and St. Louis, matched their skill in the singles competition. The scores in the event, which called for 200 targets at 16 yards, also counted in other championship contests of the day.

Topping the closing day of the three-day shoot tomorrow are the Missouri handicap and the zone team championship. In the handicap, the entrants are to be penalized from 16, 59, 25 yards on their amateur trapshooting association averages and their known ability.

In addition to his brilliant consecutive strike record, Jones' two-day performance at the traps included only three misses on 400 shots, 100 of which were made in the Missouri doubles championship. In the classification event yesterday he turned in a 99 out of a 100 and later clipped 98 of the 100 blue rocks released by pairs in the doubles.

Thirteen of the shooters today scored 190 or better in the singles with Mrs. Hall tied for seventh place with J. E. Morgan of Salem with her 192. Other women competing finished well back.

INDIANS TRIM YANKEES, 4-2; JOE DI MAGGIO FAILS TO HIT

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—The Indians who had been beaten six straight times previously by the Yankees, turned on the league leaders here this afternoon to score a 4 to 2 victory. Mel Harder, Cleveland's right-handed ace, making his first appearance against the Yanks this season, limited them to six hits for his seventh victory.

In triumphing, Harder outpitched Monte Pearson, who suffered his third defeat. Pearson gave up nine hits before he was lifted in the eighth for a pinch hitter. Billy Sullivan, their sensational rookie catcher, who took over the cleanup duties today, led the barrage with a triple and two singles.

Home runs accounted for both Yankee runs. Lou Gehrig hit his tenth of the season and Tony Lazzeri his ninth, both in the second inning. Otherwise, Harder stopped the Yankee attack cold. His control was perfect and he did not give up a base on balls.

Harder, in addition to stopping the Yanks, also stopped Rookie Joe Di Maggio, who had hit safely through the 18 preceding games. Di Maggio failed to get a ball out of the infield in four tries.

ROWE PITCHES TIGERS TO VICTORY OVER SENATORS, 10-4

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Yielding only seven hits, Schoolboy Rowe held the Washington Senators in check today while his Detroit Tiger teammates clubbed out a 10-to-4 victory.

Three Washington pitchers tried unsuccessfully to tame the Tigers who again were playing without their ailing manager, Mickey Cochrane. The visitors collected 13 hits, three of which were singles smashed out by Catcher Reiber in four times up.

Rowe was making his first pitching start since May 30, when he was charged with his second straight loss and dropped out of the regular mound order because of trouble with his teeth. John Lewis' double was the only extra base hit he allowed today, while striking out two and allowing three bases on balls.

Asks for 9 and 4, Gets 6 and 4, Wins "Double" of $1738

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 6.

A MISTAKE by an employe at Riverside Racetrack here today made O. N. Shelton of Fort Leavenworth, Kan., richer by $1738.20.

Shelton asked for a combination of horse Nos. 9 and 4 at the daily double window, he said, but instead was given 6 and 4. That combination won.

VAUGHAN HITS SAFELY IN 18TH GAME, BUT PIRATES LOSE, 5 TO 1

PITTSBURGH, June 6. — The Phillies drove big Jim Deaver from the mound today with a four-run assault in the first inning and scored a 5-1 victory over Pittsburgh behind Orville Jorgen's four-hit pitching.

Ralph Birkofer relieved Weaver in the first after the Phillies had touched him for four hits. Birkofer stopped the uprising but was replaced by Guy Bush after Philadelphia pushed another marker across in the third. Bush limited the Phillies to one hit in six innings. Cy Blanton hurled the ninth.

The Pirates' lone run came in the first as the result of Jose Gomez's error.

Arky Vaughan ran his hitting streak to 18 consecutive games.

REDS DIVIDE TWIN BILL WITH BEES

CINCINNATI, June 6.—The Boston Bees beat back the Cincinnati Reds' bid for fifth place in the National League today by scoring two runs in the tenth inning to win the second game of a double-header, 10 to 8, after the Reds had taken the first, 4 to 1, behind five-hit pitching by Southpaw Al Hollingsworth.

The victory gave Boston a two-to-one edge on the four-game series.

Successive triples by Berger and Haslin off Derringer, the Reds' fourth pitcher, and a single by Lee gave the Bees their tenth inning runs in the second game.

The Reds scored five times in the first. The Bees scored in the first on doubles by Urbanski and Jordan and added three more in the third when Berger hit a home run with two men on base. They tallied three more in the eighth.

The Reds tied it up at 8 runs in the ninth on Herman's walk, singles by Goodman and Cuyler, and Scarsella's triple.

right at the fourth, but hit the green with his second. So did Whitbread and the hole was halved with 4s.

Bockenkamp outdrove Elliott a little at the fifth, but pulled his second far to the left of the fairway, while Elliott played short of the trap on his second. They were both over the back edge with their thirds. Bockenkamp was strong with a chip, being 15 feet away, while Elliott left himself a six-footer and made it for his first win to be one down.

Both hit the sixth green with great seconds, Whitbread 12 feet away, Dick 20. Bockenkamp ran his down for the birdie and Elliott poured his ball right in on top for a half.

Dick Has Deuce on No. 7.

Whitbread was a little short at the seventh, while Dick was on, ran down his putt for a deuce, his third birdie, while Whitbread got his 3 and was 2 down again.

Bockenkamp pushed his tee shot at the eighth out of bounds into a creek at the right, hit a fine second, but his third was short, his fourth in a trap in a slight depression, and it took him two more to get out and he conceded the hole to Whitbread, who was on in four about 6 feet away.

Dick went two up again at the ninth when he got his par four, although Whitbread outdrove him. Elliott put his second over the green, pitched back nicely but missed his putt.

Whitbread Wins No. 10.

Whitbread pulled his drive at the tenth into the eighteenth fairway but made a fine second to the green and won the hole when Bockenkamp, above traps to the right of the green, chipped on and missed his putt.

They halved the eleventh in regulation par 4s and both were in the trap to the right and back of the twelfth green. Bockenkamp rolled his ball up the bank and to within five feet of the hole to get his par 3 while Whitbread took a 4 and was 2 down again.

Elliott reached the green at the 510-yard thirteenth hole with two fine shots and got a birdie 4 to win the hole from Bockenkamp's par 5 but Dick got that back at the fourteenth when Elliott, to the left of the trap at the left of the green with his second, pitched over the green, failed in his effort to pitch his fourth on and, when Bockenkamp rolled his approach putt within a few inches of the hole, Whitbread conceded.

Bockenkamp went 3 up at the fifteenth when he got a par 4 while Whitbread had trap trouble and took a 6, but Elliott got that back at the sixteenth when Bockenkamp, to the left with his tee shot, pitched far past the hole and took a 4 while Whitbread got his par 3.

They each three-putted the seventeenth, Bockenkamp missing a curling two-footer while Elliott was too bold trying for a downhill putt.

Whitbread hit a tremendous drive at the eighteenth but it caught a trap to the left; however, he made a great recovery to reach the green hole high, 12 feet to the right, while Bockenkamp was on in 2 but 25-feet away. Dick rolled his to within 30 inches but missed the putt and when Whitbread got down in two putts, he went to lunch only 1 down.

Afternoon Round.

Bockenkamp's putter, which had appeared to have soured on him the last two holes of the morning round, proved finicky in the afternoon, with the result that at the end of 27 holes he had lost the one up lead with which he started the last 18 holes and Whitbread had assumed a margin of two up. Dick had a bad 42 going out, while Whitbread played another steady 38.

Dick took a 6 on the nineteenth hole after putting his drive in the woods to the left of the fairway and lost to Whitbread's par 4.

Whitbread was in a ditch to the right of the twentieth green but he made a fine recovery shot to the green, while Bockenkamp on in one, putted to within two feet, then missed the putt to gain only a half on the hole.

They halved the twenty-first in par 4s, then Bockenkamp went back into the lead at the twenty-second when he reached the 395-yard green in two nice shots and was down in a par 4 to Elliott's 5.

Elliott was over the twenty-third green, 565 yards from the tee, with his second. He chipped back and missed his try for a birdie and the hole was halved with par 5s, while Whitbread's par 4 at the twenty-fourth evened the match again when Dick three-putted.

Whitbread was just short at the twenty-fifth, Bockenkamp was on the back edge. Whitbread barely missed his try for a deuce and the hole was halved with par 3s.

Eighth Hole Dick's Jinx.

The twenty-sixth hole, the same No. 8 which caused Bockenkamp so much trouble in the morning, brought him grief again when he hit a poor second, put his third in a trap and took two to reach the green. He conceded to Whitbread who was on in three, about 10 feet from the hole.

That put Whitbread up for the first time of the day and he immediately increased his margin to 2 up by taking the twenty-seventh with a par 4 when he hit the green with a fine second shot, while Dick was short with his second.

Whitbread went three up at the twenty-eighth when he made a fine recovery shot from a trap to get his par 4 to Bockenkamp's 5, while Elliott continued his streak at the next hole, chipping close to the cup with his third shot, and getting his par while Bockenkamp missed a fine try to get down a long putt.

A Single Birdie for the Round.

Elliott was trapped at the short thirtieth, while Bockenkamp was on and when Whitbread, who just got on the green with his second while Dick rolled his close, Elliott conceded the hole.

The thirty-first was halved with par 5s while Whitbread got the only birdie of the afternoon at the thirty-second, when he made a remarkable third shot to the 490-yard par 5 green, the ball stopping only about two feet from the hole. Bockenkamp, off the right edge with his third, barely missed his try for a birdie.

Neither had a good drive at the thirty-third. Whitbread put his second to the left and Bockenkamp went to the right. Dick pitched on across the green while Elliott was on some 15 feet from the hole. When Dick missed his try for a 4, Elliott played it safe and laid his dead for a sure 5 and the hole was halved to end the match.

Tournament Notes.

Bockenkamp won seven holes on the morning round, Whitbread six and five were halved.

Not more than 150 persons followed the morning round but the gallery increased to about 350 in the afternoon.

Bockenkamp had a tough break at the eighth in the morning when he put a shot into a trap to the left of the green and the ball rested in a slight depression, forcing Dick to explode. It took him two shots to get on the green and he had to concede the hole.

Corny Schnecko, treasurer of the St. Louis District Golf Association, refereed the first 18 holes, Sid LeGear, a former president, handled the afternoon round.

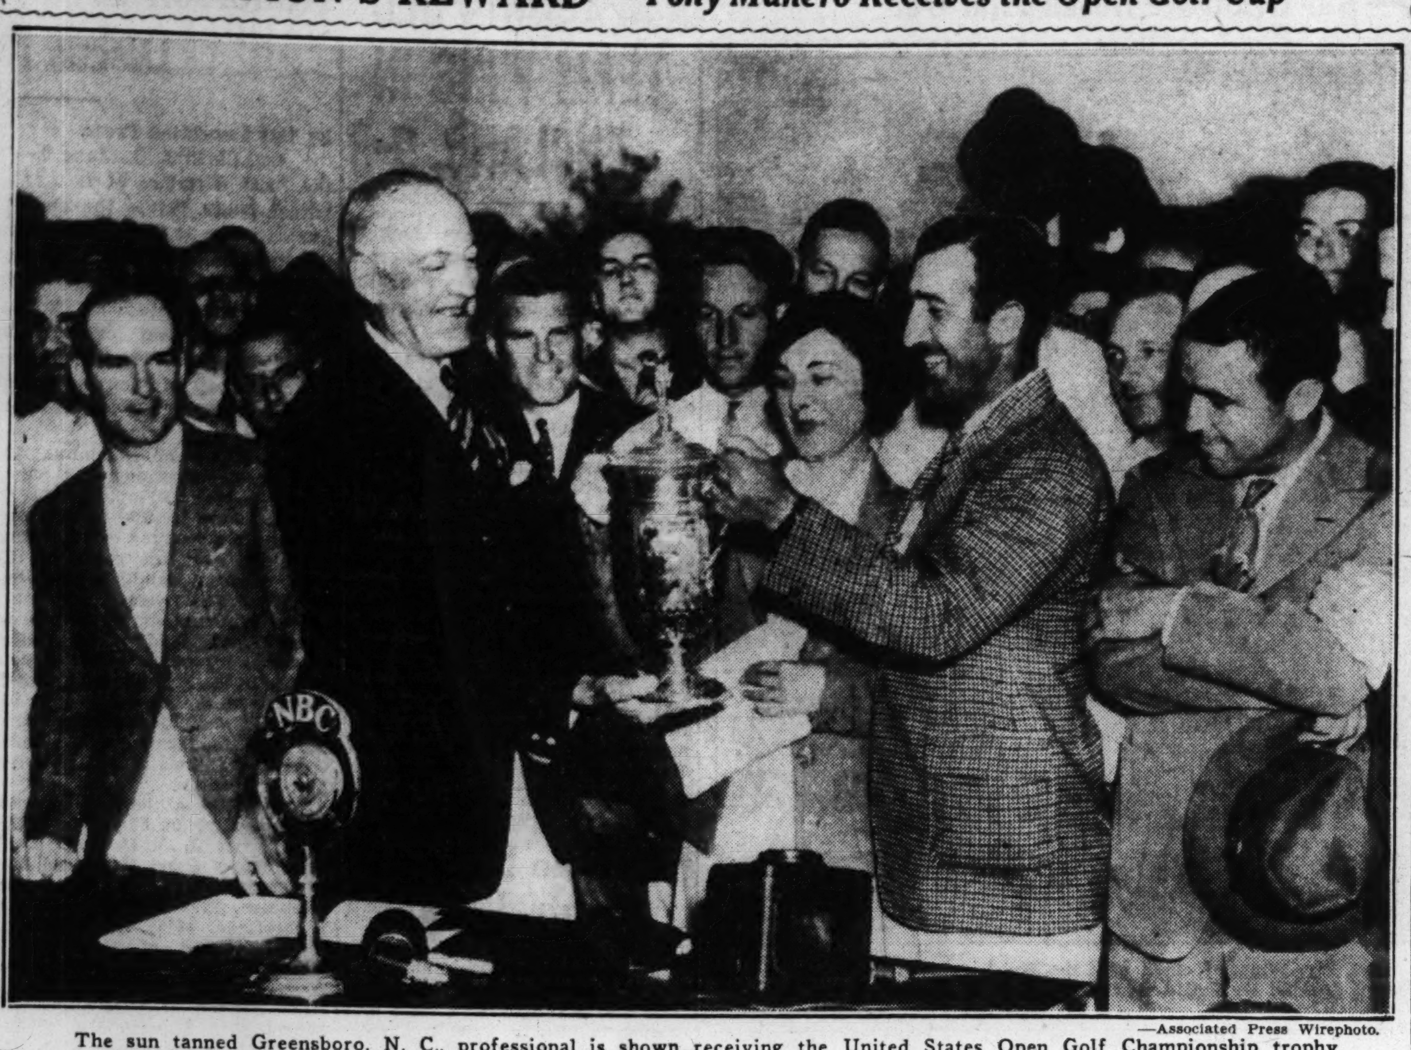
CHAMPION'S REWARD— Tony Manero Receives the Open Golf Cup



—Associated Press Wirephoto.

finest golf of his career, turned in rounds of 71, 70, 70 and 73 for a total of 284 that was two shots under the former record. It was a performance that figured to be a cinch to capture the big title and first prize money of $1000, but the twin plums went to Manero and Cooper again was just a runner-up, with second money of $750.

After two days of the closest kind of competition, with the lead changing hands with great rapidity, the finish was strictly a two-horse affair as both Manero and Cooper finished well under the scoring record that Chick Evans set at 286 in 1916 and Gene Sarzen equalled in 1932. Sarazen, who finished 14 shots back at 296, saw another of his marks excelled as Manero's total surpassed the British Open record that Gene shares with Henry Cotton, at 283.

Clark In Third Place.

Third place went to the Bloomfield, N. J., bomber, Clarence Clark, a co-leader in the opening round, who finished with 74-71 today for a total of 287, good enough to have won all but five of the tournaments held over a 40-year period. The veteran, MacDonald Smith of Glendale, Cal., a competitor for more than a quarter century, shot final rounds of 72-70 for 288 and fourth place. Trailing at 289 each were Ky Laffoon of Chicago, Wiffy Cox of Washington, D. C., and Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., the pre-tournament favorite.

Where only one man broke 300 at Oakmont a year ago, when Parks won with 299, exactly 44 of the 76 players participating in the final 36 holes were successful in scoring 299 or better for the championship route.

There has never been anything like it in championship history, with three gorgeous June days to furnish the background for the fireworks. What started out as a free-for-all, however, suddenly turned into a two-man struggle on the last nine holes. As his earlier rivals all faded away, finding the pace and the pressure too much to withstand, Cooper had Manero alone to worry about.

If Manero felt anything resembling the championship "jitters" at any stage of the final play, he didn't manifest it. He lost three strokes to Cooper on the morning round, where Harry capitalized the "breaks" to come home with his third sub-par round, a 70, take a two-stroke lead over Vic Ghezzi, with 211 and leave the rest of the field struggling.

Fourth at 54 Holes.

Tony's 215, at the 54-hole mark, left him not only four shots back of Cooper, but two behind Ghezzi and one behind Denny Shute, the former British Open champion. It was a good spot for a stretch drive and he lost no time putting it on, despite the fact Cooper started off with an eagle-three on the first hole of his final round. At that point Manero had five strokes to make up and it took him exactly 13 holes to achieve the seeming impossible.

Followed by most of the day's gallery of 8000 fans, Cooper showed no signs of cracking as he reached the turn in 35, one under par. After 3-putting the second hole, he regained his touch on the greens, getting down in one putt on five of them. Manero's flawless golf meanwhile carried him to the turn in 33, with birdies on the first hole, where he was home in two shots easily; the fourth, where he dropped a 10-footer, and the eighth, where he stuck his approach four feet from the cup.

Now they were two strokes apart. There was no change as they started back 3-5-3, one under par. Cooper canned a 12-footer for a birdie on the twelfth. Tony came along to drop a six-footer on the same green for another birdie 3. At the thirteenth, a drive and pitch, Manero sank a 20-footer for his fifth birdie and he took advantage of one of Cooper's finishing mistakes to draw level, for the first time, on the 400-yard fourteenth.

For the first time Cooper appeared jittery. He had a 10-foot putt for a birdie on the fourteenth but stabbed it, then missed a two-footer. It cost him a five and a lead that he enjoyed for the last time. Tony had only a seven-footer for a birdie but two putts for his four tied it up.

Both were trapped in front of the short fifteenth green, taking 4s, but Manero's 3-5-4 finish, one under par, was much too strong for Cooper's faltering 4-5-5 on the same three holes. Tony, cool and calculating, dropped a 12-footer for his sixth birdie on the 439-yard sixteenth. He was twice in the rough on the seventeenth but played a beautiful third to within eight feet of the cup to get an easy 5.

On the home hole, which Cooper three-putted from the front edge, 70 feet from the cup, Manero got an orthodox four without a quiver. Tony belted his approach to the spot that enabled the ball to bounce off a slope to the green. He had three putts to win, from 45 feet, but approached four feet short and dropped the ball for a four, and the title, the acclaiming roar of the crowd and the gold that goes with such triumph.

Though he has won numerous tournaments and flashed many a "hot" round, Manero's victory was scarcely less surprising to the form players than the triumph of Sam Parks Jr. a year ago. He was a thirty-to-one shot when the tournament began and one of the few to bet on Manero was Manero himself. Jestingly he remarked to friends a few days ago: "Well, it looks like the field against Manero."

Manero was little known outside of his home bailiwick in Westchester County, where he grew up with the Turnesas and others of the Italian-American ranks, until he began to win tournaments in 1929. That year he won the Catalina Open. In 1930 he captured the Pasadena, Cal., and the Glen Falls, N. Y., open tournaments. His best 72 hole score, 276, was scored in the latter event.

Moving South three years ago he captured the 1933 North Carolina open. Last year he took first prize money in the General Brock open at Niagra Falls, Ont.

Amateur Drivers' Races.

Four races during the trotting horse meet at Lexington, Ky., June 22-27, will be devoted to amateur drivers, both men and women.

HELEN STEPHENS BETTERS WORLD DASH RECORD

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, June 6.—Helen Stephens, Fulton, Mo., speedster, today stepped the 100-meter dash in 11.6 seconds, equalling her time of last year here which bettered the recognized world's record of 11.8 seconds.

The race was a feature of the Missouri Valley A. A. U. track and field meet.

Marjorie Rhodelander, Pleasant Hill, Mo., ran with Miss Stephens, in an attempt to better the recognized Missouri Valley A. A. U. record, but her time of 13.9 seconds was well above the record of 12.5 seconds.

Later Miss Stephens tossed the discus 133 feet 6½ inches, a mark meet officials said bettered the recognized women's Olympic record which they computed at 133 feet 2 inches.

Glenn Cunningham, world-record holder in the mile, did a training exhibition in which he ran three quarter-miles, walking a quarter between each. His aim was to come as close as possible to hitting a set standard for each running quarter.

The first time he set himself 60 flat and ran 56.6 seconds. His next two attempts were almost exact, his standard for the second quarter being from 61 to 62 seconds and his time 60.2, and his standard for the third 59 flat and his time 58.6.

Seven meet records fell during the afternoon.

Archie San Romani, the 1935 intercollegiate champion miler from Emporia Teachers College, set a new meet record for the 1500 meter run.

San Romani ran the distance in four minutes flat to beat by seventenths of a second the record he established at the annual Valley meet last year. The Emporia speedster took the lead at the start and was 80 yards in front of Ralph Bennett, of Tarkio, Mo., College at the finish.

Individual star of the meet proper was Herschel Neil of the Maryville, Mo., Teachers, who won three events—the 100 and 200-meter dashes and the hop, step and jump, setting a new record in the latter event.

The Pittsburg, Kan., Teachers, champions of the Central Conference of Kansas, defended their Valley team title by piling up 37½ points as against 29 for Kansas State College of Manhattan, second with 29.

Unattached entries scored 28 1-3 points, Kansas University had 17, and Neil scored 15 for Maryville.

Other team scores were: Emporia, Kan., Teachers 12; Kansas City Athletic Club, 8 1-3; Fort Hays, Kan., State College, 7 1-3; Tarkio, Mo., College, 5; Argentine High of Kansas City, Kan., 5½; William Jewel, 3; Wyandotte High of Kansas City, Kan., 2½; Fort Scott, Kan., Junior College and Ottawa, Kan., University, 1 each.

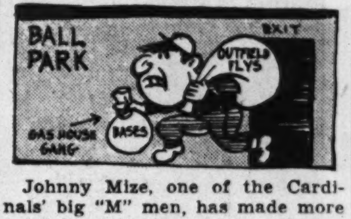
SPORT SALAD
by L. C. Davis

Bathtub Blues.

IN the bathtub sit and howl,
Blindly groping for a towel
When at last you realize
Soap gets in your eyes!

Quite So.

We are beginning to get the idea of why the Cardinals have been labeled the Gas House Gang. They commit petty larceny on the bases and highway robbery in the outfield. Ask Dick Bartell, he knows.



Johnny Mize, one of the Cardinals' big "M" men, has made more extra base hits than he has singles, the score being 19-16.

HHE hits 'em high, he hits 'em far,
He hits 'em on the nose—
One of those guys who specialize
In extra base hit blows.

Manager Hornsby has put a ban on card playing. It's tough. Just when the Browns find a game they can play the Rajah put his foot down on it.

LETTER MEN.

In Moore, Martin, Martin and Medwick the Cardinals have Four Horsemen capable of taking anybody for a ride. And with Johnny Mize in reserve they can always trot out another on the spur of the moment.

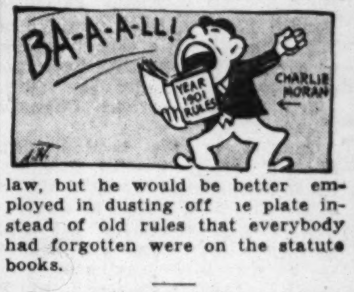
So far as we know, the Cardinals is the only team in organized ball with an all-M outfield.

See where Dizzy Dean had a ball called on him for working the delayed pitch. Another example of the uncertainties of baseball.

THE ump a pitcher sometimes fools
By suddenly enforcing rules
Long fall'n into desuetude,
And by the fans gets roundly booed.

If this ruling were ever brought before the Supreme Court we opine that it would be declared unconstitutional by a score of 9 to 0.

We don't think Uncle Charlie Moran is a man who would lean backwards to enforce the letter of the law, but he would be better employed in dusting off the plate instead of old rules that everybody had forgotten were on the statute books.



On the other hand, the customers are often irked at the delay caused by batters stepping out of the box and pitchers nursing the ball as though they hated to part with it.

The Giants still refuse to play night baseball, either at home or abroad. Consequently the Dodgers, who are not so sot in their ways and figure that two bucks at night are better than one in the daytime, will play two night games with the Reds and cop the coveted gravy.

WRAY'S COLUMN

house booing louder each round.

Louis, in previous fights, has had things all his own way, in one respect. Practically every opponent he has faced committed professional suicide by throwing himself at the hard-hitting Negro. The rushing attacker is made to order for the Bomber.

Schmeling is a forward fighter, but he does not fight wildly and he does not like to lead. He crowds his opponent waiting for the other fellow's move; then he tries to escape the punch and land a fast counter.

Unless he has changed Max is not much at feinting and so he merely bides his time—and is that a pain in the neck to the eager onlooker.

Similar tactics by Louis would ruin the evening.

It happened once that Schmeling encountered a fighter who would not lead. The bout started out to be the worst fight of the century and went eight rounds before a disgusted and disgruntled crowd.

That was the first Schmeling-Uzcudun fight. Max came to life about the ninth round and saved the evening by beating Paulino almost to pulp.

Louis Is Different.

LOUIS is different from any foe Schmeling has ever faced. He is a most distracting opponent, feinting his foes skillfully and frequently, betraying them into openings for his left or right counters. Also, he has that baffling left which he keeps tipping into an opponent's face, keeping him off balance, confusing his attack and eventually setting up his rival for the inevitable knockout finish.

If Louis has all his old speed of hand and foot, Schmeling, a plodder always, will have a hard time landing a punch ahead of Louis' counter.

Louis is a real artist. Thanks to his feinting skill and the lack of it on the part of his opponents, he has been able to set the stage for his own performance and ring down the curtain almost at will.

Schmeling is better than Uzcudun, Carnera and probably the run down Baer who faced Louis. But his reactions in the past have seemed too slow to give him any real hope against Louis.

Rough on Braddock.

NOT in history is there a parallel to the situation in which our present world champion, Jimmy Braddock, finds himself. A real injustice is being done to this very fine young fellow. It's this way—

Although Braddock is unquestioned champion, the country is fairly boiling with "White Hope" tournaments, the idea being to develop a fighter who can beat Joe Louis. The obvious inference from such procedure is that Braddock can't.

All this before Louis has even got a match with the champion, much less the title.

Mike Jacob's gesture offering a fight to Schmeling for the title, for the first time presupposes a chance for any white boxer to beat the Negro.

This writer doesn't think Braddock or Schmeling can beat Louis, but that doesn't make Louis a winner over either. We prefer to see the title-holder beaten before speculating about White Hopes. Let's suspend the search until we are sure Louis can take as well as give punishment. If you take the "who did he beat?" attitude, Louis isn't necessarily a world-beater. Has-beens were his principal meat.

Real Test for Montanez.

WHETHER Pedro Montanez is the probable successor to Tony Canzoneri as lightweight king may be demonstrated next Monday night when the Puerto Rican fighter opposes Frankie Klick at New York.

Varying reports have come West regarding this dusky scrapper, who has done much of his battling abroad but who, since his arrival in this country, has won 15 successive contests. In all he has fought 26 fights at home and abroad, in 17 months and of this total he has kayoed 13, Most of his opponents probably have been below the championship status, but the quality of his opponents gradually has improved.

After whipping the rugged Del Genio, Montanez, through his American handler, Jimmy Bronson, tried to get a title fight; but he has been pushed around and forced into the background while managers of contenders sought to learn how good he really is.

Frankie Klick is a pretty good trial horse. He fought Barney Ross and lost; he fought Canzoneri three times and lost twice and was knocked out on another occasion; and he beat Al Roth last year for the only recorded victory in his favor. He is pretty shifty, as a victory over Harry Dublinsky in 1934 proves.

Montanez, this year also defeated Roth as well as Bobby Pacho, Del Genio, Joey Costa, Paris Apice, Lou Jallos and Aldo Spoldi. If Montanez whips this boy decisively they can't keep this 22-year-old "comer" out of a championship shot.

FOOLISH MOMENT WINS CLIPSETTA STAKES AT LATONIA

PLANETOID IS SECOND, THREE LENGTHS BEHIND SPEEDY FILLY

Misapprehension Is Third in $5000 Added Race; Winner's Time, 1:06 1-5, Four-Fifths Second Slower Than Track Record.

By the Associated Press.

LATONIA, Ky., June 6.—Climaxing what has been little short of a phenomenal season for the stable's two-year-old division, Dixiana's Foolish Moment, fleet daughter of High Time, made a veritable show of a crack juvenile field here this afternoon in winning the fifty-fourth running of the Clipsetta Stakes.

Coupled in the betting with Shootin' High, Foolish Moment, which had finished second to Murph in the Bashford Manor at Churchill Downs, drew clear of the field an eighth from home and dashed to the wire three lengths in front of J. T. Taylor's Planetoid, which had been shipped here from New England to fill her engagement. Misapprehension, shipped from New York with All Agog to carry the colors of Hal Price Headley, was third.

Planetoid ran a game, even race, always in closest pursuit of the leader, but was overmatched. Misapprehension came from far back in the stretch drive after a tardy beginning.

The race, carrying an added value of $5000, attracted a field of nine. Dixiana's entry went to the post favorite in the mutuels, $2 backers receiving $5.60. Foolish Moment's time for the five and a half furlongs, the first time two-year-olds have been asked to go that far this season in Kentucky, was 1:06 1-5, within four-fifths of a second of the track record.

GRANVILLE WINS THE BELMONT, BREVITY IS FIFTH IN FIELD OF TEN

a quarter of a mile from the finish leading W. M. Jeffords' Jean Bart by a half length. That was as far as Brevity wanted to go, however, and he finished fifth, three lengths back of Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Corundum, the fourth horse, and 12 lengths to the rear of Granville.

Mr. Bones Sticks It Out.

Mr. Bones, son of Royal Minstrel which had called quits after a half mile in the Withers mile two weeks ago, went to the front at the start as was expected. What was not expected, however, was that he held on for the entire distance, losing only after as desperate a stretch drive as ever was seen in the famous stake.

Both Stout and Wayne Wright, up on Brevity, played a waiting game, as Jean Bart raced in closest pursuit of Mr. Bones for the first mile and a quarter.

Each jockey apparently was watching and waiting for the other to make his move, for not more than a length separated the pair for the first mile with Brevity in fourth place. When Wright called on his mount and Brevity moved up to third place, Stout gave Granville the word and the son of the Fox went right along with him.

The crowd was expecting Mr. Bones and Jean Bart to stop and the race to develop into a stretch duel between the two highly regarded favorites. Jean Bart did quit but also did Brevity, which found the distance too far.

Granville, with Stout riding a strong race, went around his rival at the turn leading into the stretch and at eighth of a mile from the judges stand stuck his nose in front. For a stride it appeared as if the hard luck horse would breeze home but Mr. Bones, with Johnny Gilbert plying his whip, stuck to his guns.

At the sixteenth pole Mr. Bones had his head in front again out Granville hung on like a leech.

MR. BONES WAS THERE—But Granville Nosed Him Out

—Associated Press Wirephoto.

As one horse, the hard luck champion, Granville, and the long shot, Mr. Bones, flashed past the finish pole in the Belmont Stakes, yesterday. After consulting the official photos, the judges decided Granville, in the foreground, had nosed out Mr. Bones, next the rail.

AMERICAN POLO TEAM WINS IN ENGLAND, 9-6

LONDON, June 6.—The smoking pace that America's polo internationalists have set since their arrival in England was abruptly checked today as a Roehampton quartet, led by the Texas star, Cecil Smith, held them to a 9-6 score.

With Smith setting the pace, Roehampton almost smothered what British experts have termed the greatest scoring combination seen abroad in many years.

Smith, big, hard-riding, eight-goal star, easily was the best man on the field. He effectively bottled up Winston Guest, captain of the American team, and with Eric Pedley far off his usual sharp-shooting form, the Internationalists were hard-pressed to pull out the victory. It was by far the closest match they yet have played in England and gave British fans new hope of victory in the international matches starting next Wednesday.

CHICAGO, June 6.—Star athletes from the Mid and Far West will compete at Stagg Field tomorrow afternoon in the Central A. A. U. track and field championships and Central States Olympic tryouts.

Jesse Owens, Ohio State flier; Ralph Metcalfe of Marquette University, and Ben Johnson of New York will match strides in several special sprint events. They also have been invited to participate in two exhibition spring relay races at 400 and 800 meters.

Particularly keen competition is expected in the high jump. Among the entries are Cornelius Johnson of Compton Junior College, California, the National A. A. U. champion; Gilbert Cruder, University of Colorado star, and Ed Burke of Marquette. Johnson and Burke tied at 6 feet, 8 15-16 inches in the National A. A. U. indoor meet last winter.

Anderson Breaks Own Olympic Discus Record at Ohio Meet

By the Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., June 6.—Two of Uncle Sam's point winners in the 1932 Olympics at Los Angeles and a 20-year-old Indiana high school youth "stole the show" today in the quarterfinal Olympic qualifier run at Ohio State University by the Amateur Athletic Union.

John Anderson of Cincinnati, winner of the discus throw at the international games four years ago, in capturing that event today, tossed the "plate" 164 feet 9 inches, bettering his winning mark and Olympic record of 162 feet 4⅞ inches made in 1932.

Jack Keller of Columbus, 1932 high hurdles champion and fourth-placer in the Olympics, won the 110-yard high hurdles in the comparatively slow time of 15 seconds, six-tenths over the mark of :14.4 set by George Ealing in the Olympics four years ago.

Leo Williams, lanky Negro lad from Muncie (Ind.) Central High, loomed as a possible American point winner in the high jump by topping the bar at 6 feet 5⅜ inches, just five-eighths of an inch away from the Olympic record set by Harold Osburn of Illinois in the 1924 Olympics in Paris.

Ohio State athletes topped the scoring, piling up 57 points to take the district A. A. U. title. Other team scores were: McDonnel A. C. of Cleveland, 54½; Ohio State freshmen, 22; Ohio Wesleyan, 17; Wilberforce, 16½; Millrose A. C., 10; University of Kentucky, 9; Denison University, 7; New York A. C., 5; Muncie (Ind.) Central High School, 5; Highlands High School, Fort Thomas, Ky., 3; Purdue, 3; L. B. Harrison Club, Cincinnati, 2.

CAROLINA NEGRO TIES JESSE OWENS' 100 METER RECORD

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, June 6.—Rozia Singletary of St. Augustine College, Raleigh, N. C., loomed tonight as a new rival to Jesse Owens of Ohio State and Eulace Peacock of Temple for a place on the United States Olympic track and field team.

Singletary smashed the 100 and 200-meter dash records in the Middle Atlantic A. A. U. championship at Franklin Field today as he qualified for the Olympic semifinals at Harvard University June 26-27.

He ran the 100 meters in 10.5 seconds, tying Jesse Owen's record and followed up with a 21.5 effort in the first heat of the 200 meters. He also won the 200-meter final, but his time was 3-5 seconds slower.

Sincletary's two records, however, will not be placed in the record books because of a ruling runners must represent a district club.

The Southern Negro stood out in a meet which saw a total of eight records broken and a group of more than 20 qualify for the Harvard semifinals.

Hornbostel Wins, Bonthron Fourth

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Jack Irwin, the Princeton hurdler; John Hoffstetter of Dartmouth and Indiana's Chuck Hornbostel, now a graduate student at Harvard, effected a three-way division of the honors in the annual spring games of the New York Athletic Club at Travers Island today as Bill Bonthron, a world record holder who has been out of competition for a year, failed to threaten the leaders in his event.

Irwin turned in the only record-breaking performance of the day when he won one of the two 200-meter hurdle races in 54.9 seconds.

Hoffstetter ran a brilliant quarter mile in one of the trial heats but withdrew from the final, won by George F. Nix. The Dartmouth speedster, starting three yards behind scratch, moved quickly to the front and finished in 49.6 seconds.

Hornbostel, unleashing a powerful finishing "kick" after Harry Williamson of North Carolina had set the pace, captured the three-quarter mile special in the comparatively slow time of 3:05.5, leading Lou Burns of Manhattan College, Williamson and Bonthron to the finish.

WALLENDER BETTERS 200-METERS MARK

By the Associated Press.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 6.—Harvey Wallender, University of Texas speedster, bettered the Olympic record time in the 200 meters here today at the Gulf A. A. U. and Olympic tryouts track and field meet. Wallender was clocked in 12.1 seconds, one-tenth of a second faster than the record time made in 1932 by Eddie Tolan of the United States in the Olympic games at Los Angeles.

NATIONAL PARK TENNIS TOURNAMENT TO BE HELD HERE

ANNUAL EVENT IS TO START ON MEMORIAL COURTS AUG. 17

St. Louis, Original Site in 1923, Awarded Tournament by U. S. L. T. A. After Boston Withdraws Support.

By Davison Obear.

The fourteenth annual National Public Parks tennis championship will be held here during the week of Aug. 17, according to an announcement yesterday by Frank Sullivan, recreation director for the St. Louis Park Department. All matches will be played on the Jefferson Memorial courts in Forest Park.

Official sanction for holding the tournament was granted to the Municipal Athletic Association by the United States Lawn Tennis Association on the recommendation of the National Public Park Tennis Association. The events to be played will be men's singles and doubles and women's singles and doubles.

The tournament originally was awarded to Boston. A controversy arose over the place of holding the event and the Boston City Park Board notified the U. S. L. T. A. it had withdrawn its support of the tournament.

Boston Facilities Insufficient.

When the tournament was awarded to Boston last February, it was understood that it was to be played on the Harvard University courts, which are public during the summer. It was reported that the facilities in Boston's larger parks were not sufficient to hold the numerous matches.

The National Public Parks championships were established in 1923 by the U. S. L. T. A. following the suggestion of Dwight F. Davis, former St. Louis Park Commissioner and donor of the famous international tennis trophy. During his term as park commissioner, Davis had built in Forest Park some of the first tennis courts in any large city park in this country.

In honor of Davis the U. S. L. T. A. awarded the first tournament to St. Louis. It was held on the Jefferson Memorial Courts in August, 1923. Cranston Holman of San Francisco won the men's singles title from Karl P. Kammann, St. Louis champion. The St. Louis team of Elmer Schwarz and Ted Heuerman won the men's doubles honors.

St. Louis was again the scene of the championships in 1927. Ted Drewes, O'Fallon Park star, won the men's singles for the fourth successive year. This record has not been surpassed, but was equalled in 1931 by George J. Jennings of Chicago.

Qualifying tournaments are held annually in more than 150 cities in the United States. The tournament in New York in 1933 set the record when more than 120 players from 16 cities were represented. In most cases the players entering the National event are champions of the public parks in their own cities.

In order to qualify for the nationals a player must win his local tournament, or if he is unable to compete, one of the semifinalists may be entered. The player must not hold membership in any private club having tennis facilities and must be a resident of the city or suburb he is to represent for at least one year prior to the national tournament.

One For the Conservationists.

ONE SOURCE of wild-life depletion which the conservationists give up in disgust is the motor car. The amount of small game accidentally destroyed by motorists on the highways is considerable as any one who motors through the country has observed.

This writer had it brought forcibly home to him while journeying along Highway 66, not many miles from St. Louis. Out of the ditch a few yards ahead suddenly appeared a bob-white, then another, then a third—a covey had started single-file across the concrete.

It was impossible to swerve, because the ditch was on one side and a car was coming on the opposite lane. The brakes failed to hold the car in time. Too late the quail realized that they had underestimated the speed of the car. They took wing when the car was almost over them. A couple of pathetic thumps on the underside of the car told the story. Two of them wiped out.

Countless rabbits, prowling in the in the dusk or at night, hypnotized by the glare of the headlights, are crushed to death and occasionally other varieties of game suffer. It appears that there's nothing much that can be done about it.

Yes, We Feed Them 'Bananas.'

Wild ducks in scores of states soon are to have bananas as a new diet. And the fruit, found to be one of the finest wild duck foods, is to grow naturally right in their own duck ponds, according to the More Game Birds Foundation.

The new waterfowl food is not to be introduced from the great banana plantations of Central America, however. Botanists discovered it growing in the coastal marshes of states bordering the Gulf of Mexico. They labeled it "Castalia Mexicana."

Residents of the Gulf Coast have named the plant "banana" water lily, because of the striking resemblance of the "hands" of yellow tubers which it produces to bunches of fruit-store bananas.

The tubers, or bananas, and other parts of the plant furnish food for enormous numbers of wildfowl in the Gulf States. Now, for the first time, the plant is to be introduced in sections of other states by supplying them without charge to sponsors of migratory bird refuges.

Edward L. McIlhenny, explorer and conservationist, of Avery Island, La., is to collect 50,000 banana water lily tubers and 50 bushels of gray duck moss, another waterfowl food, for planting on 50 new waterfowl refuges in various states.

"Although the banana water lily is native to only a small portion of the United States, it can be successfully grown over practically the whole country," the United States Bureau of Biological Survey declares.

Three Fishing Types.

All angling is divided into three parts. We have those who angle with plugs, those who use flies and others who use live bait. Some fishermen try them all usually anglers have a strong preference for one style.

"The word plug, as used by fishermen, covers a multitude of artificial lures," write Larry Bauer, the Associated Press's veteran outdoors expert.

"It might be stretched to take in spoons and spinners used for trolling, as these, too, can be cast. Most plugs represent minnows, but there are also imitations of frogs and other aquatic life on which game fish feed.

"The average plug caster uses a short, stiff rod and may be found tossing his offerings anywhere in bass, muskie, pike or pickerel waters. If one doesn't tempt 'em, he tries another from his well filled box. It's o. k. to attach the line to the plug when bass fishing, but a short wire leader is recommended for the 'teethy' customers.

Gleam in the Eye.

"You can identify the fly fisherman by his long, pliant rod and by the fanatical gleam in his eye—especially if he is out to test a pet theory. He is found in great numbers along trout streams and is quite plentiful in bass country. There are two classes of fly fishermen — wet and dry. Dry flies represent insects and float upon the surface. Wet flies imitate the water stages—nymphs, larvae—of insects.

"Bait fishermen use a longer rod than the plug caster but not as whippy in the tip as a fly rod. Crawfish, minnows, worms, etc., are cast into likely looking spots. As is the case with all other ways of casting it takes practice to get accuracy and to keep the bait on.

"The pole-and-liner takes it easy by keeping his bait in one place until some finny denizen agitates the bobber placed a few feet above the hook and sinker. He gets rest while the caster gets exercise."

Carp Trouble in Idaho.

Sportsmen in southern Idaho are complaining that carp are eating all the trout and ask that something be done about it. The carp were planted by farmers who sought to keep their ditches free of grass. The carp multiplied and the streams supplying water for the ditches became overcrowded with the cannibals.

Game cropping on every farm in the state is being encouraged and developed by the game management department of the University of Wisconsin.

"Our objective," says Prof. Aldo Leopold, "is to hasten the development of game cropping on farms so that it can get into operation while there is still some native game left to crop."

Professor Leopold estimates game cropping is being practiced on nearly 3,000,000 acres of state and privately owned land in conservation districts and national forests.

A freak-of-nature death of a bull elk was reported in Gray's Harbor county to the Washington State game commission. In some manner, probably while fighting, the elk placed its left front foot above its antlers. Unable to move the foot from this position, the animal died of starvation.

While the shark can scarcely be classified as a game fish, it is capable of putting up a stiff fight. The little leaping shark can equal a tarpon's jumping performance for a few minutes. Shark fishermen, though, usually try for the larger grey nurse, hammer-head and man-eaters. A 10-footer can put up a battle that will be long remembered.

101 Women Enter District Golf Tournament at Sunset

One hundred and one women golfers, an unusually large number, are entered in the women's district tournament to start tomorrow at Sunset Hills Country Club with an 18-hole qualifying round.

GHNOULY TO BOX ALCANTER HERE IN CONTEST FOR MISSOURI TITLE

Fritzie Zivic, who took just 30 seconds to dispose of Billy Celebron, the No. 1 contender for the welterweight championship here a month ago, was signed yesterday by Promoters Raymond and Greenberg to meet the new sensation of the Pacific Coast, Al Manfredo, in a 10-round bout that is semifinal to the John Henry Lewis-Tony Shucco masterpiece at the air-cooled Auditorium June 17.

Still another top-notch 10-rounder, the battle for Missouri's lightweight championship, between Joe Ghnouly of St. Louis and Joie Alcanter of Kansas City, with the title belt at stake, adds considerable color to an already flashy card.

The country is talking John Henry Lewis now, mentioning him as possible heavyweight king in addition to owning the 175-pound crown which he won here last fall. Shucco, victor over many of the ranking heavyweights of the world, including Jim Braddock, will be no easy match for the big Negro with the murderous right.

Zivic, who rose to instant fame here last month when he kayoed Celebron, is to meet a Pacific Coast fighter of considerable prestige. Manfredo has beaten every welterweight on the coast and has stepped up into the middleweight class many a time to take on some good ones there. His most recent success was scored over Cerafino Garcia, and he fought a draw with Bep Van Klaven, the Dutch champion.

His appearance in St. Louis will be Manfredo's first appearance east of California.

The Ghnouly-Alcanter go is a rematch of the battle which was waged in Kansas City two months ago and which saw Ghnouly lose his State crown to the Kansas City lad.

Since then the "Pride of Allen Avenue" has trained hard and long, and just last month proved he is back in his old form by scoring one of the most brilliant victories of his career over Eddie Zivic, brother of Fritzie.

The curtain-raiser on the brilliant card brings together Merl Thompson, George Wilsman's protege, and Kid Irish of Alton in a six-round scrap.

Leaders Meet in Trolley Feature

With the Champion Stags of Belleville setting the pace in the Missouri Illinois Trolley League race with six straight victories the Hufschmidts of East St. Louis, in second place, will get their first opportunity of the campaign to hand their rivals a setback when the teams take the field at Athletic Park, Belleville, starting at 3 o'clock.

George Martin, the right hander, who held Edgemont to five safeties last Sunday will go to the hill against the home team while Glen Barthlone or "Ham" Gregory will start for Stags.

At State Street Park, East St. Louis, Vandalia will meet Edgemont in a double header starting at 1:30 o'clock. Eddie Eichelberger and Smith are down to work for Edgemont, with Gene Smith and Hughie Clare dividing pitching honors for Vandalia.

The Alpen Braus of Granite City will go to Carlyle for a game with the Carlyle club, which last week replaced Mount Vernon. Manager Al. Meyer of Carlyle will start Pieler against the visitors with Mahlandt back of the bat, while either Sims or Harshany will go to the firing line for Alpen Braus.

4 RECORDS SET AS RALSTON BEATS WAGNER IN TRACK MEET

By Reno Hahn

The Ralston Mills track team beat out Wagner Electric squad for the championship in the annual Y. M. C. A. Industrial Track and Field meet at Francis Field yesterday afternoon, 45 points to 40. McQuay-Norris was third with 27 points, American Oak Leather fourth with 13, and Pevely Dairy last with one.

Four records were set, the best of them, the newly medley relay mark of 8 minutes 16.8 seconds by the Ralston quartet of Schlieman, Walker, Watkins and McNeal. Schlieman ran a 220, Walker a 440, Watkins a half mile, and McNeal a mile. The time was nearly 23 seconds better than the mark set last year by the Wagner team. The old record was 8 minutes 39.6 seconds.

Mack Gladden, former Missouri University athlete, set one of the new standards, tossing the discus with his left hand 118 feet 5 inches. The previous mark was 117 feet 7½ inches by George Nesbit of Wagner in 1935.

Ed Ball, the former Beaumont High star, took individual scoring honors with two firsts and a second for 13 points for the only points scored by the American Oak Leather team.

Dean McLean, a former miler for the Kansas State Aggies, and Cobb, his teammate, were other double winners, finishing so far ahead of the field in both the half mile runs that they jogged across the line together so that they shared honors in both events.

The other new records were at 440 yards. Pat Palumbo, graduate of McBride High, set the individual standard for McQuay-Norris, stepping the quarter mile in 52.2 seconds, lowering the standard set by Reyburn, Valley Shoe, in 1932 by a tenth of a second.

Palumbo also shared in the other 440 mark, anchoring the four-man team of McQuay-Norris that stepped the distance in 46.6 seconds. The previous record was 47.1 seconds by Ralston in 1935.

The half mile relay record still stands, but a heavy rain that fell as it, the last event of the day, was being run, is probably all that saved it for the quartet of L. Calcaterra, Leutweiller, J. Calcaterra and Palumbo can really run.

The summaries:

Missouri Golf Tourney to Be Held June 15-19

Entry blanks for the Missouri State Golf Tournament, to be held at Kansas City's Hillcrest Country Club, June 15-19, have been mailed to all clubs in the State, Bonner Miller, secretary of the Missouri Golf Association, announced yesterday.

Miller said Grable Duvall Jr., of Kansas City, who beat George Dawson in the State final here last year, would defend his title. Dawson, formerly of Chicago, has returned to that city this year and will not enter the tournament.

Qualifying round will be 36 holes for all classes, with the first 18 on Monday, June 15, and the second on Tuesday. First and second round match play will be held Wednesday, third and semi-final rounds Thursday, and the 36-hole finals Friday.

Entries will close June 13.

17 CYCLISTS IN TRIAL FOR PLACES IN OLYMPIC FINAL TEST

62½ MILE RACE STARTS AND ENDS AT ROBERTSON, MO.

Eugene Gotsch, St. Louis, Had Best Time in Qualifying Among the Riders of Three States.

Seventeen bicycle riders from Missouri, Kansas and Texas, after weeks of hard training, fight it out this morning for four places in the Olympic bicycle road racing final trial to be held in the East in July. The riders were ready for nearly three hours of hard leg work on the hilly course over concrete highways starting from Robertson, Mo., at 9 o'cloc kthis morning.

The course is 100 kilometers in length, approximately 62½ miles. It starts with a level strip of ground, but soon changes to a series of hills that test the stamina and fortitude of the riders. It finishes with a wide, smooth, even stretch that provides an ideal setting for a fast, sprinting finish.

The riders start in Robertson on Highway 66-140, go northeast on that highway to the parting of those roads, then easterly on 140 to 99; south on 99 to 66, and west on 66 back to Robertson for the first lap. The riders go over that course three times to complete the 100 kilometers.

Ten St. Louis Riders.

Ten St. Louisans and one rider from Kansas City make up the Missouri squad. The Kansas Cityan, Bob Faltermeier, will be one of the favorites to qualify for the final, but several St. Louisans are ranked as equal to or better than Faltermeier, who finished third in the State event.

Among them are Eugene Gotsch, winner of the State trial, and State champion last year; Ray Florman, a one-handed rider who is able to stay up with the best of them and placed second in the recent tryout; Lou Droz, who took fourth, and Chester Nelsen, member of the 1928 Olympic team, who finished fifth, but expects to do better today.

The other St. Louis riders entered are: Joe McNichols, Joe Dellermann, Virgil Hermann, Ray Rowald, Ray George and John Setvak.

The out-of-town bicyclists are headed by the veteran Geoffrey McBride of Dallas, Tex., and Bruce Randall, top ranking youngster from Wichita, Kan. These two are the standouts among the visitors.

The other visiting riders are: Eldon Schlinke and Lawrence Calhoun, Dallas; Clarence Rose, Wichita, and Johnny Lewis, Hutchinson, Kan.

Gotsch Had Best Time Trial.

With only four places open for the final, it isn't likely that the field will be content to sit back and take it easy during the greater part of the race as was the case in the recent State event. It is far more likely that one or two riders, or possibly a group of four, will try to break away from the main bunch and assure themselves of qualifying.

The time made by Gotsch in winning the Missouri trial was better than that turned in for any other State. His time for the 100 kilometers was two hours and 56 minutes, a minute better than the next best time. The Texas trial was won in 3 hours 8 minutes and 30 seconds.

Emerson Team Wins Fifth.

The Emerson team won its fifth straight game in the Electrical Board of Trade Softball League, defeating the Glasco squad, 9-7. Other scores were: Buss Fustrons 12, Westinghouse 6; Barretts 7, Buss Superlags 6; Graybar 15, R. E. Meyers 4.

HERE'S A NEW WAY TO TREAT FOOT ITCH

Don't Pay Until Relieved

According to the Government Health Bulletin No. E-28, at least 50% of the adult population of the United States are being attacked by a foot disease that causes terrible itching.

Usually the disease starts between the toes. Little watery blisters form, and the skin cracks and peels. After a while, the itching becomes intense, and you feel as though you would like to scratch off all the skin.

Beware of It Spreading

Often the disease travels all over the bottom of the feet. The soles of your feet become red and swollen. The skin also cracks and peels, and the itching becomes worse and worse.

Get rid of this disease as quickly as possible, because it is very contagious, and it may go to your hand or even to the under arm or crotch of the legs.

Most people who have this trouble have tried all kinds of remedies to cure it without success. Ordinary germicides, antiseptics, salve or ointments seldom do any good.

Here's How to Treat It

The germ that causes the disease is known as Tinea Trichophyton. It buries itself deep in the tissues of the skin and is very hard to kill. A test made shows it takes 20 minutes of boiling to kill the germ; so you can see why the ordinary remedies are unsuccessful.

H. F. was developed solely for the purpose of treating this foot itch. It is a liquid that penetrates and dries quickly. You just paint the affected parts. It peels off the tissue of the skin where the germ breeds.

Itching Stops Immediately

As soon as you apply H. F. you will find that the itching is immediately relieved. You should paint the infected parts with H. F. night and morning until your feet are well. Usually this takes from three to ten days, although in severe cases it may take longer or in mild cases less time.

H. F. will leave the skin soft and smooth. You will marvel at the quick way it brings you relief; especially if you are one of those who have tried for years to get rid of this disease without success.

H. F. Sent on Free Trial

Sign and mail the coupon, and a bottle of H. F. will be mailed you immediately. Don't send any money and don't pay the postman any money; don't pay anything any time unless H. F. is helping you. If it does help you, we know you will be glad to send us $1 for the treatment at the end of ten days. That's how much faith we have in H. F. Read, sign and mail the coupon today.

GORE PRODUCTS, INC. St. L.
800 Perdido St., New Orleans, La.

Please send me immediately a complete treatment for foot trouble as described above. I agree to use it according to directions. If at the end of 10 days my feet are getting better, I will send you $1. If I am not entirely satisfied, I will return the unused portion of the bottle to you within 15 days from the time I receive it.

Taste Test No. 10—WRESTLING MATCHES

80% vote for Vintage Tobacco Mildness

NEW YORK, N. Y., MAY 4—It was a big wrestling night at the 71st Armory—and a real test of smoking pleasure for cigars . . . a test by taste alone!

Since only taste really gives enjoyment from a cigar, we wanted to see which cigar men would choose by taste alone. 309 smokers were chosen at random among the audience . . . given two unidentified cigars—a Vintage White Owl and another, representing the leading nationally advertised brands.

The cigars bore no names or familiar bands to prejudice them. Each man smoked both cigars—then indicated the one he liked best. They chose by taste alone . . . for taste is the only thing that really counts in a cigar. 80% preferred Vintage White Owl's mildness.

SONNENBERG AND CHIEF LITTLE WOLF . . . YVON ROBERT AND DUSEK . . . plenty of action, rough and tumble. And while the battles raged in the ring, 309 fans tried the two test cigars . . . 4 out of every 5 indicated the White Owl as best tasting.

MORE SMOKING PLEASURE . . . Today's White Owl is a double "best buy." It's a Vintage cigar—and it's larger, too. Look at this actual-size picture. White Owl averages a 10% longer smoke than other widely advertised 5¢ cigars.

Compare White Owl with your present brand. Taste the Vintage tobacco—see the extra size.

Wherever you are, you can get the same mild, uniform Vintage cigar that won these taste tests. It costs but 5¢ at your nearest cigar store.

LIKE A VINTAGE WINE . . . Vintage tobacco filler of every White Owl is mild, mellow. Why go on smoking cigars by name? You can't smoke brand bands or advertising claims. Smoke the cigar that tastes best. Try a White Owl and see for yourself.

BUILDING GROUND BOUGHT FOR HALF OF RENTAL VALUE

Mercantile Commerce Bank & Trust Co. Buys Site of Broadway and Pine Building for $400,000.

CURRENT MONEY RATES A FACTOR

Purchase Anticipates Ultimate Materialization of Riverfront Improvement Project, It Is Believed.

By Berry Moore

Conspicuous in the week's activities was the purchase by the Mercantile-Commerce Bank & Trust Co. of the fees to three parcels, comprising the site of the Federal Commerce Trust Building, at the northeast corner of Broadway and Pine street, for approximately $400,000—less than half the valuation of $850,000 placed on the ground in 1906 when the 99-year leases, under which it was held, were executed. Promoted by the late Lilburn G. McNair and Fletcher R. Harris, president of the Fletcher R. Harris Realty Co., the 16-story office building, a striking structure, was erected by the Lilburn Realty Co, a holding corporation of the National Bank of Commerce, in which the leasehold interests were vested.

The corner parcel, having a frontage of 46 feet on Broadway, with a depth of 127 feet on Pine, was owned by the Robert H. Keiser estate, which received $211,764. For the adjoining 22 by 127 feet on Broadway, owned by Nathaniel T. Ewing, $70,588 was paid. The next 22 by 127 feet on Broadway was owned by Mary Mitchell, who received $117,647—a total of $399,999.

Ground Rentals Paid.

The lease on the Keiser estate parcel called for an annual rental of $18,000, or four per cent on a valuation of $450,000. The lease on the Mitchell parcel provided for an annual net rental of $10,000, or four per cent on a valuation of $250,000, and the lease on the Ewing parcel for an annual net rental of $6000, or four per cent on $150,000. The total rental for the three leases was $34,000, or four per cent on a valuation of $850,000. In addition, the lessee was obligated to pay the taxes. The leases had 69 years to run.

The purchase of the ground (fees) doubtless was inspired by current money rates, which are at an unprecedentedly low level, due to the plethora of funds available. It, however, ostensibly was acquired in order to facilitate the sale of the building and the site as a whole, should a buyer of the property materialize. Realty circles hailed the purchase as anticipating the ultimate materialization of the Jefferson Memorial riverfront improvement project, which, it is believed, would have a tonic effect on the downtown business section west of Fourth street.

The Mercantile-Commerce also owns the five-story building at 210 North Broadway, formerly occupied by the Post-Dispatch, and the 12-story building at the southeast corner of Broadway and Olive street, occupied by the National

SYNDICATE BUYS LAND ON LITZINGER ROAD

Acquires 23 Acres on the North Side Adjoining Tilles Park For Development.

A tract of 23 acres on the north side of Litzinger road, adjoining Tilles Park on the south, has been purchased by a syndicate headed by Arnold H. Maremont. It was owned by the Southwest Bank. No mention of the consideration was made.

The tract will be restricted and developed as "Litzinger Lane." It will be available in small tracts. A large country residence, standing on the tract, will be remodeled.

Adjoining Tilles Park on the north is Deer Creek Woods, a recently opened subdivision in which several residences are now under construction. Elsworth Lane is being extended. The entire Sampson tract of 30 acres has been disposed of in two-acre sites.

"Litzinger Lane" is being planned to take full advantage of its location adjoining the park. Beautifully wooded, the homesites, none of which will be less than one acre, will follow the rolling topography of the tract and will be developed into a pleasing small community.

Plans are being drawn by Ralph Cole Hall for two houses, construction of which is to start at once.

HOUSE FACING PARK BOUGHT BY FRED J. CORNWELL JR.

Fred J. Cornwell Jr., real estate operator, has acquired the three-story residence at 26 North Kingshighway, owned by the heirs of Burtis Price (Mrs. Leslie Price Nulsen and Mrs. Virginia Price Breck.) It has 12 rooms and two baths. The purchase was made primarily for the site, which has a frontage of 130 feet on Kingshighway and a depth of 178-feet. Facing Forest Park the site has speculative possibilities.

The house is now used as a whist club.

Albert T. Terry Son & Co., handled the transaction in connection with the F. J. Cornwell Real Estate Co.

OLD DENNY HOMESTEAD ON CONWAY ROAD SOLD

Estate With 8 1-2 Acres Has Been Acquired by Ethan A. H. Shepley, Attorney.

The old Denny homestead on the north of Conway road, approximately 800 feet west of Warson road, owned by Roy J. Denny, has been purchased by Ethan A. H. Shepley of the law firm of Nagel, Kirby, Orrick and Shepley. The purchase includes eight and one-half acres of the original Denny tract. Edward L. Bakewell handled the transaction.

The original land grant was made 117 years ago when President Monroe gave it to Samuel J. Denny. Across the tract ran an old road leading to St. Louis, which was the western frontier at that time.

The central part of the house is the original loghouse, built of native oak and walnut logs, plainly visible inside. The old fireplaces and crossbeams have been retained in the living room and dining room. The house has been remodeled both within and without. It has living room, dining room, entrance hall, lavatory, kitchen, breakfast room, guest room and bath on the first floor. On the second floor there are three bedrooms and bath.

Shepley plans additional bedrooms and servants' quarters.

RESIDENTIAL CONSTRUCTION IN LARGER VOLUME

Figures Gathered by Labor Bureau Show Strides Made in Building of This Character During Past Year.

Residential building operations all over the country stepped up rapidly during April, when 97 cities totaled one, two, three and four family dwelling construction in excess of $100,000 each. This was a substantial gain over March's residential building, when 72 cities were enrolled in the "six-figure" group. In April, 1935, only 32 of these cities were able to show totals in excess of $100,000, as reported by the Federal Housing Administration in Washington, D. C.

New York, Detroit and Los Angeles were again the only cities with more than $2,000,000 of residential construction each for the month, but Washington moved into the "million-dollar" class for the first time. Philadelphia, with a total just over a million dollars for the month, held its own. The figures, gathered by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor and analyzed by the Federal Housing Administration, indicate the long strides residential building has taken in the past year.

In April, 1935, only four cities were able to list half million-dollar residential building totals. In March, 1936, there were 10 such cities, and in April, the survey shows, there are 11, with several others close to the line.

Most Active States.

Among the states most active in residential building are California, with 16 cities with totals in excess of $100,000; Pennsylvania, with seven; Massachusetts, with six; New York and Texas, with six, and Illinois, New Jersey and Ohio, with five, Florida and Wisconsin each had four cities.

The longest forward stride was registered by the little city of Meadville, Pa., whose April, 1936, total is $676,400, compared with $3600 for April, 1935. However, Meadville got its greatest boost from the construction of the Meadville Housing Project, a large scale housing developmnet now being built under the terms of the Federal Housing Administartion's insured mortgage system. This is not built with Federal funds.

The complete list of cities and their April (1936) totals are: New York City, $2,481,000; Detroit, Mich., $2,480,565; Los Angeles, Cal., $2,143,856; Washington, D. C., $1,464,775; Philadelphia, Pa., $1,081,880; Houston, Tex., $875,720; San Francisco, Cal., $848,040; Cincinnati, O., $776,700; Meadville, Pa., $676,400; Miami, Fla., $525,385; San Diego, Cal., $514,334; St. Louis, Mo., $472,000; Miami Beach, Fla., $434,900; Baltimore, Md., $420,000; Chicago, Ill., $398,750; Newton, Mass., $362,500; Oklahoma City, Ok., $362,475; Denver, Colo., $361,600; Oakland, Cal., $318,219 Shaker Heights, O., $310,150 Grosse Pointe Farms, Mich., $303,100 Beverly Hills, Cal., $293,000; Glendale, Cal., $289,600; Minneapolis, Minn., $276,400; Long Beach, Cal., $251,100; Teaneck, N. A TIP

Don't start painting the top of a chair, ending up on your hands and knees. Turn small pieces upside down, beginning work at the bottom of the legs. Then turn right side up and stand on a clean newspaper to complete the work.

B. & L. ASSOCIATIONS LEND $624,639 IN MAY

Money Was Used for Home Building, Refinancing Mortgages and Repairs.

Establishing a new record for the last year, building and loan associations in St. Louis and St. Louis County recorded 198 loans totaling $624,639 during May, it was reported by E. A. Kamp, secretary of the St. Louis League of Incorporated Building and Loan Associations.

"These figures represent a new high for number of loans transacted, as well as volume of loans," Kamp said. "Although records are available only for the past year, it is likely that more loans were made last month than in any single month for several years.

"Loan volume in May was $12,000 more than the April total, and $130,600 over the monthly average, indicating a more than seasonal increase in home building activity."

These funds, Kamp pointed out, were used throughout the St. Louis area for building new homes, repairing and remodeling homes already built, and refinancing existing mortgages on a monthly payment basis.

For the fiscal year ending June 1, associations made 1933 loans, totaling $5,927,526, he said. These loans were recorded by the 42 local associations, of which 13 are operating under Federal charter and 42 are state charter. Total assets of the group are more than $27,000,000, Kamp said.

Bank of Commerce, before its consolidation with the Mercantile Trust Co. in 1929. Held in fee simple, these buildings, together with the Federal Commerce Trust Building, give the Mercantile-Commerce absolute ownership of the entire Broadway frontage of this block, extending from Olive to Pine. The property also has a frontage on both Olive and Pine of 127 feet, extending to the north and south alley of the block.

Occupied by an Affiliate.

The Federal Commerce Trust Co., an affiliate of the National Bank of Commerce, occupied the first floor of the Federal Commerce Bank & Trust Co. prior to the consolidation of the financial institutions. This space is now occupied by the Laclede Insurance Agency under a five-year lease. The Federal Reserve Bank occupied the second floor of the Federal Commerce Trust Building, prior to the erection of its new building at Broadway and Locust street.

The Missouri Historical Society has placed a tablet on the Bank of Commerce Building inscribed, "Here lived and died William Clark, 1770-1838, of the Lewis & Clark Expedition, soldier and explorer, Territorial Governor, Superintendent of Indian Affairs."

Owns East Half of Block.

The east half of this block, including the eight-story Merchants Laclede Building at the southwest corner of Fourth and Olive streets, and the former two-story building at the northwest corner of Fourth and Pine streets, is owned by the Mississippi Valley Trust Co. Formerly housed in the latter structure, the Mississippi Valley Trust Company now occupies three floors in the Mississippi Valley Trust Building at the southwest corner of Broadway and Olive street. It acquired the Merchants Laclede Building when it absorbed the Merchants-Laclede National Bank, the former owner.

Oxygen Important to Fish in Aquarium

If you have been having trouble with your aquarium and pets you should learn a few simple rules about aquarium care. Most owners kill their pets with kindness, too much food and fresh water.

Oxygen is important to fish but a well-balanced aquarium, meaning one that is sufficiently stocked with growing plants and scavengers supplies ample amounts of oxygen to the fish. Two or three hours of direct sunlight per day should furnish enough oxygen through the plants to keep the fish healthy. An odor in the water is the result of too much food or food of the wrong kind.

A properly balanced aquarium should not require cleaning more than once or twice a year. As much of the old water as possible should be saved since fresh water contains too much oxygen and chemicals for the comfort of fish. Water that has been aged for about a week, that is, heated and set aside, is better than fresh water and runs very little danger of containig disease or parasities.

WATER SOFTENERS

In sections of the country where the water is hard the installation of water-softening equipment is a convenience and economy.

Hard water, by depositing scale on water heaters, pipes and boilers, reduces the efficiency of the plumbing and heating equipment. Fuel bills are increased and repairs and replacements become necessary. With the installation of water-softening equipment, this deposit is prevented and consequently water flows freely, fuel costs are reduced, and plumbing repair bills cut.

Murals on Queen Mary.

Passengers on the Queen Mary are much interested in the impressive murals that were painted by three women. The tourist lounge, lined with silver, green and biscuit-colored leather, was decorated by Margot Gilbert who has painted thereon her idea of "Dancing Through the Ages." Anna Zinkeisen dipped her able brush in gold and silver and created fantastic figures on the walls of the main ballroom, while Anna's sister, Doris, widely known stage designer, decorated the verandah grill penthouse with dramatic pageants.

SOUTH SIDE BUICK HAS REALLY CUT PRICES!

Business is fine! We have already sold more new Buicks than we did all last year. And that means we have a lot of real good trade-ins to get rid of. We have to sell them—there's no way out of it. We must have room and time to devote to new car sales. So we're marking them all way down in price. They don't sit around our lot long—most of them are reconditioned and sold within 48 hours. Come in and look them over—every one is a real buy.

An Efficient Home Designed for Modern Living

EVERY house that is planned represents an architect's problem. By working from such known quantities as location, exposure, and client's preference the architect is usually able to solve this problem to the best advantage for all concerned.

In the case of the house shown here the problem was one of exposure. In addition, the compactness of the service area had to be considered for the resultant economy of space. It is a modern house in every respect and designed for modern living.

There has been mention previously of the importance that exposure plays in living in and about St. Louis. The concensus of opinion is southern exposure. Here the lot lot faces west, leaving the choice exposure for the side of the house. The architects have grouped all the service areas, meaning garage, kitchen and entry, at the north leaving the dining rooms and two bedrooms face south and derive the maximum benefits from the exposure.

THE house is most practical and most efficient. Every inch of space has been utilized, and yet there is no feeling of being crowded. The entry is roomy without being overlarge, with a straight stairway leading to the second floor. Under this stairway is the one leading to the basement rumpus room, which may also be reached from the garage without interference with the living quarters.

The living room is large and well proportioned, with an attractive bay window facing west. The bay window is flanked on either side by deep bookshelves with storage space for card tables and other necessities for entertaining. A screened porch which faces south is accessible from living and dining rooms. This porch is large enough for dining and is nicely secluded.

The fireplace has a well designed Colonial mantel painted off-white which is the color chosen for the woodwork throughout the house. A wood cornice and wainscot rail, papered walls and a painted dado and ceiling complete the decoration of the living room.

The second floor has been projected slightly making possible to provide three bedrooms, a maid's room, and three baths. The master bedroom is a beautifully planned suite having two exposures in addition to the coveted southern exposure. The large closet has built-in drawers and compartments and a cedar closet which is a great advantage. The bath is well-planned and French doors connect this bedroom with a sun deck just over the screened porch.

An upper hall which is small but very convenient gives access to the remaining bedrooms, bath and maid's quarters. Here a window furnishes enough light and a linen closet with double doors provides ample storage space for the family linens. Each bath has a towel cabinet.

PERHAPS the most interesting thing about the house is the profusion of closets and built-in cabinets. Both the architects and the owners have realized the part that storage space plays in a well-regulated household. In these plans it has been used to best possible advantage without being obtrusive. Built-in cabinets in the kitchen provide space for storing electrical appliances, kitchen utensils and staples. Niches have been provided for card tables, trays, etc. In fact this house is an example of a "place for everything and everything in its place" without being the least bit stodgy. No single convenience for saving steps has been overlooked from drawer cases to well located clothes chutes with openings on the first and second floors.

The entrance is slightly recessed and the door is of rather heavy construction protected by an overhang. Finish hardware is dull brass. The handrail and newel post of the stairway are stained dark. Treads are of oak and balusters and risers have been painted off white. The recreation room in the basement is to be finished in knotty pine with adzed timbered fireplace.

First floor walls are built of brick while the second floor walls are of wood siding. This frame construction for the second floor provides a logical lightening of the structure as it rises. The color note of green shutters against the white paint of the house is repeated in the gray green of the shingled roof.

The house is thoroughly insulated, weatherproofed and insured against termites. It is heated by a gas fired, winter air conditioning unit. Floors in the bathrooms are of rubber tile while the wainscoting is of linoleum tile. The entire basement has a cement floor with heating and laundry facilities located back of the recreation room. The house has been built just outside of Kirkwood and contains 32,500 cubic feet. Cost has been estimated at approximately 36 cents per cubic foot.

By Grouping the Service Areas on the North the Desirable Southern Exposure Has Been Reserved for the Living Areas in This Compact and Efficient Plan.

COLOR FOR STUCCO

The stucco houses so popular in California and Florida seem to call for brighter tones than the more sedate type of house. Soft pink, as well as the deep rose tones, are effective—as are creamy tans and various shades of blue and green. White is also good and can be used with a bright blue trim and a red or brown roof.

Protect Mudguards.

Both the upper and under surfaces of automobile mudguards should be inspected frequently for the presence of rust. These portions of the car are submitted to strenuous wear; the tires are constantly splashing water and hurling dust and small stones at them. Keeping the mudguards painted prevents rust from gaining a foothold there, keeps the appearance up and maintains the resale value.

SALESMEN WANTED

ATTENTION—MEN WHO ARE UNEMPLOYED

In and around St. Louis are men that are complaining about work being very hard to find. Some of these men actually want work, others are not looking for work, or want something that is easy to do for a mere existence. To the men looking for a chance to prove their ability with possibilities of earning a good consistent living for themselves and their families we can present a splendid opportunity.

In our previous announcements we have repeatedly made the statement that we are not interested in men who are merely concerned with the limitations of a small income. However, we will go a long way in helping a man to a lucrative and permanent future if that man is big enough and willing enough to realize that he must pay the price and prove his worth to us by actual and conscientious hard work.

In order to assure that no man will remain in a rut because of a stipulated income used as a harness over him, we pay our men on a profit sharing basis, giving them a chance to receive in dollars and cents what they actually earn.

This business is both modern and mutual. No investment is required from any man qualifying. We finance everything. Our requirements are: Good references and neat appearance. To you who are reading this ad, is your future worth two hours' interview with our factory representative? Where he can outline what we consider a real opportunity to you?

This ad gives no honest, industrious man an excuse for being out of work. Apply in person, 512 Paul Brown Bldg., 9th and Olive Sts., Monday, between 9:15 a. m. and 1:15 p. m. only. This is a special interview and may mean the turning point of your life regardless of your present occupation.

This is not an ordinary ad, but this is not an ordinary selling job. We firmly believe this represents one of the outstanding opportunities of the decade in specialty sales work.

Katherine Boyd Is Married to L. F. Lumaghi Jr.

Wedding in Garden of Country Home of Mr. and Mrs. Hermann von Schrenk in Florissant.

MISS KATHERINE O'NEIL BOYD, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Willard W. Boyd, became the bride of Louis F. Lumaghi Jr., yesterday afternoon at a garden wedding at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Hermann von Schrenk, in Florissant. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Russell J. Wilbur at 5:30 o'clock.

The wedding party formed in the inclosed flower garden, and proceeded through an arbor to a wide expanse of sloping lawn, where several hundred guests were assembled. Against a background of birch trees and evergreens stood two white satin prie-dieux, to which Mr. Boyd escorted his daughter.

She wore a gown of white net over taffeta, made on princess lines, the skirt flaring at the hem into a train. Fitted at the waist, it had a high round neck line and three-quarter length sleeves consisting of a series of tint net ruffles, one of which crossed the bodice near the top of the sleeves to form a yoke. Her filmy tulle veil, which drifted the full length of the train as she walked, fell from a cap of starched rose point lace that had belonged to her great-grandmother. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Preceding the bride and her father were four ushers walking in pairs, and the bridesmaids, each on the arm of a groomsman. They were followed by Miss Jane Perry Francis, the maid of honor, and little Edita Lorente de No, the flower girl.

Miss Pauline Lumaghi, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Barbara O'Neil, of Greenwich., Conn., cousin of the bride; Miss Louise Goddard and Miss Emily Lewis, were the bridesmaids, while Mr. Lumaghi was attended by his brother, Charles; Ellis Archer Hallett Jr., Isaac C. Orr, W. Harold Hoover of Kansas City; Oliver Evans, of Pittsburg; Kirk Neal, of Detroit, and John Lathrop Boyd and Willard W. Boyd III, brothers of the bride. The best man was Howard Williams, whose wedding to Miss Francis will take place June 27.

The chiffon dresses of the bridesmaids emphasized the colors of larkspur, which they carried in their arms. Lavender-blue in shade, they fell to the ground, with the fullness of the skirt at the back trailing slightly on the grass. Beneath the high neckline the shirring of the bodice sloped to form a yoke, and the fullness was gathered at the waist. A contrasting sash of wood violet tinted chiffon started from each side, was twisted in the back, and fell below the hem line. Soft puffed sleeves were slashed from shoulder to elbow, the slit edged by a wood violet band. The bridesmaids wore also small clusters of larkspur in their hair.

Miss Francis wore a similar gown, but of a different shade. Trimmed in the wood violet, it was of pale pink, the color of the palest larkspur, which she carried.

The flower girl was in white net, Kate Greenaway style, with short puffed sleeves, square neck and

Pauline Bartels Is Betrothed to Lieut. Hurlbut

Announcement Made at Tea Given by Mrs. Leo Bartels—Bride-Elect a Debutante of This Season.

THE engagement of Miss Pauline Bartels, debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Leo Bartels, 121 Lake Forest, and Lieut. Oren Eugene Hurlbut, U. S. A., son of Mrs. Oren M. Hurlbut of Brookfield, Mo., was announced yesterday afternoon at a tea given by Mrs. Bartels at their home.

The decorations on the tea table suggested a wedding. The centerpiece was a miniature church covered with rambler roses, at the door of which was a bride and bridegroom about to pass beneath the traditional arch of sabers.

Mrs. Bartels and her daughter received about 100 guests in the living room. The prospective bride was in a gown of white marquisette over a green and white flowered foundation. Her costume was made with a high neckline and short sleeves. The flowered printed fabric was repeated in a sash tied at the back. She wore a corsage of gardenias and sweetheart roses.

The young women who presided at the tea table were: Mrs. George Wood Beeler who, until her recent marriage, was Miss Jane Stocke; Miss Marjorie Owen, Miss Anna Mary Royston, Miss Virginia Moser, Miss Elizabeth and Miss Carol Mansfield, Mrs. William T. Jones Jr., Miss Aurelia Gerhard, Miss Jane Jordan, Miss Martha Westlake, Miss Dorothy Grote and Miss Isabel Moberly.

Miss Bartels was graduated from Mary Institute and Washington University and is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority. She attended Smith College for two years and was a maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet ball last October.

Lieut. Hurlbut was graduated from the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y., in 1933 and since then has been stationed at Jefferson Barracks. He will be there until June 14, at which time he will go on furlough until Aug. 27, when he will report at Fort Benning, Ga., to attend the Infantry school.

First Nighters at Municipal Opera

ST. LOUISANS were afforded the opportunity for much informal entertaining at the opening of the Municipal Opera in Forest Park Friday night. The boxes were well filled and guests included visitors in St. Louis for the late spring season. Often these parties are preceded and followed by dinners and small suppers, and have become a favorite way of entertaining groups of young people, and bridal parties. Parties last night for the most part were small.

Because of the cool weather few wore summer evening attire, although some attractive gowns and light wraps were seen in the boxes. Many wore white coats of various styles and lengths over dark and pastel printed frocks. Large flower-trimmed hats were in evidence. Sports clothes of white and other light shades were popular and knitted suits and ensembles were seen frequently.

One of the early arrivals was former Mayor Henry W. Kiel, chairman of the executive board of the Municipal Opera, who stood chatting at the entrance with many friends. He had in his box Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Maestre and his daughter, Miss Edna Kiel. Mayor Bernard Dickmann was host to John Nagle, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Hanlan and Mrs. Clara Allen. During the intermission many friends visited Mayor Dickmann's box. Mrs. William Samuel Scott of New York, a former St. Louisan, who has been here for several weeks giving lectures on the productions for the current season and visiting friends, was entertained by Mrs. Richard W. Upshaw and her son, Richard W. Upshaw. Mrs. Scott wore a long pink cape with a collar of white fox fur over a summery evening gown of pale blue and white chiffon.

In a group of young people was Miss Eugenie Evans, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gwynne Evans, and her escort, Edward L. Bakewell Jr. Miss Evans wore a gown of red chiffon and a short white fur cape. Miss Frances Charlot was escorted by Theodore P. Desloge and Miss Ann Shapleigh was with Hugh Logan. Miss Constance Hall of Greenwich, Conn., who is the guest of Miss Betty Freeman, debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Freeman, was in the same party. Henry Carpenter was her escort. Mrs. Eugene S. Wilson Jr. of Moorestown, N. J., was with her brother, Oscar Rexford, and Mr. and Mrs. James C. Ward. Mrs. Wilson, the former Miss Louise Rexford, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ley Peterson

WASHINGTON SCENE

By the POE SISTERS

WASHINGTON, June 6.

WASHINGTON and its suburbs are famous for their rose gardens. There is one near the croquet ground at Woodley, the home of former Secretary of State Stimson, where, by invitation, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, often plays croquet.

In Georgetown Associate Justice Owen Roberts maintains a striking garden. The Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye, the new embassy grounds carefhlly laid out by the former owner, John Hays Hammond, are happy over their new roses, and the staffs of the British and Japanese embasies point with pride to the roses in their gardens. On the Georgetown Heights, in the Tudor place gardens bloom the descendants of Mount Vernon roses brought, it is said, by the grandchildren of Martha Washington to this historic Washington home.

Friends who motored to Montpelier the home of the Ambassador to Italy and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, near Laurel, Md., recently found the Ambassador in his rose garden giving directions as to the care of the beautiful bushes. Mrs. Long and Miss Christine Long remained in Italy for a time after the Ambassador left, then went to Paris, but will be back in America to attend the Democratic National Convention in Philadelphia.

MISS HELEN BEALL HOUSTON, daughter of the former Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. David Franklin Houston, was married to Robert Caldwell Patton in New York last Saturday.

The Houstons are people Washington remembers pleasantly, and Mrs. Houston's custom of wearing a single lovely flower on her gown each day the daily choice of the department greenhouses. The Houstons were not seen here for years until President Roosevelt's inauguration, when Mrs. Houston was on the presidential stand. The Houstons have been here several times since.

NOW bicycling is returning and all the world is awheel again. It is amazing to recall how Mrs. David Jayne Hill, when her husband was American Ambassador to Berlin, created a diplomatic tempest in a teapot by cycling through the streets of the German capital to the market and even bringing back her supplies on the wheel.

Mrs. Hill kept right on riding until her husband's post was changed.

Now the Mondell girls—Dorothy and Marjorie—the former the Mrs. Mondell Gregg and the latter the Mrs. Alfonsa Landa, daughters of former Representative and Mrs. Frank Mondell, are leading the way to the Skeet Club out Bradley Hills way. It is a popular gathering place. Among the enthusiasts are former Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis and his bride, the former Mrs. Charles Sabin, of New York, who won quite a reputation for herself as a skeet shooter on Long Island. Even Secretary Ickes takes time out to try his skill now and then, and Senator Joseph Guffey and his sisters frequently visit the club.

Following the service, the receiving line stood before the trees at the improvised altar. Mrs. Boyd was gowned in a blue chiffon afternoon dress, and hat to match, and her costume was completed by a lace jacket of the same color. The mother of the bridegroom, Mrs. Louis F. Lumaghi, wore a printed chiffon dress with a black background, and a wide brimmed black straw hat. The sleeves and hem of her dress were of matching lace.

Small tables were arranged through the gardens for the wedding supper which was served from a long buffet table set on the grass near the house. The table was decorated with large bowls of the garden flowers.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. David O'Neil, aunt of the bride, and her son, Horton, from Greenwich, Conn.; Mrs. Neal and Mrs. Hoover, whose husbands were groomsmen; Mr. and Mrs. John L. Clara Bell Walsh Back In St. Louis, Tells of Her Famous New York Parties

Hostess Being Extensively Entertained on Visit to Christen Zoo's New Baby Elephant.

By FAY PROFILET.

CLARA BELL WALSH, internationally known hostess, is in St. Louis, her former home, for the first time in 11 years. She is here for the christening of Clara Bell, the baby elephant recently acquired by the St. Louis Zoo, and is being entertained at one party after another.

Mrs. Walsh, as a New York hostess, covers the combined fields of Burke's Peerage, the Social Register and stage, screen and radio magazines. At the Park Plaza, where she is a guest during her stay in St. Louis, she said she liked to give parties because she liked people. She said she not only liked giving her friends a good time but that she liked to enjoy herself, which is said to be the secret of a successful hostess.

Mrs. Walsh's popularity is understandable for she is a combination of charm, sophistication and good fellowship. The stories told of her interest in persons in unfortunate circumstances and struggling young people of the theatrical world are legion. She is seen everywhere in New York, and the first night of a new play is not a first night without the presence of Clara Bell Walsh. She naturally is entertained quite as much as she entertains, but still finds time to do a great many interesting and worthwhile things.

Gives Parties for Charity.

Recently she gave a series of 10 dances for the benefit of the crippled children of New York. The parties were elaborate affairs at the Ambassador Hotel, and a huge sum was accumulated for this charity. The dances were given on Tuesday nights, each with a different decorative scheme, and entertainment was provided by headliners of the theatrical world. Mrs. Walsh conducted these parties very much as a smart night club. She welcomed the guests and was the official radio announcer for the evening.

Much has been heard of her salon. She says she is at home every day after 5 p. m. at her apartment in the Plaza. It is here that notables from abroad, stars of the stage and screen, members of racing set and her friends from the four corners of the earth make merry. She told the writer that her guests on these occasions number from one to 21. Mrs. Walsh thinks that people enjoy seeing each other, but that a generous portion of some sort of special entertainment and a little originality on the part of the hostess are extremely important.

Essentials for Good Party.

"Dancing, good food and good drinks are the main essentials for a good party," she said. "It takes me from five to eight minutes to get a party organized. I always mix my crowds, and frequently persons who do not speak are in the same room or at the same table. I consider their personal differences none of my affair—and often enemies leave arm in arm. That is why my friends call my apartment the 'Melting Pot.'"

When asked the sort of party she liked best she said that her favorite party was a breakfast or a luncheon or a tea or a cocktail party or a dinner or a dance, which gives an idea of how Mrs. Walsh likes parties.

An outstanding party given in New York last year was her "Amos and Andy Ball" for two of her close friends, Freeman Gosden and Charles Correll. The guests came dressed in calico, and many of them represented the characters created by the guests of honor in their radio skits. Women wore gowns of calico designed by famous modistes of New York, and men came in tailored calico full dress suits.

She gave a gay party last February in the Trianon room of the Ambassador Hotel, when masks of animal faces were provided for all the guests. The ceiling of the great ball room was hung with figures of monkeys and Mickey Mouse in a maze of brightly-colored balloons.

Mrs. Walsh said that Hassard Short, director of the "Music Box Revue" and the "Great Waltz," assisted her in planning these unusual parties. However, members of St. Louis society remember a large function that she and her husband, the late Julius S. Walsh Jr., gave at the St. Louis Country Club in 1917 when the guests all came dressed as children and cocktails were served from nursing bottles.

Pioneer in Cocktail Parties.

Then there were the Sunday morning parties given by Mrs. Walsh at their home, 4499 Lindell boulevard, when 50 friends were invited every Sunday at high noon for cocktails. According to a story printed in the Post-Dispatch March 27, 1917, "the guests of Sunday gave every evidence of enjoying the affair, and it is easy to guess that the cocktail party has come to stay, having evidently taken firm hold on the fickle fancy of the fashionables. The bar at Mrs. Walsh's home is commodious and well stocked, and the expert mixer who supplied the wants of the guests proved his skill by producing in a moment any kind of a cocktail called for by fancy."

Before her departure from New York for St. Louis, Mrs. Walsh entertained many persons from England, who were returning on the Queen Mary. Among them was Dr. Phillip Franklin of London, who has charge of a famous clinic for deaf mutes.

Mrs. Walsh, who comes from a Kentucky family known for generations for its stables, is an admirer and judge of horses. She gave a party last month for Cecil Boyd Roxford, who has charge of the Woodward Stables and who trained the 1935 Kentucky Derby winner, Omaha.

Among her closest friends and for whom she frequently entertains are John Charles Thomas, Beatrice Lillie, Frank Tours, musical director for the "Music Box Revue"; Irving Berlin, Fred Astaire, Mary Boland, Guy Robertson, Georgie Price, Guy Lombardo, Mr. and Mrs. Gosden and Mr. and Mrs. Correll.

When asked if she contemplated opening a night club or commercializing her talents as an entertainer, Mrs. Walsh said that when one made a business of entertaining the pleasure was lost. Her immediate plans are to go to California soon to visit Mr. and Mrs. "Amos 'n' Andy," and movie stars who are her friends.

Buys Collar for Elephant.

She is looking forward to christening the baby elephant and readily offered the information "that as young as baby elephant Clara Bell is, she can do tricks." She has had made a special leather collar as a christening gift. Mrs. Walsh was present when Edwin A. Lemp, member of the Zoological Board, and George P. Vierheller, director of the St. Louis Zoo, went to New York for the elephant, which was bought from Louis Ruhe, wild animal dealer, and was urged by Mr. Vierheller to come to St. Louis when the animal was christened. The purchase of Clara Bell was the incentive for a celebration given at Mrs. Walsh's home for Mr. Lemp, Mr. Vierheller and Frank Buck.

When seen yesterday, Mrs. Walsh was wearing a smart sports dress of Canterbury blue crepe, trimmed with touches of a darker blue, and a scarf about her shoulders monogrammed in the dark blue. She wore a medium hat of navy blue and her costume was set off by her unusual bracelet, the only one of its kind in the world. The braclet, which has been the source of much comment by New York columnists, is composed of diamond charms dangling from a diamond band. Each charm is a miniature masterpiece, and all were given her by her closest friends. There are two of black enamel and diamonds, in the likenesses of Amos and Andy. Others are in the image of Paul Whiteman, her little dog Skippy, her favorite ship, the Majestic; Earl Benham, said to be the best-dressed man in New York, and her saddle horse, Andy. Another is a tiny diamond lamb given her by Mrs. Gosden because Mrs. Walsh affectionately calls her "Lamb Hail."

With the arrival of the cards and a special delegation headed by Mrs. Florence Fifer Bohrer, former Republican member of Illinois Senate, headquarters will be opened today at the Hotel Statler in Cleveland. Mrs. E. L. Shoup, president of the Cleveland League, and Miss Florence Kirlin of Washington, are assisting Mrs. Bohrer in arrangements.

Signatures obtained by the league in support of its public personnel campaign to rid the country of the patronage system evils include those of federal officials, Congressmen, Governors, Mayors, members of civil service commissions, and citizens representative of various professions and interests.

Mrs. Bohrer, member of the Illinois Child Welfare Commission and daughter of Joseph W. Fifer, former Illinois Governor and Interstate Commerce Commissioner, will present the league's suggested plank to the Republican resolutions committee.

In summarized form, the plank contains these points:

"The patronage system in public service is a party liability and weakens faith in government.

"We, therefore, pledge ourselves to abolish the spoils system and to establish the merit system in federal, state and local offices.

"We advocate immediate legislation to place first, second and third class postmaster, deputy collectors of internal revenue and United States marshals in the classified service.

"We advocate extension of the merit system by transferring exempt positions to the classified service, with no further exemptions; the strengthening of laws and regulations affecting conditions of employment, such as recruitment, educational requirements, retention, promotion, dismissal and retirement, repeal of laws discriminatory of marital or economic status or residence against otherwise qualified people."

BONUS BONDS AWAIT MAILMAN IN THIS DISTRICT

1,300,000 in Vaults of Federal Reserve Bank for Distribution in Eight States.

$12,000,000 WORTH FOR ST. LOUIS AREA

24,600 Veterans in City and County to Get Average of $500 Each Beginning June 15.

Stacks of bonus bonds—1,300,000 of them—lie in the vaults of the Federal Reserve Bank at Broadway and Locust street, for distribution beginning June 15 when mailmen will deliver them to 130,000 veterans of the World War in this Federal Reserve District which includes parts of Missouri and seven other States.

The bonds, in $50 denominations, are for a total of $65,000,000, and each veteran will receive a check for amounts less than $50. The Veterans' Administration estimates that in St. Louis and the county 24,600 veterans will get about $12,000,000, the average payment being a little less than $500.

For nearly two months a staff of 98 persons has been engaged at the Federal Reserve Bank, working day and night shifts preparing the bonds and checks and placing them in envelopes for mailing.

On Currency Paper.

The bonds, printed on currency paper, are as wide as a dollar bill is long, and are about as long as the width of three dollar bills. Each of them bears the name of the recipient. They are non-transferable, but may be cashed immediately or may be held to bear interest at 3 per cent.

In preparing the bonds for distribution, the Veterans' Administration, which received applications several months ago, sends requisitions for the bonds and the check of each veteran to the regional disbursement office of the Treasury Department which has established temporary quarters on the fourth floor of the Federal Reserve Bank Building, formerly used as a recreation room by employes of the bank.

There a staff of 27 prints the checks and cuts the stencils used to inscribe the bonds with the names of the recipients. From there the checks, stencils and requisitions go to the basement office established by the bank where the bonds are inscribed and prepared for mailing.

Check Against Errors.

Two persons are present at each operation as insurance against errors and so that there may be two affidavits available should there be any question of a mistake. At the peak of operations last week 35,000 bonds a day were being prepared for mailing.

When the bonds are ready for the mails they are placed in cardboard boxes and trucked into the huge vault of the bank where they are stored behind a 45-ton door which may be reached only by passing through two barred doors.

Indicative of the vast amount of work required to prepare the bonds is that it required five men 15 six-hour days merely to count the first million blank bonds received at the bank. Several clerks devote all their time to handling changes of address which are received at the rate of about 90 a day, despite the fact that the applications were taken only a few months ago.

Frank N. Hall, comptroller of the bank, who is in charge of bonus operations there, said all of the bonds will be ready to place in the mails so that they may be delivered on June 15, a week from tomorrow.

To Be Registered in Mail.

The bonds will be mailed under frank, so far as the ordinary postage charges go, but they will be sent by registered mail, and the registration fee of 28 cents must be paid by the Treasury to the Postoffice Department. So the St. Louis post office will realize about $36,400 in registration charges.

Postmaster Jackson has asked veterans to remain at home on the night of June 15 when letter carriers will deliver the bonds. They can be delivered only to the person to whom they are addressed.

Those who wish to cash the bonds immediately may take them to one of the 11 certifying stations which the postoffice will establish in various parts of the city and county. Each of the bonds to be redeemed must be signed by the veteran in the presence of a certifying officer. If the veteran is not known to the postal employe serving as certifying officer he must be identified by a person who is known. The bonds may be redeemed also through banks. Payment will be made by check within a few days after the bonds have been presented for redemption.

Scotland Yard Has Hunted One Burglar for 25 Years

Operates in London Suburbs, Wears Flannel Socks on Shoes, Rides Bicycle, Always Takes Cash.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 6.—Despite its reputation, Scotland Yard doesn't always get its man.

The story of "Flannel Foot," a notorious cat burglar, is a case in point.

For exactly 25 years this elusive, second-story worker has embarrassed the Yard, put thousands of London policemen on their toes, evaded all traps and today continues merrily on his bicycle rifling hundreds of homes each year.

The "Flannel Foot" case is such a touchy one that Scotland Yard officers have barred any discussion or publicity on it. The question "who is Flannel Foot?" is greeted with silence around Yard headquarters in Westminster.

"Flannel Foot," so-called because he wears flannel socks or wrappings over his shoes to hide his footprints, is also known as the "phantom burglar," "the man on the bicycle," and "the man who leaves no clews." He wears gloves to foil fingerprint experts.

The burglar, whose history goes back to 1911, is credited with rifling nearly 3000 houses in Greater London since the war. He has been known to go through as many as six houses in a single night.

Steals Only Money.

His methods are well known to the police, but his identity remains the mystery, despite Scotland Yard's belief he has several times been in custody, but only on suspicions that couldn't be proved, because "Flannel Foot" steals only money, which cannot be distinguished, described or traced.

He is said to work only on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays. His usual method is to take a late train from London to a suburb, steal a bicycle, loot the neighborhood and ride the bicycle to some station miles distant where he boards a train, back to London.

The abandoned bicycles, together with the discarded flannel wrappings, have been found many times.

He works alone, using a glass cutter or sharp instrument to reach inside doors or windows to unlatch their locks from inside. He favors workmen's houses in the suburbs, and has gone through 40 in a single district in a month.

Strange Power Over Dogs.

"Flannel Foot" has some strange power over dogs, having frequently gone through houses where efficient watchdogs were on the job without disturbing or alarming them. Once he helped himself to the icebox in a house where a vicious dog was kept in the kitchen, presumably dividing his culinary loot with the four-footed guardian.

He operates somewhat spasmodically, sometimes robbing with feverish activity, after which he holds up for a time to allow the hue and cry to die down, or else shifting his activities to another suburb 20 or 30 miles away.

Sixty plain clothes men have been assigned at one time to try to apprehend the man. Despite the fact he is "public marauder No. 1" in England, he gets no newspaper publicity because the police do not let the public in on the secret of their failures.

So upset is Scotland Yard that a high official is in personal charge of his case.

A map, almost like a war chart at general headquarters, hangs on the wall of an inner chamber in the yard. Showing Greater London, it is studded all over with red-headed pins showing houses "Flannel Foot" has invaded.

New pins are added constantly, while the best brains in the Yard lay traps which the marauder evades.

1,516,090 OFF-JOBS DONE DURING CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN

17,249 More Than Last Year; 7500 Persons Received Employment, Director Says.

A total of 1,516,090 odd-jobs were completed during the annual clean-up, paint-up campaign, sponsored April 20 to May 2, by the Chamber of Commerce, it was announced yesterday. The number of jobs compared with 1,498,841 last year and 516,000 in 1932, when the first drive was held.

Approximately 7500 persons received employment and the repairing of properties was on a larger scale than at any time in the last several years, F. E. Lawrence Jr., director of the campaign, said. The 36,943 jobs completed in the downtown district included repairing, repainting and cleaning of business buildings as well as smaller jobs which added to the attractiveness of the business district, Lawrence said.

Permanent possession of the Allen W. Clark Civic Betterment Trophy was won by the Samuel M. Kennard School, which finished in first place for the third successive year, on the basis of jobs reported by each pupil. The Kennard School reported 71,401 jobs completed. Central High School won second place and Clark School third. First place among Catholic schools was won by Holy Family School and among Lutheran schools by Markus School.

CONDEMNATION SUIT FILED FOR LAND FOR NEW ROUTE 40

Action on 30 Per Cent of Right-of-Way Between Lindbergh Bl. and Bellefontaine.

Having acquired by purchase about 70 per cent of the right-of-way for the new location of United States Highway No. 40, between Lindbergh boulevard and Bellefontaine, the State Highway Department filed a condemnation suit in Circuit Court at Clayton Friday for the remaining 30 per cent.

The right-of-way in this section will cover about 209 acres, taking a strip 8.62 miles long and generally 200 feet wide. Parcels of land which the State was able to buy outright and those which it must take by condemnation are intermixed along the route. Prices paid in direct purchases varied from about $200 an acre at the west end to about $400 at the east end. The total expenditure has not been compiled.

In this section the new highway will run midway betwen Clayton and Conway roads, connecting with Olive Street road at Bellefontaine. The highway is being paved between Bellefontaine and the Missouri River, northwest of Chesterfield, and a bridge over the river is being built. Grading has been done in St. Charles County between the river and Wentzville, western end of the new road. There has been no plan announced to carry the road into the city from Lindbergh boulevard. The State has hoped to open it late next year.

CLARK MEMORIAL TO BE DEDICATED BY ROOSEVELT

President to Take Part in Ceremonies at $2,000,000 Structure June 14, in Vincennes, Ind.

COMMEMORATES VICTORY IN 1779

With 130 Men Virginian Took Fort and Won Northwest Territory, One-Tenth of Area of U. S.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

VINCENNES, Ind., June 6.—President Franklin D. Roosevelt will dedicate on June 14 the national memorial here of the capture of Fort Sackville by George Rogers Clark in 1779. Clark's victory gained for the American Revolutionary forces the old Northwest territory from which the present states of Wisconsin, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio and part of Minnesota were formed.

With the smallest American force every mustered—130 poorly clad men—Clark, at the age of 26, made a 244-mile march in the dead of winter to capture Fort Sackville on Feb. 2, 1779. Until recently historians have failed to take cognizance of Clark's military achievements, which meant the addition of approximately a quarter of a million square miles, exceeding in area the combined territories of France, Denmark and Switzerland, and one-tenth of the size of the United States today.

$2,000,000 Memorial.

The Clark Memorial, erected at a cost of $2,000,000, stands on the site of old Fort Sackville. On the 150th anniversary of the capture of the fort, Congress passed the George Rogers Clark Memorial bill and authorized the expenditure of $1,500,000. In addition $500,000 was appropriated by the State of Indiana. The ground was purchased by Knox County, of which Vincennes is the county seat.

The memorial is a circular building of classical design, its dome supported by 17 fluted columns, each nine feet in diameter and 70 feet high. Two broad flights of steps lead to it. The entrance is a massive door of bronze. In the center of the interior stands a bronze statue of Clark. On the walls are seven large paintings in oil, illustrating the most important phases in the winning of the West.

The grounds are a greensward with a landscaping of hardy trees and evergreens terminating to the south at the approach of the new Lincoln Memorial Bridge. The Lincoln national highway crosses the bridge over the Wabash River at Vincennes.

Clark's Career.

George Rogers Clark was born Nov. 19, 1752, in Virginia, near the home of Thomas Jefferson. James Madison was a schoolmate. As a youth, Clark was a surveyor, and, when 19 years old, traveled the route to Pittsburgh which George Washington had taken 20 years before. In the Indian wars he was one of the leaders in defending the fort at Harrodsburg, Ky.

During the Revolutionary War Clark determined to conquer the Northwest. Among important forts along the Wabash and Mississippi Rivers was that of Vincennes, where, in 1702, was established the first settlement in the Northwest. Most of the settlers were Creoles, who lived on friendly terms with the Indians.

Clark's plans were laid before the Assembly at Virginia and appeals were made to Gov. Patrick Henry. Although Virginia was facing the task of supplying men and money for the army under George Washington, Clark got a grant of money and was put at the head of the Virginia militia.

British Surprise Attack.

Aided by three Virginians—Leonard Helm, Joseph Bowman and James Harrod—Clark mustered his little army and set out in the middle of May, 1778. Deciding to attack Kaskaskia, a small British post near the Mississippi, the army marched down the Ohio until it came near the mouth of the Tennessee River, then went north by land, penetrating a wilderness infested by Indians. On July 4, 1778, the band reached the Kaskaskia River, crossed during the night and fell on Kaskaskia, and, without bloodshed, captured Fort Gage. Another settlement, Cahokia, along the Mississippi, north of Kaskaskia, was taken without resistance.

At Kaskaskia, Clark met Father Gibault, missionary priest from Vincennes. The priest won the inhabitants to Clark's cause. Clark sent Capt. Helm and a handful of men to scout on the situation at Vincenes. They found the fort there poorly defended and took possession.

But the British General, Henry Hamilton, stationed at Detroit, with 600 men, attacked Vincennes without warning and forced Capt. Helm to surrender.

Capture of Vincennes.

Clark meanwhile met Francis Vigo, a Spanish fur trader, who was in the vicinity of Kaskaskia and brought him news of Capt. Helm's surrender. Vigo aided Clark financially. Clark, knowing Hamilton would attack him if he remained in Kaskaskia, marched on Vincennes.

They had to cross swollen streams, the water reaching to their shoulders. A few miles from Vincennes they learned of the situation from Creoles and Clark sent them back with a letter to the citizens. The letter was hurried to Father Gibault, the parish priest, who had returned from his mission at Kaskaskia. Father Gibault told the citizens to accept the Americans.

On the night of Feb. 23 Clark's men took the town and at daybreak attacked the fort. After several hours Clark sent a message to Hamilton. The British general, failing to obtain a three-day truce after a conference held in front of the St. Francis Xavier little log church, unconditionally surrendered Feb. 25, 1779.

Died in Poverty.

In later years Clark served Virginia in a military capacity. With the Revolutionary War still continuing in the East, his heroic capture of Fort Sackville received only slight recognition and in later years he was forced to pay debts incurred during his campaign. Even lands were taken from him to meet with the demands. He died in poverty, Feb. 13, 1818, and was buried with military honors at Cave Hill Cemetery, Louisville, Ky.

However, the part that Gibault and Vigo played in the winning of the West has not gone unhonored. In front of the St. Francis Xavier old cathedral, built in 1834, on the site of Father Gibault's old log church, has been placed a plaza built in keeping with the memorial grounds. In the center of the plaza is a statue of Father Gibault in clerical robes. He has received the title, "Patriot Priest of the Northwest." Beside the memorial has been placed a statue of Vigo.

ENGLISH BIRTH DECLINE SERIOUS, SAYS DOCTOR

Country Fast Becoming Nation of Old Persons—Extinction Possible.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, June 6.—The English people are threatened with extinction by a "continual fall" in the nation's birth rate, the London correspondent of the Journal of the American Medical Association reports in an issue just published.

The population will be reduced anywhere from one-half to one-tenth of its present size in the next 100 years if the prevailing trend continues, the correspondent said, and complete disappearance is "only a matter of time." Schools are already being closed, he said, because there are no children to attend them.

The decline in the birth rate has been steady for the last 60 years and is rapidly making Britain a nation of old persons, the correspondent explained, because "improved sanitation has prolonged life" meanwhile.

Although figures showed that Enland's population had increased by 12.5 per cent per 1000 annually from the beginning of the nineteenth century to the World War—the highest rate in Europe—and then slumped to 4.4 per cent from 1924 to 1934, the journal's correspondent asserted "these . . . do not show the seriousness of the position." He continued:

"A slight increase of population still exists. What few people realize is that, while a population may increase for some time, its fertility may already be reduced to a level which means, if unchanged, ultimate extinction. This has occurred in England. . . .

"An exhaustive study of the future population of England and Wales, by Dr. Enid Charles, has been published by the London and Cambridge Economic Service. She points out that, if the present rates continue, the extinction of the population is only a matter of time.

"To forecast what will actually occur, she considers three hypotheses: (1) that the fertility and the mortality rates continue as in 1933; (2) that the recent fall in these rates will continue; (3) that mortality continue to fall and that fertility remains constant at the 1931 level.

"According to the first hypothesis, the population will be halved a century hence; according to the second, it will be reduced to one-tenth; according to the third, to about four-fifths."

ART MUSEUM BUYS ANCIENT BRONZE HEAD

Scupture From African Empire of Benin, Now Known as Nigeria.

City Art Museum in Forest Park has acquired a fine portrait head in bronze attributed to an ancient, pre-classical period of the Benin empire on the west coast of Africa, now known as Nigeria.

The sculpture, somewhat less than life size, is the head of a young Negro, stylized to represent not so much the accidents of individuality as a traditional idea of character and personality. The influence of the Egyptian art is apparent.

What seems to be the hair, dressed in overlapping layers, may be, it is thought, a close-fitting cap of coral fringe corresponding to the high beaded collar. Coral was greatly esteemed among the people of Benin, and on certain festivals the King, as a mark of special favor, conferred on his favorites the right to wear coral for life.

The head bears eight formal scarifications on the brow which are taken to be marks of rank or tribal distinction, as also are the long marks in the center of the forehead, originally inlaid with iron for a color differentation. The inlay has almost completely disintegrated.

Aside from its significance as an example of native culture, the head is of interest because it is a product of the difficult art of bronze casting by the so-called "lost wax process."

In the absence of written history, little is known of the ancient Benin empire and what contact it may have had with other civilizations. Considerable commerce with the outside world was carried on by sea in the seventeenth century. The smiths, weavers, tanners, ivory carvers and carpenters of Benin were noted for their skill and examples of their craftmanship found their way into European collections.

It was not, however, until a British punitive expedition in the middle of the last century that the extraordinary bronze work became known in Europe, although there is no doubt that the art was practiced from the earliest times.

The museum's sculpture was purchased from M. Knoedler & Co. in New York for $3150.

LIFE SAVING DEVICES FOR DROWNING SHOWN

Red Cross Demonstrates Cork Rings, Torpedo Buoys and Surf Boards.

Latest mechanical aids for rescuing persons from drowning were tried out by eight members of the Midwest Red Cross first aid and lifesaving staff in the Meramec river at Fenton, Friday. Later the men will instruct guards and swimmers in the use of the equipment.

The mechanical devices are used to reduce the danger to lifeguards in making rescues. It has frequently happened in the past that would-be rescuers tired and sank before they could swim back to shore with the drowning person.

The simplest device which should be kept near swimming places, it was pointed out, is a heaving line—a rope made heavy on one end with a knot. This can be thrown to a person struggling in the water and he can then be towed to safety.

Another aid is the ring buoy, made of cork and balsam and covered with canvas. With the attached rope it weighs only 3¼ pounds. The Red Cross workers were instructed to pitch it with an underhand motion to get the greatest possible distance.

Particularly useful at bathing places on large rivers and lakes where the lifeguard must frequently swim long distances to reach persons in distress, is the torpedo buoy, a cylinder pointed at both ends. The guard pulls it as he swims by placing a rope around his shoulders. When he reaches the drowning person he passes the buoy to him and tows him ashore, using the buoy as a support.

A fourth mechanical aid in effecting rescues is the surf board. The guard lies flat on his stomach on the board and paddles out. When he reaches the person who is drowning, he pulls him on the board and then swims back to the shore.

Improvised equipment such as poles and boards can often be used in rescues, members of the field staff were told. The mechanical equipment, however, can be depended on more to reduce the danger to the lifeguard. Without such equipment, the guard relies entirely on his own strength and his ability to break wrist and other locks often clamped on him by the person in danger.

PROTEST SENT TO GOV. PARK ON PROPOSED PRISON PLANTS

Several Organizations Point Out Factories Will Compete With Outside Industries.

A telegram protesting against the proposed construction of two new factories at the Missouri Penitentiary at Jefferson City has been sent to Gov. Park by the Missouri Prison Labor Committee of the United Garment Workers of America, the Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs, the Missouri members of International Association of Garment Manufacturers and the Missouri members of the Cordage Institute.

The message pointed out that the factories will produce, with prison labor, goods to compete with the products of outside industry. Such goods, it was said, may not be shipped to 24 states where prison-made goods are not sold in the open market, because of legal prohibitions, and thus Missouri, not having such a law, may become a "dumping ground" for prison products, resulting in hardships both to labor and the manufacturer.

THREE SCOUT CAMPS; TWO CRUISES IN JUNE

First of Canoe Trips June 20 —Barge to Take Boats to Regatta.

Three Boy Scout camps and two cruises will be offered to St. Louis scouts this month for summer activity. The scout camps include Lion's Den, located a mile from Seckman, Mo.; Camp Powder Mill, a new senior scout camp on the Current River at Owl Bend, Mo.; and Camp Irondale. The Sea Scouts of St. Louis will leave next Sunday on a cruise to Lake Cooper, above Keokuk, Ia., where they will stay two weeks, the second week being devoted to the Regional Regatta of the Sea Scouts of Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming, which comprise Region Eight. The St. Louis Council will also operate a canoe trip through the Superior National Forest and along the Canadian border.

The first of the canoe trips, known as Wilderness Canoe Trips, will start June 20 when scouts will leave St. Louis in chartered busses and meet Hal. Rush, director of the trips, at Ely, Minn., where they will begin a trip along the Canada border.

The equipment to be carried by the barge will include a small power transport capable of carrying more than 20 passengers, and 20 sailing boats.

Sir Edgar P. Britten, commander of the Queen Mary, accepted the first honorary membership of the Sea Scout ship "Polaris," it was announced Friday at a bridge of honor for the ship at the Forest Park Hotel. The Regional Sea Scout Committee appointed the "Polaris" as the Flagship of Region Eight.

MEMORIAL SERVICES TODAY FOR FR. DEMPSEY

Committee of 285 St. Louisans Sponsoring Program in Municipal Auditorium.

A public memorial service for Mgr. Timothy Dempsey, "Father Tim" to the thousands of every race and religion he had befriended, will be held at 2:30 p. m. today in Convention Hall at Municipal Auditorium.

The service is sponsored by a committee of 285 St. Louisans, many of them workers in the causes he espoused, headed by a committee, the members of which are Mayor Dickmann, the Rev. James P. Johnston, Father Dempsey's successor at St. Patrick's Church; Isaac Gradwohl, M. B. Marshall and Postmaster W. Rufus Jackson.

Busses will be furnished to provide transportation to and from the services for the special guests—the lodgers and dependents from the institutions he created, Father Dempsey's Home for Men, Father Dempsey's Home for Women, Father Dempsey's Free Lunchroom and other beneficiaries of his far-flung charitable enterprises. They will be seated in sections reserved for their use.

Dickmann to Open Service.

After a selection by the cathedral choir, Mayor Dickmann will open the service. Brigadier Victor Lundgren of the Salvation Army will deliver the invocation and he will be followed by Archbishop Glennon. Father Dempsey's Fife, Drum and Bugle Corps will play "The Western Trooper." In succession Postmaster Jackson, Rabbi Julius Gordon, Shaare Emeth Temple, and the Rev. Dr. C. Oscar Johnson, Third Baptist Church, president of the Church Federation, will speak.

"Ave Maria" will be sung by the cathedral choir, followed by addresses by the Rev. Mr. John Moreland, pastor Metropolitan A. M. E. Zion Church; the Rev. Dr. Martin J. O'Malley, C. M., Kenrick Seminary, and Thomas F. Quinn, president of the St. Louis Building Trades Council. The program will be concluded after "Auld Lang Syne" is played by a brass band of the Musicians' Union, with benediction by Father Johnston and a salute by the firing squad of the 138th Infantry.

Father Dempsey died April 6 after 30 years in the priesthood, in which time he founded in his parish a series of charities, supported by contributions from his admirers and sympathizers, that before his death had merited national attention. Sincerely non-sectarian in his administrations to the needy, he obtained financial assistance from all religious denominations and racial groups.

What Meager Budget Did.

It has been estimated that his comparatively meager budget enabled him to provide 600,000 free lodgings and more than 300,000 free meals at the workingman's hotel which he founded in 1906; destitute women, at the institution he established for them in 1911 have received 150,000 free lodgings and about 200,000 free meals. As many as 13,000 meals have been served in one day at his free lunchroom set up during the depression. The countless gratuities of his charities to impoverished families are reflected in accountings which show distribution during the last five years of 150,000 baskets of food, 149,000 quarts of milk, 14,000 pounds of meat, 20,000 bushels of vegetables and tons of bread.

The memorial services are open to the public and those of it who knew and needed Father Tim are especially invited, members of the committee stated.

Studio Gossip

MARION TELVA, the St. Louis contralto, who is billed as soloist on the program at noon today on the WJZ network and KWK, is the wife of Elmer Jones, president of the Wells-Fargo Express Co., whom she married in 1929 at the height of her career at the Metropolitan Opera House. Since her marriage, she has not been so much in the public eye, and there is considerable speculation in New York as to whether she is planning to become active again in opera and concert.

She was born Marion Taucke on the St. Louis South Side, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Taucke. She was a student at McKinley High School when her voice attracted attention, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiggins and Benjamin Gratz became interested in her and furthered her ambitions. Mme. Schumann-Heink heard her sing, and encouraged her to follow a singing career. She became a soloist at the Second Presbyterian Church and a position as stenographer at the Town Club helped her to study. In 1918, she sang as soloist in the Odeon with the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and in 1919 she gave a recital here that supplied funds with which she went to New York to continue her studies. In New York, she worked as a stenographer for a law firm and studied until she had an opera and concert repertoire. Eventually she turned for study to Paul Eisler, who was assistant conductor at the Metropolitan, and he obtained an audition for her with Artur Bodanzky, one of the principal conductors at the opera house, and Director Gatti-Casazza. She won a contract and on New Year's Eve, 1920, made her "Met" debut in "Manon." Her success was immediate, and she was a star for 12 years at the Metropolitan. She toured the country in concert, sang in grand opera in St. Louis, and won recognition as one of this country's leading artists. . . .

A duplex studio, 20 by 40 feet, will be added to the six studios now in use, the kitchen auditorium will be enlarged, 10 new offices, a new reception lounge and a musicians' lounge will be built. Options have been obtained on land adjoining the new studios of KNX, Los Angeles, which the CBS has arranged to buy for $1,300,000 if the FCC approves after the hearing which it has called. CBS headquarters for the Pacific Coast will be established in San Francisco, where the network has leased KSFO and plans to spend about $100,000 on new studios in that city. However, most of the more important Coast programs for the CBS chain will originate in Los Angeles and Hollywood. . . .

Record Radio "Hook-up" for Convention

Largest Number of Stations Ever Covering Such an Event Will Be Linked to Microphones for Republican Sessions.

WITH 250 or more stations in the WEAF, WJZ, CBS, Mutual and regional networks linked into one huge chain, and many independent stations throughout the country also carrying the broadcasts, it is expected that there will be a record radio "hook-up" for the Republican national convention in Cleveland this week, beginning when the session is called to order Tuesday morning.

While the convention highlights and developments will be covered thoroughly by the networks, an effort will be made to disturb established programs as little as possible.

Tuesday's convention highlight broadcast on KSD will cover the opening of the convention, with the first scheduled at 9:30 a. m., and the keynote speech of Senator Frederick Steiwer at 8 p. m. Wednesday, the principal broadcasts will be devoted to the address by the permanent chairman and reports, including that of the Platform Committee. Thursday, the demonstrations and nominations for President should be the chief feature, and Friday is expected to bring the start on the ballotting.

Senator Steiwer's address Tuesday night will be preceded by a song recital by Reinald Werrenrath, the baritone, who has been selected as official singer for the convention.

In addition to the general convention broadcasts, the CBS net has set aside the periods from 7:45 to 8 a. m., 5 to 5:15 p. m., and 8:45 to 9 p. m. for addresses and interviews with party leaders, candidates, Senators and Congressmen and political commentators.

A total of 75 microphones have been installed in the convention hall by the NBC for the WEAF and WJZ chains of 97 stations and 68 more by the CBS for its net of 125 stations. In addition, both the NBC and CBS will have several tiny micro-wave transmitters and a number of announcers wearing lapel microphones on the floor and in the balcony. Fifty-three of the NBC microphones will be placed to give each State delegation one. There will be two microphones for the permanent chairman, big parabolic microphones to pick up crowd noises, and other standard microphones in the balcony, at strategic points on the stage, in the balcony studio, at the organ and near the band stand. A special microphone will be assigned to the "pause interpreter," William Hard, who will explain to listeners the reasons for lulls in the convention proceedings. Preparations by the CBS are equally elaborate.

The delegation microphones will be handled as a separate unit, operated from a floor panel adjacent to the chairman's stand. This panel will have a connecting plug and an indicator light for each delegation microphone. When the chairman recognizes a delegate on the floor, the engineer at this panel will push a button, linking the microphone in the delegate's section to the networks and the public address system. This system is expected to be of particular advantage in relaying the vote from the floor to the chair. Heretofore, voting often has proceeded too rapidly for the radio floor equipment to keep pace with it.

Graham McNamee will head the NBS staff of regular announcers. The NBC convention commentators will include Dorothy Thompson, the Post-Dispatch columnist, who is the wife of Sinclair Lewis, the novelist, and author herself of "The New Russia" and "I Saw Hitler"; Walter Lippmann, whose comment on national and international affairs is an editorial feature of the Post-Dispatch; William Hard, newspaper man and network political analyst; Lowell Thomas, traveler, author and news broadcaster, and Edwin S. Hill, known internationally as a newspaper man and to KSD listeners for this "Human Side of the News programs"'

Bob Trout, the "presidential announcer," will head the CBS staff of announcers and H. V. Kaltenborn, its commentators. Others who will interpret the convention happenings for the CBS net will include Paul Mallon, news writer; Percy Wimer, another widely known newspaper man; Maybell Jennings, a Washington columnist; Frank Kent, political writer; H. L. Mencken, the writer; Raymond Clapper, J. V. Connelly, Mark Sullivan, Turner Catledge and George B. Parker.

WGN, Chicago, and the Mutual Network, which at times includes WLW, has assigned to report the convention Arthur Sears Henning and Arthur M. Evans, news writers; Quinn Ryan, veteran WGN announcer, and Gabriel Heatter, the news commentator.

Commentators selected by the NBC for the convention broadcasts will gather around a microphone for a broadcast at 8:30 tomorrow night on the WJZ chain. The purpose is to have them discuss convention prospects for listeners.

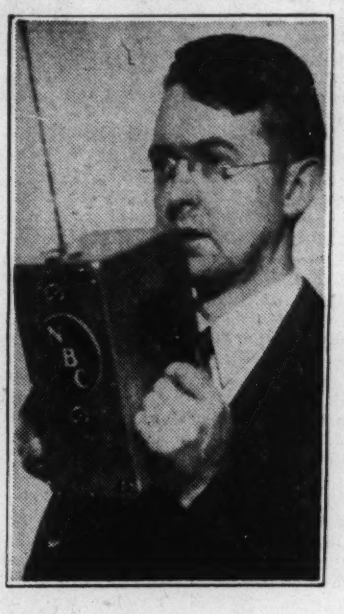
Democratic Convention Broadcasting Plans

VIRTUALLY the same announcers and commentators will be used by the NBC and CBS for reporting the Democratic national convention in Philadelphia as for the Republican convention.

Installation of microphones in the hall in Philadelphia, however, will be different. Instead of having a microphone on the floor for each State delegation as in Cleveland, the NBC will have 10 suspended overhead from swinging steel arms. These installations have been so devised, that a microphone can be lowered into position over any speaker on the floor to pick up his voice. In other respects, the installation will be similar to that at the Republican convention.

Broadcast highlights from the Democratic convention are expected to include the opening of the convention Tuesday morning, June 23; the keynote speech by Senator Alben W. Barkley at 8 p. m. the same day; the address of the permanent chairman, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, at 8 p. m. Wednesday, June 24; the nominations and President, the demonstrations and balloting, and probably President Roosevelt's speech of acceptance.

NEW MICRO WAVE TRANSMITTER



NEW micro-wave transmitter which the NBC announcers carry around on the floor of the Republican National Convention this week. In the picture, Robert Morris, an NBC engineer, is holding the transmitter, which is housed in a small box and has as a transmitting aerial a brass rod projecting upward from the box. The transmitter broadcasts on an extremely short wave. It contains a microphone, batteries and amplifier. The radiations it sends out are picked up by special ultra short wave radio sets, passed along to the NBC studios, and then amplified and sent over the wire circuits to the network stations for broadcasting.

Victor Kolar's Concert Series to End June 21

Two-Hour Broadcasts of Symphonic Music From Philadelphia Park to Replace Them on June 28.

TWO hours of music by the Philadelphia Summer Concerts Orchestra will be broadcast from 6:30 to 8:30 Sunday nights on the CBS net, starting June 28, it is announced. These concerts are to take the place of those by Victor Kolar's orchestra, which have been broadcast from 7 to 8 o'clock Sundays. It is stated that the programs will feature the finest of symphonic music, and that the first will bring Russian music and will be conducted by Alexander Smallens. The concerts will be played in the Robin Hood Dell, Fairmont Park, Philadelphia.

It is hoped that KMOX will broadcast this new series, but there is a question whether the network actually will carry two hours of the concerts because of the shifting of the Mary Pickford program to 8 p. m. Sundays.

Concerts by the Portland Symphony Orchestra, led by Basil Cameron, will be carried by the CBS network from 6 to 7 p. m. Thursdays, starting June 25. Cameron, who is conductor of the Seattle Symphony Orchestra, will direct the concerts in place of Willem van Hoogstraten, leader of the Portland orchestra, who will be in Europe.

Branch Rickey, of the St. Louis Cardinals baseball team, who is president of the Hi-Y Congress, will speak in a broadcast from a convention of the Congress at Berea, Ky., at 5:15 p. m. Monday, June 15, on the CBS chain.

More Power Over Stations Given to FCC

"State-Quota" System Abolished—Granting of Higher Wattage and Licensing of New Stations Made Easier by Congress' Action.

ALMOST unnoticed in the rush of Congress toward adjournment was the passage of a measure which greatly increased the powers of the Federal Communications Commission over broadcasting and radio stations and makes possible sweeping changes in the stations' set-up, higher power permits and the licensing of more stations.

The measure repealed the Davis bill, which has been in force since 1928. That bill, adopted shortly after the original Federal Radio Commission was created in 1927, specified that the country be divided into five radio zones, disproportionate in size but approximately the same in population. Then it was specified that each of the zones have the same number of stations, the same allocations of power and the same broadcasting service, the distribution to be based upon population. Finally it provided that there be an equitable distribution of the facilities among the states in each zone according to population.

This placed the allocation of broadcasting station assignments on a mathematical basis. In 1930 the Radio Commission adopted what it called the "quota system," a unit of measure covering station assignments, and then proceeded to assign facilities according to units, I has never been able to strike a balance in the allocations, and more than half of the states today are "over-quota" in broadcasting facilities.

The reason was that the commission was restricted in assignments to the amount of facilities it could cram into the geographically small areas like New York and New England, which had the great concentrations of populations. In other words, New York set the pace for the rest of the country. Yet the West, Montana, for example, couldn't have any more facilities than the population called for, although technically it could accommodate perhaps 10 times the quotas without interference.

So today the restrictive provisions of the Davis amendment have been lifted by Congress. There are no more radio zones, and the quota system has been scrapped. The Federal Communications Commission is free to allocate facilities without regard to quota or population. All it has to watch now are the technical restrictions and the economic ability of particular communities to accommodate additional stations.

The FCC had urged repeal of the Davis amendment for the last two years, on the ground that it was "contrary to natural laws and has resulted in the concentration of the use of frequencies in centers of population and the restriction of facilities in sparsely populated states, even though interference considerations would permit the operation of one or more additional stations. It held further that experience had shown that the Davis amendment was difficult of administration and could not result in equality of broadcasting service.

It is expected that there will be many applications for increased facilities and for new stations. It is not expected, however, that the FCC will consider any of them until it convenes next fall after a recess for the summer.

ST. LOUIS PUBLIC HIGH SCHOOLS TO GRADUATE 2121

Record Class to Receive Diplomas Wednesday and Thursday — 1884 Whites and 237 Negroes.

ROOSEVELT GROUP IS LARGEST—376

Large Attendance Attributed to Depression, Which Has Deprived Children of Employment

Graduating exercises for the largest class in the history of the public high schools here will be held Wednesday and Thursday.

There will be 1884 white graduates and 237 Negro, a total of 2121. The June classes always are much larger than the mid-year classes in January. The sharp increase in the volume of pupils finishing high school in June during the last six years was as follows: 1935, 1784; 1934, 1664; 1933, 1430; 1932, 1296; 1931, 1317; 1930, 1200.

In addition, there will be commencement exercises for 118 graduates of Hadley Vocational School, three at Booker T. Washington (Negro) Vocational School, 137 young women receiving A. B. degrees at Harris Teachers' College and 27 at Stowe (Negro) Teachers' College.

Schedule of Programs.

Times of the various programs, the numbers of graduates and members of the Board of Education who will deliver the principal addresses follow:

Beaumont High, 296 graduates, 4 p. m., Thursday, Dr. Solon Cameron.

Blewett High, 312, 10 a. m. Wednesday, Henry P. Schroeder.

Central High, 165, 8 p. m. Wednesday at Beaumont Auditorium, John J. Sheahan.

Cleveland High, 331, 8 p. m. Thursday, Edward A. Ferrenbach.

McKinley High, 198, 8 p. m. Thursday, Joseph J. Ward.

Roosevelt High 376, 8 p. m. Thursday, Richard Murphy.

Soldan High, 206, 10 a. m. Thursday, Dr. David C. Todd.

Sumner (Negro) High, 122, 8 p. m. Wednesday, Schroeder.

Vashon (Negro) High, 115, 8 p. m. Thursday, Emil J. Barth.

Harris College, 8 p. m. Thursday at Soldan Auditorium, President James J. Fitzgerald.

Stowe College, 8 p. m. Thursday at Sumner Auditorium, Dr. Francis C. Sullivan.

Hadley Vocational, 4 p. m. Thursday, Ferrenbach.

Washington Vocational, 10 a. m. Thursday, Arthur A. Blumeyer.

Record Roosevelt Class.

The class of 376 boys and girls graduating from Roosevelt High is the largest class ever leaving a St. Louis high school.

School officials have attributed the greatly increased attendance at high schools largely to the depression, which has deprived children of the opportunity to find work but given them the chance to prolong their education. The administrative problem has been difficult, forcing the creation of ninth grade centers in otherwise vacant rooms of elementary schools, to reduce the size of freshman classes in the high schools. It also has been necessary to start the erection of an eighth high school for white children, at the southwest corner of Kingshighway and Arsenal street, which will not be ready until next January.

Cost of operating the school system has increased sharply as a result of the growth of enrollment at the high schools, where the cost per pupil is much greater than in grade school. Superintendent of Instruction Henry J. Gerling has been endeavoring to find and remove the causes of excessive failures in studies among high school students, not only for their benefit, but to reduce expenses and congestion.

Simple Exercises.

About 4000 boys and girls will be graduated from the public elementary schools this week, compared with 3966 a year ago. Dr. Gerling has urged the grade school principals to insist on simple exercises.

The exercises of the two teachers' colleges will be for the benefit of young women who finished their courses last January as well as this month. At Harris College there were 97 finishing this month and 40 in January.

The schools will close Friday. As for several years past, there will be no public summer schools, but some teachers will conduct private classes during the vacation. School playgrounds will open a week from tomorrow. The schools will reopen Sept. 8, the day after Labor day.

Judge's Wife Killed in Fall.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, June 6.—Mrs. Marcel Cerf, 50 years old, socially prominent widow of a former United States District Judge in San Francisco, fell to death early today from a ninth-floor window of her apartment. Mrs. Cerf, decorated by the French Legion of Honor for war relief work, lived with a daughter, Elizabeth Cerf, who expressed belief her mother h l fallen when opening the window preparatory to retiring.

State Senator Brogan Gains Strength in Re-election Fight Against Anti-Dickmann Faction

T. H. Quinn, 18th Ward Democratic City Committeeman, Decides Not to Support His Brother—Says He's for Party Harmony.

The fight against the renomination of State Senator Joseph H. Brogan by members of the Democratic faction opposing Mayor Dickmann suffered a setback yesterday with the announcement by Thomas H. Quinn, Eighteenth Ward Democratic City Committeeman, who had been expected to support his brother, Howard Quinn against Brogan, that he would support Brogan.

"I think Howard made a mistake in filing against Joe Brogan," said Thomas Quinn. "I am for harmony in the party and believe that harmony can be helped by renominating Brogan. I am for him lock, stock and barrel."

Brogan's senatorial district, the Thirty-third which he has represented since 1908, includes 16 precincts in the Eighteenth Ward, in which Thomas Quinn, as committeeman, has considerable influence. Howard Quinn filed at the instance of a group which includes Justice of Peace Jimmy Miller, Fourth Ward boss, who is also supporting William Warren Burke, a State Representative, for the Democratic nomination for State Senator of the Thirty-first District against another veteran Senator, Michael Kinney, who has served since 1912.

Result of Factional Strife.

The fight against Brogan and Kinney is one of the principal results of factional strife in the local Democratic party which has led to contests for the City Committee in twenty-four of the 28 wards. Members of party committees are elected at the primary election Aug. 4. There are 126 candidates for the 56 posts on the Democratic City Committee and 106 candidates for the 56 positions on the Republican City Committee.

While Mayor Dickmann has refrained from indorsing the candidacies of any aspirants for the City Committee, it is known that his supporters have entered candidates in ever yward where the committeeman or committeewoman has been politically unfriendly to the Mayor.

On the Republican side ,there are contests for one or the other posts on the committee in 24 of the 28 wards.

The complete list of filings for the Democratic and Republican City Committees follows:

Democratic City Committee.

First Ward: John T. Soy, incumbent, 4502 Harris avenue; John P. O'Reilly, 4411A Fair avenue; Edward M. Ruddy, 5616 Thekla avenue; Mrs. Anna M. Clinton, incumbent, 1961 Adelaide avenue, and Mrs. Catherine McGrath, 4561A Adelaide avenue.

Second Ward: George Gray, incumbent, 4335 Randall place; Oscar G. Schaefer, 3931 North Twentieth street; Mrs. Ann Brady, incumbent, 4324 North Second street; Anastasia Conley, 4408 Randall place.

Third Ward: Joseph H. Brogan, 1916 Warren street, and Mrs. Kate Spath, 2711A North Fifteenth street, incumbent and unopposed.

Fourth Ward: James H. Miller, incumbent, 1440 Cass avenue; Joe Henry, 1322 North Twentieth street, Charlotte O'Connor, incumbent, 1728A O'Fallon street.

NAZIS SEEK TO REGAIN CONTROL OF RIVERS

Four Waterways in Germany Now Under Foreign Supervision.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 6.—Germany is looking forward to taking command of its principal rivers again from the hands of international commissions which have had the say since the war.

This is expected to be one of the next moves Reichsfuehrer Hitler will take in his march through to the end of the Versailles treaty. After the rivers are renationalized, there won't be much of the treaty left which the Nazis can change single-handed.

Four of the Reich's best waterways were placed under foreign control by part 12 of the treaty which assured foreign traffic equal rights with German. Czechoslovakia was given the right to lease free river ports in Hamburg and Stettin for 99 years. The Czechs took advantage of this at Hamburg, but never exercised the right at Stettin.

Four Rivers Involved.

The rivers in question are the Upper Rhine and Moselle, Upper Danube, Elbe and Oder.

Commissions were named for all of these to regulate traffic. On each, Germany was placed in a minority. The Elbe commission, for example, has 10 members, four of whom are German, two Czechoslovakian and one each from England, France, Italy and Belgium.

A Danube commission, composed of members from countries most interested, existed before the war for the lower part of the river. This was merely extended by the treaty to include the source.

Kiel Canal Also Sore Spot.

Likewise, a commission was in existence from 1868 onwards from the Rhine and Moselle. But this was enlarged and a new committee was named with Holland, Switzerland, Italy, Belgium, England and France as members, along with Germany.

The Germans have resented this "interference" in their internal affairs. With equal regret they have been forced by the same part 12 of the treaty to dismantle their forts on the Kiel Canal, connecting the North and Baltic Seas, which was built with military as well as commercial objects in view.

This canal has been open to use by all countries "at peace with Germany" without distinction. This, officials have maintained, is a "danger to German security" for other countries at war with each other would have the right to send munitions through the canal. Officials have said it is conceivable that a battle might be fought within German territory, thus compromising the Reich's position.

EFFORT TO CONTINUE WHEAT AGREEMENT

World Grain Situation Improved, Though Pact Has Been Mere 'Scrap of Paper'

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, June 6.—The world wheat situation has shown greater improvement during the last year, in which the 1933 wheat agreement, like several other international treaties, has been just "a scrap of paper," than any time since it came into existence.

Prices have risen substantially and the glut of wheat stocks which caused the crisis in 1933 has practically disappeared except in Canada. Huge surpluses in the United States, Argentina, Australia and France are gone. Canada has been selling heavily.

Just as bumper yields contributed to creating the crisis, "acts of God' are succeeding where the wheat diplomats have failed in easing the situation. The principal factors have been three bad winter wheat crops in a row in the United States and a crop failure in Argentina.

If Russia continues to be a negligible factor in the world market and the United States again has a small winter crop, which is not unlikely, Canada will have a virtual monopoly on the market during the first six months of the next crop year, beginning Aug. 1, to work off her surplus.

But the wheat diplomats are not satisfied. Fundamentally, in their view, the world wheat problem has not been solved, because nationalistic policies in Europe have pushed the demand for exports down to the lowest level on record. Despite the war in Africa, Italy is not buying wheat, as many expected.

The International Wheat Advisory Committee, with headquarters in London, estimates the world export demand for the crop year beginning in August at only 525,000,000 bushels. From 1927 to 1931 the average annual demand was 800,000,000; from 1922 to 1927 it was 770,000,000. The advisory committee, created to watch over the operation of the wheat agreement, adopted the former figure as normal.

The committee will meet in London before the new crop year begins on Aug. 1, to consider reviving the wheat agreement. Following repudiation of the pact at Budapest in November, 1934, Argentina joined with the other 20 signatories in an extension of the framework of the agreement until Aug. 1 of this year—merely a face-saving gesture, as all restrictions were lifted.

Most members of the committee feel that the agreement must be preserved at all costs. Another crisis will always threaten the world, they maintain, until wider markets are found and nations cease fighting each other with subsidies and high tariffs.

The MOVIE WHIRL

By
Margaret Niemeyer

HOLLYWOOD, June 6.

THIS has been a rather quiet week, so far as parties and things like that are concerned, for the movie folk. After the Decoration Day holidays with the trips to the mountains, lakes and sea shore the stars settled down to work in the daytime and quiet evenings at home. The only preview of any consequence was the showing of the new Marion Davies film, "Hearts Divided." This showing drew only a fair proportion of the movie colony, Miss Davies' own party of 75 guests providing the main attraction in the audience.

The chief social event was the huge cocktail party which Mrs. Brock Pemberton, who has been out here for several weeks, gave for her husband, the stage producer, who has just arrived from New York. Daniel Frohman, veteran theater man, is due here next week to make plans for the annual benefit show for The Actors' Fund of America, which will be staged on July 1. Mary Pickford will start the festivities in Mr. Frohman's honor with a big party at Pickfair.

One thing which did appeal to the movie fans during the past week was the chance given a lot of 'em to get a close up of Marlene Dietrich and Clark Gable who appeared in person in a broadcasting chain show in a local theater which was thrown open to the public. Although the broadcast was scheduled for rather a bad hour, 5 in the afternoon, the street in front of the theater was lined for blocks with the admiring public, and more than 3000 clamored for entrance to the 1000 capacity house. Inside, we had our regular critic's seats—fifth row on the aisle—and so naturally had a splendid view of the justly famous Dietrich legs as she sat on the stage facing us. They were sheathed in sheerest chiffon of desert-sand and worn with very high heeled pumps which matched her velvet suit of a violet, so deep in shade as to appear, except in the strongest light, to be black. The hip-length coat was double breasted and frilly white jabot was caught at the throat by a striking brooch of emeralds and diamonds.

In the audience I saw the lovely June Collyer and her husband, "Stew" Irwin. June wore a pleated dress of stem-green silk, a large hat of natural straw banded in green, a beige swagger coat and matching gloves, shoes and bag.

—o-o—

JOAN BLONDELL, who was also on hand, was very fetching in a black wool crepe dress fastening from the collar to the hem with a zipper. The finger-tip jacket was a pleasing contrast of beige and had a peplum with a decided flare at the sides which was provided by inverted pleats inserted under the small waist-line pockets. The front edges were finished with lacings of the beige wool in the thong manner. Over this she threw a stole of silver fox fashioned by using two perfectly matched skins, joined together to form a long scarf. A head and tail adorned each finished end. To top this costume Joan wore a hat of black felt, flatiron in shape and high in the crown and decorated by a single beige feather.

● IT TAKES courage to write of another watch fad, but I did see Jeanette MacDonald down at Palm Springs wearing one which was set, something like a street car conductor's coin machine, in the buckle of her black antelope belt. Can you imagine anything as useless to the wearer as that? I'm going to beat these novelty inventors to it and have a time piece set in the toe of my shoe and call it—for, you know, they name all these "creations" out here—The March of Time. But I give you my word that this is my final comment on freak watches. Even if the great Garbo herself sponsors a new timepiece you won't hear of it in this column.

Jean Muir took time off from her private theater "Work Shop" the other afternoon to run over and see me at home and arrived with a leash holding two bounding Scotties in one hand, and a large sack of crunchy candy in the other, and followed by her prize-winning Sealyham. We happened to be watering our lawn and Jean, vowing that she had a secret passion for sprinkling, took the hose and nearly ruined her prefectly new shirtmaker frock of printed linen in blue and white.

—o-o—

SAW MARIE WILSON wandering around the studio yesterday dressed apparently just for wandering around a studio. Over her white slacks and white blouse Marie wore a very loosely cut swagger coat of brown and green checks and the finishing touches were

When ST. LOUIS GIRLS Get In The SWIM

By Sylvia Stiles

WHO can blame a girl for going out to swim, but not going in the water? Her 1936 bathing suit is far too elegant to get a ducking and the wearer much too well groomed to worry about aquatic prowess. The beach is the place for her unless she is a country clubber, and then there are plenty of smart lounging places to form the proper background for her new attire.

Let those who are wearing leftovers from a previous season compete for swimming honors and do all of the strenuous diving from spring boards. Our 1936 beach girl will find herself a bright and not too isolated spot on the side lines and do her bathing in the sun. She looks nonchalant, but she is playing a sly game with Old Sol and outwitting him at every turn, thanks to the assistance of those beauty aids which she carries in the bag beside her.

A study of the most handsome suits which have been created for the current season indicates that the designers of beach attire and formal evening fashions have gotten their heads together. The same arrangement of shoulder straps which distinguishes one is apparent on the other, and there is a similarity of bodice height as well as back decolletage. Thus the prevalence of brown and white striped skins that looked so ridiculous a few years ago has been eliminated and a girl can jump from a bathing suit into a formal without worrying about tell-tale sun marks.

IN FACT, the similiarity between bathing suits and evening dresses is so pronounced this summer that only the brevity of skirt on the former convinces the spectator that the wearer is not sitting in the sand in her dancing frock. Vividly patterned silk materials are used extensively, their floral designs being exact reproductions of those featured for evening fabrics. White backgrounds are stressed, although vivid tones on dark grounds also are in vogue. Printed cottons that resemble hand-blocked linens are in fashion for other beach ensembles, their motifs following the gay trend of youthful dance frocks. The chintz effect likewise is significant in both types of costumes.

These suits, which are patterned after dresses, have been designated as "dressmaker suits," to distinguish them from the more practical versions intended for serious swimmers. The dressmaker touches are apparent not only in the fabrics, and the cut of the bodices, but in the full skirts that are attached at the waistline to the tight-fitting white jersey trunks. A bodice foundation of the jersey also eliminates any danger of a bedraggled appearance in event that the wearer does venture into the water.

While not classed as "dressmakers" because they are made of form-fitting materials, the suits that are made of lastex satin are equally as attractive as the printed ones and perhaps more elegant in appearance. These are available in white and colors, some introducing chevron weaves, some wide diagonal stripes suggesting a combination of satin and dull crepe, and others in plain ribbed effects. All have a glistening surface that reminds of the new icy satin evening frocks which are on display in the shops.

EVEN the knitted wool suits have become dressed up this season and have patterns which are copied from popular ones featured for summer frocks. There are polka dots, star designs and checked figures that enhance the appearance of many regulation one-piece suits while a good many others introduce crocheted edgings and bandings in contrasting colors to make them look as though they were knitted by hand.

Two-piece suits consisting of bandanna bodices of novelty cottons worn with knitted wool or cotton shorts were rather popular during the Palm Beach season, but have not measured up to expectations of demand in St. Louis. The one-piece suit is preferred here, perhaps because fads are not accepted so readily and daring themes are advanced less than at the fashionable resorts.

The all-rubber suits which came out a few years ago and were looked upon as interesting experiments have been perfected to the point where they serve practical needs. They are liked especially well by those who take their swimming earnestly and who dislike the feel of a wet suit against the skin.

The vogue of beach lolling and sun-tanning has brought increased demand for beach accessories such as hats, coats and capes. Ensembles consisting of suit and cape or coat are sought by women who vacation at smart summer hotels or who spend much time on the side lines at the country club pools. The cape, which has an attached hood that may be pulled over the head, with a shade arranged for the eyes, is a new item this year. Combina-

NEW YORK, June 6.

IF there is even the faintest truth in the rumors brought to town by scouts and woods runners, somebody ought to look into the college life situation at Princeton and give a detailed report of the current collegian modus vivendi. One thing, there are those flowered alpine pants. Even Manhattan has been more or less Tyrol conscious during the last season, and yodeling hats with shaving brushes in the back have ceased to attract more than passing sneezes and whistles, but in Princeton—listen, Toots—they are fancying those short pants with flowered designs all over that you have always somewhat associated with Tonio Selwart. Mercy, quelle goings on! Then there is the matter of haircuts. "The Newark Call" reports a universal vogue for a completely shaved head, with just a narrow sort of scalp lock, an inch wide, running from the forehead to the base of the neck, making every one look vaguely Ojibway. It's a kind of super-crew cut. And in addition to these Tyrolean and Western Reserve overtones, the Princetons have gone British and are riding bicycles like caraz-z-zy, but campus cops are thinking seriously of having to direct traffic, and not a few expert undergrads are balancing girls on the handlebars. It is all somehow calculated to give one the vapors when he thinks about it, but when we recall that in our own time, and perhaps to this very day, hoop rolling is a jealously guarded prerogative of Yale seniors in springtime, none of this legend of lunacy seems at all improbable.

AS though, what with the market, spring fever and all, we haven't enough grief on our hands, this department finds itself villainously libeled in a recent issue of "Esquire," where a Mr. Van Wyk Potter says our evening waistcoat showed below the edge of our tailcoat at a recent play opening. Mr. Potter incidentally remarks that a play review of ours made no sense, which may or may not be so, and doesn't matter, but this waistcoast business is more than one can tolerate. Whether or not recourse to law is practicable (our solicitor tells us that we could recover heavily, and our court encounter with the Restaurants Lonogchamps et Patissieries, Inc., last fall has gone to our head), we warn Mr. Potter that men have been horsewhipped for careless bandying about of waistcoats in public, and that we are prepared to meet him on the field of honor, armed at, say, a parasang or so, with a tailor's goose.

THE vogue for going to Bermuda at all and any seasons has never been anything to what it is now. The Queen and the Monarch are as jammed in June as in January, and the British islands are a sort of happy stamping ground for every one you ever heard of. Dwight Wiman and, of course, Steve, Joe Milziener and Alfred de Liagre are regular commuters. Courtney Burr, as reported before, has gone too utterly Balinese and affects a red sarong instead of trousers and wears a flower behind one ear. Peggy Fears and the whole tribe of Palmers, Honore, Bebe and the rest, have permanent Bermuda tans. Louis Reed, who went down with Janet Rospigliossi, came back wearing lemon-colored trousers and a bright green jacket in the Holyrood Suite of the Queen. The New Windsor bar is flooded with regulars from Fifty-second Street and the Colony, and it looks as though the semi-tropics were in a way to becoming the summer resort successors to Bar Harbor and Stockbridge.

TALK OF THE TOWN: Drinkers are starting to know about Armagnac as an occasional substitute for cognac, and three or four reliable brands are available at most bars. . . . In the cafes one sees occasionally a woman with a skirt held up by gayly colored men's suspenders, and very attractive, too. . . Enric Madriguera, the maestro, is an expert with foils, and fences with friends after he's through work. . . . The Great Lakes Exhibition will take most of the world to Cleveland this summer, where Roger Stearns has been signed up as chief greeter on a sort of barge arrangement called the Admiralty Club, which is to resemble Chicago's Century Club. . . . There will also be the Republicans, a Legion convention and the usual air races, and the town is all in a dither. . . . At the Russian Consulate General they are serving vodka cocktails now, instead of the straight spirits of tradition. . . . Theodore (of the Ritz) Szarvars is sporting a gray dinner jacket these evenings. . . . The most perfect period design in hotel rooms is the Grover Cleveland Suite at the Murray Hill.

MY OPINION

by

Martha Carr

Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest but, of course cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. Those who do not care to have their letters published may enclose an addressed and stamped envelope for personal reply.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

I AM A DAILY READER of your column and have found that you give the best of advice.

I am a young convent girl, 18 years old. I have lived in the convent a number of years and am very grateful for this. My problem is that I have a mother and grandmother who are in poor health. I would like very much to leave my present home and seek employment if possible. But my friends tell me I am too young and that times are so hard that I would have no success. Now what am I to do?

The girls in the convent here do not leave until a certain age, usually. I wonder if I should wait until my time comes for this? At present I am on vacation.

Anxiously awaiting your decision.

JUST BETH.

I do not think you are too young, necessarily, to earn a living in order to help your mother and grandmother. But you should have some idea, before leaving the convent which is your home, what you are fitted for, what your equipment is and just where to go to apply for the kind of work you can do. You must have had by this time a good deal of general education. Now is the time to talk to the sisters about the assistance you wish to give your family as soon as you are made ready and inquire of them what is the best to specialize in. You cannot go out and simply ask for anything as indefinite as just "a job." The times are difficult for such efforts and there are too many asking, vaguely, for work, without having the least idea what they can do.

The sisters might know what your talents and ability are and certainly would help you to develop them so that you might be self-supporting at a time when your convent training must cease.

You might like my list of "Occupations for Women," from which suggestions for specialized training to your taste might be found.

Dear Mrs. Carr:

● WHAT DO YOU THINK of parents who will not even let their daughter 17 years old go to neighborhood shows in the evenings? Well, I'm that daughter! They have no reason at all to mistrust me for I have never done anything wrong or fooled around with boys like some of the girls. I work nine hours a day and bring home my pay to my mother. I don't get an allowance or a savings account, all I get is clothes and not very many of those. I have to ask for every penny I get. I go to bed at 9 or 9:30 every night. My girl friends seldom come over because we cannot do anything. I cannot go bicycling, skating, etc., because my parents say I am too big. (I'm only 4 feet 11 inches tall.)

When I come home from work I am so tired, I could fall through the floor. My mother starts harping on me to do some work. I don't think it's fair, do you? I'm not the only child, there are three others, one older and the others younger.

Should I rebel or must I go ahead and have my fun, despite them?

YOUNG BUT UNHAPPY.

Of course I always hesitate to say that parents are unfair, for two reasons; one is, that I know they are naturally apprehensive about the welfare and morals of a young girl and sometimes draw the lines too tight. The other reason is, that girls sometimes magnify and exaggerate their troubles and deliberately leave out circumstances which might, in some measure, justify the parents' stand.

But I can say positively that any girl who works nine hours a day and who dutifully turns over her entire pay check to her home and parents is deserving of some recreation and the diversions that young people ordinarily require for their happiness. But the whole thing may rest upon the sort of people with whom you take these pleasures. If they are welcome to your home and your parents see no harm in your association with them in this way, then there can hardly be a reason why you should not go out with them some in the evenings. The hours you keep may make a difference and your attitude toward your work, after you have been indulged in these pleasures may, they might think, justify them in not allowing you to do the things that upset your daily work or keep you up too late; and so unfit you for a good day's work the day after.

I do not agree with them about the roller skating and bicycling; that is, I do not think you are too old or too big. One is not too old or too big for any kind of suitable athletics, any more, if their physical condition is such that it is not injurious. But how about the subject of dress for these pleasures? Couldn't that be, to them, perhaps the reason for their prejudice? Do the girls in your neighborhood wear extremely short slacks or shorts? Do they, ridiculously wear bathing suits which are cut to the waist in the back and have a few more inches of "pants"?

This kind of dressing is entirely unnecessary for such sports and means that the girls have never been anywhere and that they, sometimes, court the ogling they get from spectators.

Perhaps if you could join some kind of organization where there were responsible persons who know what is right, and have proper supervision; one of the older members or officers could talk to your parents and they might realize that pleasures are not only harmless but refreshing to a girl who is kept closely at work. Again they could learn what shows are suitable and decent and what hours you could manage—certainly not every night—to give to them.

Wouldn't the parents who have some intelligence, and who know that it is not right to keep girls from all play and young association, talk to your parents? Try suggesting all these things to them and see how you come out.

These questions come up so often from young girls that I hope others may find in this long answer a way out of their troubles.

—o—o—

My Dear Mrs. Carr:

● MY PROBLEM is entirely different from any of your other correspondents who have written in so far.

I am acquainted with a group of boys and girls and one boy who happens to be a foreigner. My family seriously object to my associating with him. They say that I should not even be in a party where he is present.

Really, Mrs. Carr, he is the nicest boy in the crowd and is polite at all times. I cannot see any real reason why I should not be friendly with him Do you?

Tell me if you do think my parents judge him too harshly? I know very well when I go out with this crowd, which is seldom, that he is sure to be one of them. But I like all the crowd and would hate to give them up entirely. My parents will ask me if he was in the crowd and I do not like to lie about it. I hope your opinion will satisfy my family and me.

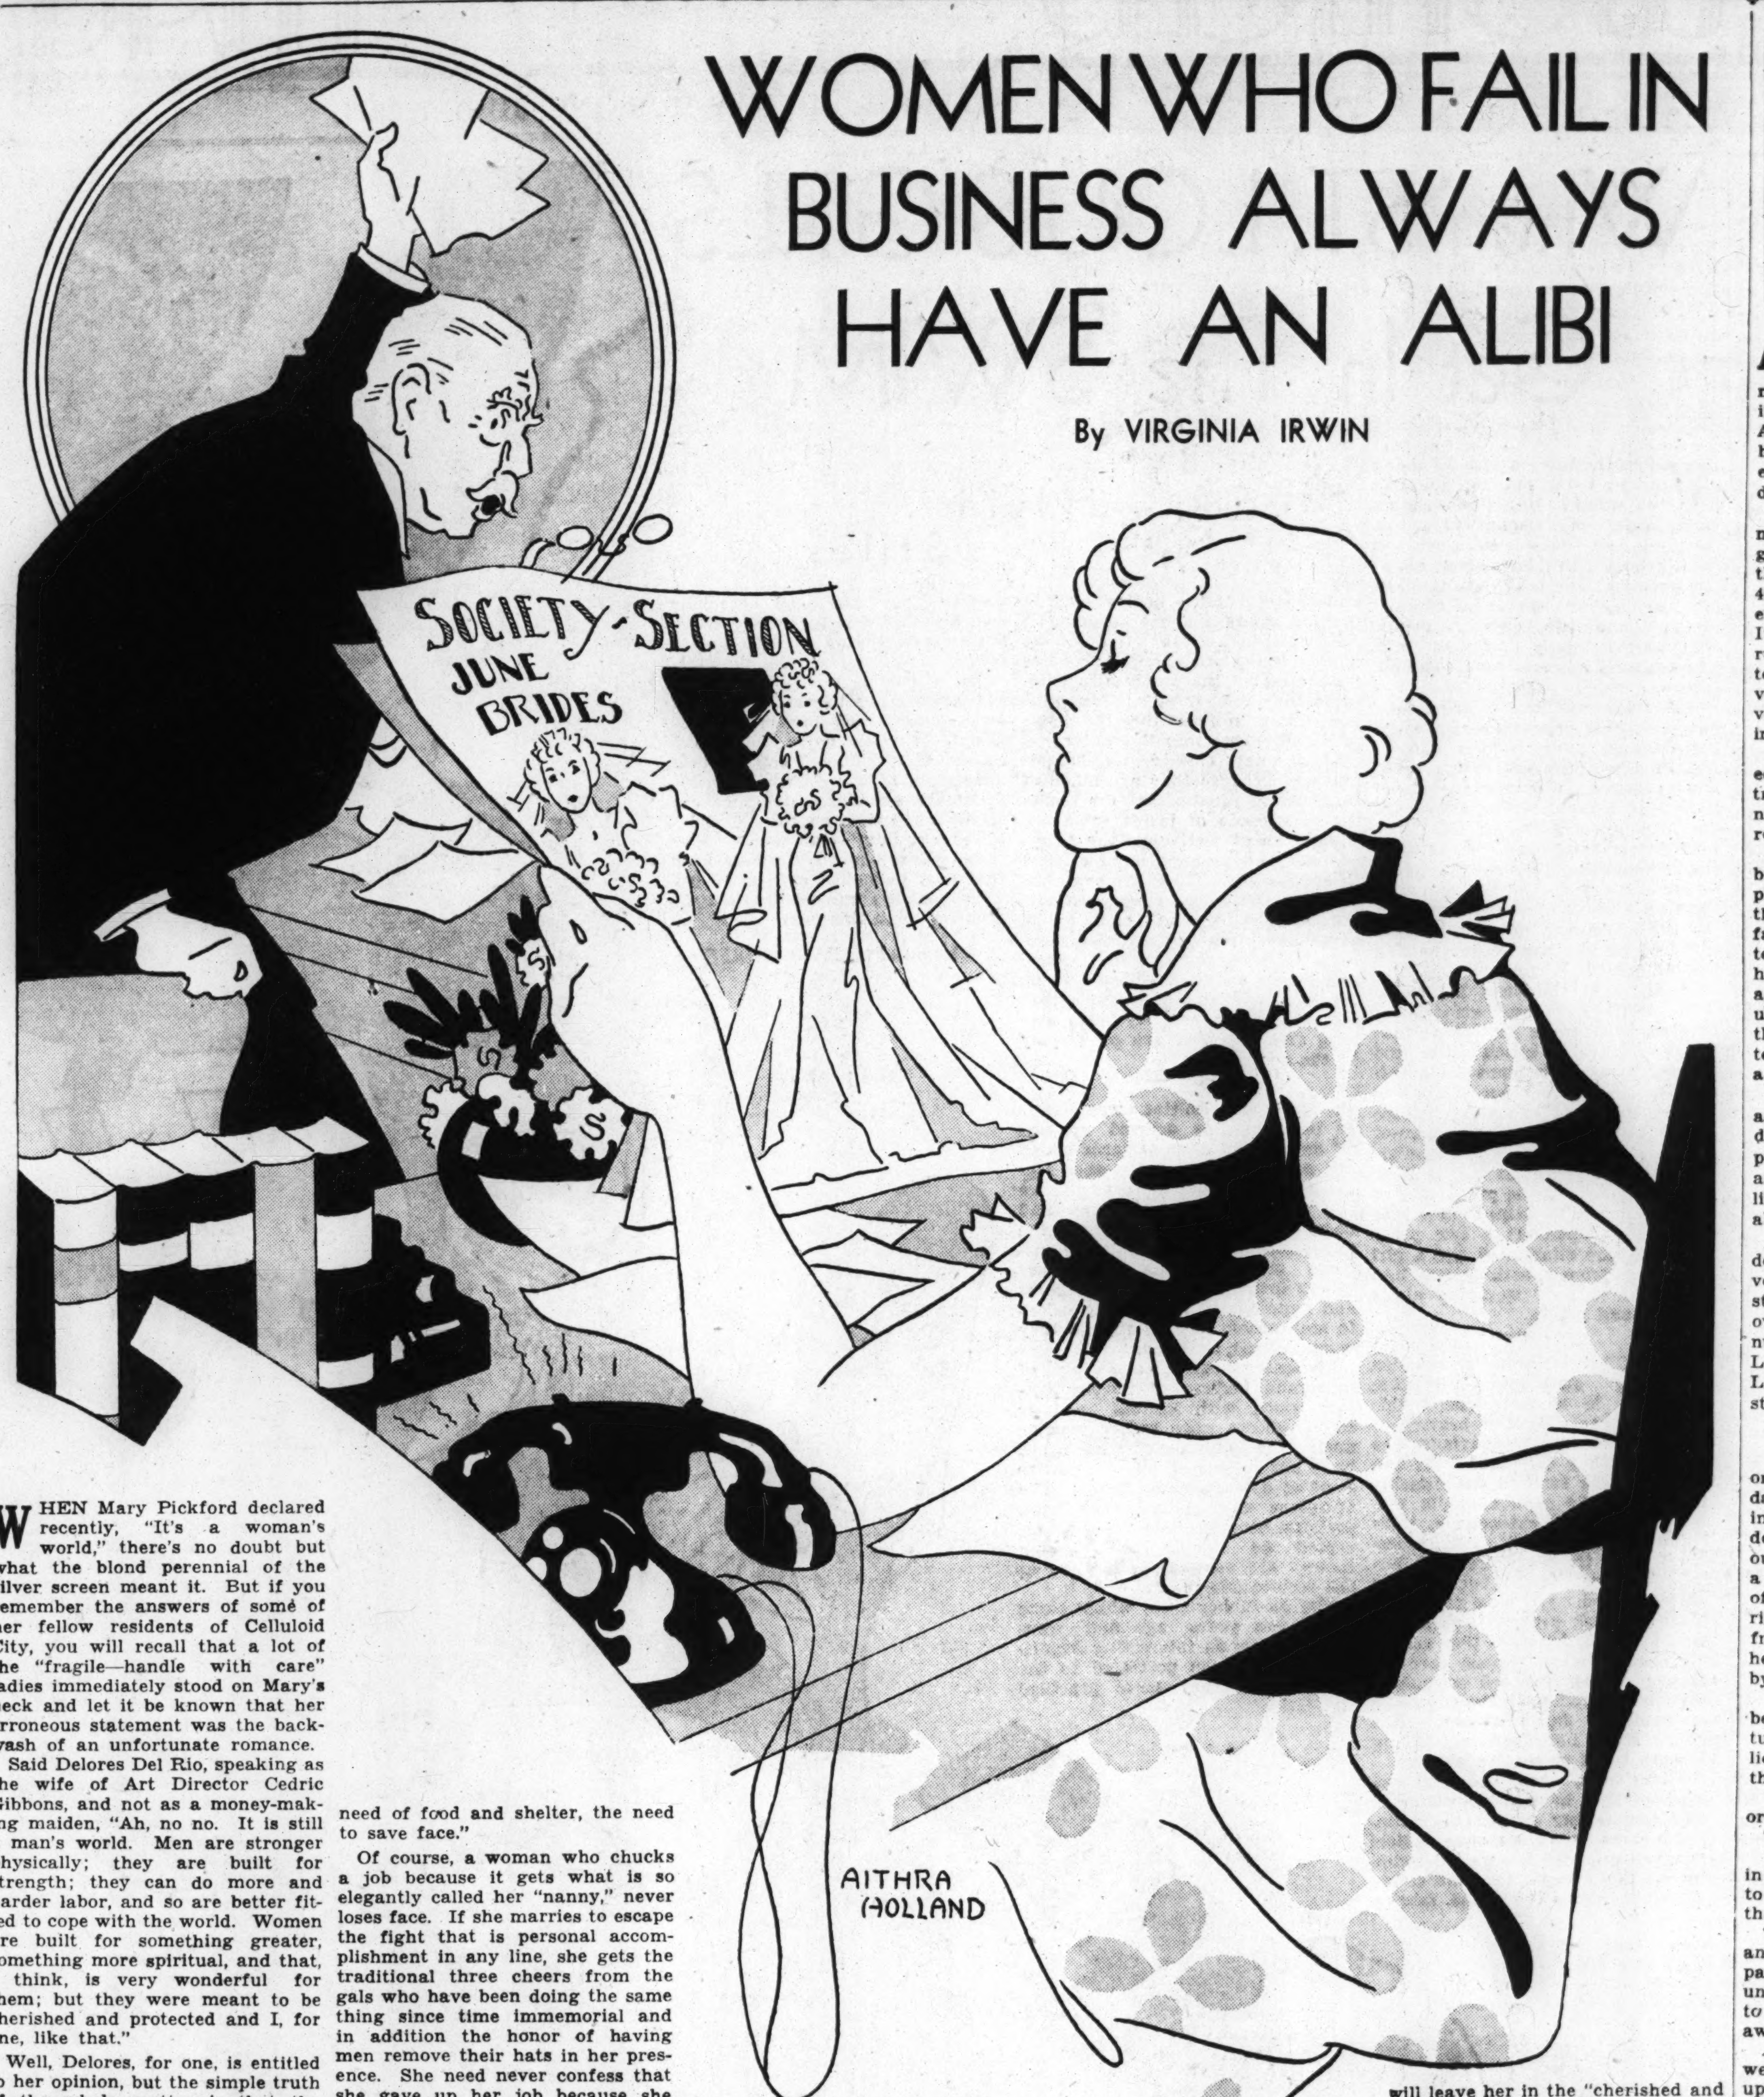
A GIRL.

If the difference is of nationality and not of race, then I see no objection to the association and we have had many of these marriages in this country—very successful ones. Marriage with Orientals has not always been so successful because of the very different civilization, customs and ideals. And, while it is only natural that your parents may want to forestall any idea of matrimony with any kind of foreigner, their ideal for you, as it is with foreign parents as well, may be an American boy. They might not object to a pleasant association with this boy, if they did not see signs of a budding romance.

THE WORLD AS WOMEN SEE IT

WOMEN WHO FAIL IN BUSINESS ALWAYS HAVE AN ALIBI

By VIRGINIA IRWIN



WHEN Mary Pickford declared recently, "It's a woman's world," there's no doubt but what the blond perennial of the silver screen meant it. But if you remember the answers of some of her fellow residents of Celluloid City, you will recall that a lot of the "fragile—handle with care" ladies immediately stood on Mary's neck and let it be known that her erroneous statement was the backwash of an unfortunate romance.

Said Delores Del Rio, speaking as the wife of Art Director Cedric Gibbons, and not as a money-making maiden, "Ah, no no. It is still a man's world. Men are stronger physically; they are built for strength; they can do more and harder labor, and so are better fitted to cope with the world. Women are built for something greater, something more spiritual, and that, I think, is very wonderful for them; but they were meant to be cherished and protected and I, for one, like that."

Well, Delores, for one, is entitled to her opinion, but the simple truth of the whole matter is that the Deloreses—or whatever the heck the plural of the word is—have been promulgating this line of chatter for so many years, that they have actually come to believe it themselves. And the poor, weak, I-need-a-man souls have jumped at the chance to hide behind this fragile-flower attitude. They make their frailty do double duty as an excuse for all their failures. And when some member of the sisterhood dares to expose them, they stand on her with both feet and attribute her desertion of the cause to jealousy over the fact that she has no one to "cherish and protect" her.

The gal who graduates from a finishing school with a certificate in charm finds the routine of earning a living something of a burden. Perhaps she has the ambition, the brains, the personality to stand on her own two feet, but an eight-o'clock alarm, a nine-to-five schedule, a ruthless battle in which only the ones with backbone survive soon tempt her to look for excuses. She begins to retreat behind her femininity—and from then on everything is simply greased for the down-hill slide. At the top of the slope, there is a sign which reads—"After all, you can always get married." Halfway down the incline is another poster—"You can argue that marriage is every woman's heritage." And at the bottom of the hill is the placard: "The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world." And there's she's sunk, not in the slightly sticky mud of personal failure, but in the quagmire of admiration that the world accords a woman who gives up the thought of self-success for the idea that the female of the species must sacrifice self to husband, home and babies.

A contemporary authority excuses the ladies who take the marriage out by saying that "a man is under such pressure from his pride and from the group's expectations that he says to himself 'I can't fail, I can't fail—I've got to put it over.' He has a need greater than the need of food and shelter, the need to save face."

Of course, a woman who chucks a job because it gets what is so elegantly called her "nanny," never loses face. If she marries to escape the fight that is personal accomplishment in any line, she gets the traditional three cheers from the gals who have been doing the same thing since time immemorial and in addition the honor of having men remove their hats in her presence. She need never confess that she gave up her job because she made a mess of it and chose the alternative of fastening herself to the first man who looked like he might be able to provide reasonably sure support. To make matters more permanently flattering, she can moan for the rest of her life about how she was well on the way up the ladder of success when love overtook her.

Or, if it is too obvious to acquaintances, neighbors, relatives and friends that her sacrifice of her career was not dictated by an overpowering love for her meal ticket, she can always use illness as an alibi. Poor thing, she suffered from cases of the vapors, or flat feet, or 18-karat attacks of something or other. She was never cut out to battle with the world. She was designed at the time of creation to be cherished and protected from the sub-zero temperature of an impersonal world. And so she devises complaints to emphasize her frailty and excuse the fact that she failed at what she started out to do, and once she sees the almost phenomenal results that can be obtained by a little high-class moaning, she applies the principle to other things—to keeping her husband subjected to the whims of her ailments and her children tied to her apron strings in subservience to her poor health. After all, is she not a poor, frail woman, a wife, and a mother? And isn't she entitled to love and protection, whether she earns it or not?

"Hordes of wives who, ceasing to appear desirable to their husbands, continue to demand money and attention because they are wives," says one writer contributing to a symposium on modern women. "Thus mothers whose children seek only to escape while they clamor that the child bring back tribute from that world with which the mothers have never dared cope."

The ingenuity manifested by such women in justifying their attitude would, if applied to other things, have made them howling successes. For instance, the inventiveness, the cunning, with which they cover up their failures in the business world, in marriage, in the game of living, if used in the right way, would eliminate the necessity of posing as martyrs. But they find it easier to follow the old "I am a fragile flower" formula, instead of carving success out of life with the same weapons used by the members of the sisterhood who ask no quarter from the world because of their sex. And it takes the gals with the phony excuses for themselves to keep the whispering campaign that has been going on through the ages fanned to a white heat; they lose no opportunity to let it be known that the woman who earns her own way is an object of pity. "Poor thing," they sympathize, "poor thing, she has to work so hard because she can't get a man." They never admit—at least aloud—that they secretly envy their successful sisters. Instead they pretend that they, out of the bigness of their hearts, wish for all women the love and protection that they have been "lucky" enough to inherit.

LORINE PRUETTE, who wrote "Women and Leisure," complains that women's lives are still too overcharged with emotion. "This will continue," she says, "until parents crave for their daughters some cool, firm techniques, until they stop mawkishly handing out dolls at Christmas and give their daughters the impersonal, non-human toys of their sons. I do not know how many middle-aged women still get a thrill out of the doll department of any store; I do not want to know: I do not think I could bear it."

The little girl who receives a doll on her first birthday is in reality getting her first lesson in how to use her femininity as a weapon against the cold, cruel world. By the time she is old enough to wield a lipstick she will have acquired the knowledge of how to back away from unpleasant things and disguise her retreat under the camouflage of frailty. By the time she has made a mess of a job, she will have learned how to feign illness or trump up some other excuse that will leave her in the "cherished and protected" class instead of stranded in the ranks of the breadwinners. And somewhere along the line she will have learned that part of the game played by herself and all the other dames who couldn't take it, is pretending to feel sorry for any woman who, no matter how successful in any occupation, somehow missed the boat by failing to find someone to "cherish and protect" her.

Early Summer Fashion Trends

ALTHOUGH the summer season has scarcely started it has gone far enough for certain fashion trends to become the leaders of the season. These continue to recur, not only in the collections on display in the most exclusive shops but worn consistently by well-dressed women. Here are a few highlights.

Yellow is by far the most important accent color. It appears in daffodil and dandelion tones for all accessory items and is worn with white as well as with pastel and dark costumes.

White overshadows colors for complete ensembles in spite of the insistence upon bright tones for frocks and suits. The white dress is liked for practical daytime wear as well as for evening, and white coats and suits are everywhere.

Short sleeves are worn on jackets and coats as they are on dresses, whether women like them or not. The sleeve which comes half way between shoulder and elbow is the summer favorite.

Sheer fabrics often are printed while heavier fabrics are of solid colors. Chiffon is the outstanding silk sheer and voile is creating a sensation among printed summer cottons.

Bright colored footwear is wanted, whether the costume is white or colored and the greater contrast, the better for style. Color in accessories never was more important and women fail to stop with one or two bright accents but add bracelet, earrings and a clip or two.

Sheer Tunics

A clever girl who wants to make her formal evening dress do the work of a dinner frock, too, should invest in a few yards of transparent material and make herself a tunic. These sheer tunics are all the rage at present whether to improvise an old frock or to add beauty to a new one. Crisp materials are most successful for they give the bouffant, umbrella line which is a feature of the tunic mode this season. Try starched lace for a long sleeved tunic or mousseline for the short-sleeved variety.

Shorts or Trunks

The six and three rib knitted trunks are very smart and are extremely popular with many men, who find them light and cool. They are best reserved for those who have reasonably good figures. For those who have not the ideal figure cut and sewn shorts of gabardine or flannel are especially suitable. These are available in a variety of smart colors. It need not be assumed, however, that the cut and sewn short is reserved for those who are especially stocky because they make an equally smart appearnace on men of good figure.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

AN "electric" parked apologetically on a downtown lot the other day reminded us that we meant to track the few surviving in the city to their stables. The Automobile Club of Missouri proved helpful, for the man at the other end of the wire said most of the drivers were members there.

It's not their recklessness that makes drivers of electric autos good customers for the A. C. M., for their top speed down hill is about 40 miles an hour and 20 is considered a good pace on a dead level. It is rather the fact that they can run only about 50 miles on one battery charge, which means that adventurous drivers fare too far forth very often and have to be towed in.

Private garages are easily equipped with rectifiers, the electric is merely plugged in for the night and next morning she is ready for another 50-mile run.

Mrs. George S. Mepham, who's been driving one for 25 years, supplied more details. Hearing that the company in Detroit, last of the factories to make them, was about to fold up, she bought the parts of her present equipage several years ago but did not have it assembled until last fall. It will last perhaps three or four years before the batteries will have to be replaced at a cost of about $500.

Mrs. Mepham always waves to another lady whose name she doesn't know, when they whiz past each other in their electrics, and the lady always waves back, like two pilots sighting each other above the Siberian wastes.

Aberdeen place must be hazardous for the very young and the very old, for there are two electrics stabled in the same block. One is owned by Mrs. A. L. Perkins at number 13 and the other by Mrs. L. C. McLain at number 9. Mrs. L. Edward Lortz out on Lindell still drives one, too.

● THE SUN WAS beating down on Olive street on one of those days in which the tar at the crossings sticks to our feet, even as it does to yours. Pausing to clean our shoes, our eye was caught by a pitiful sight—a stooped-over man of possibly 35 hobbling along, his right arm dangling uselessly in front, his left holding pins which he was trying to sell to passersby.

He was overtaken by a broad-beamed policeman just as we, fortunately, drew alongside. The policeman chucked the cripple under the chin.

"C'mon, now! Straighten up!" he ordered.

The cripple whined.

"Straighten up or I'll run you in!" repeated the copper, beginning to take on a warmth not caused by the sun.

"All right, but don't get tough," answered the Object of Our Sympathy, and, to our astonishment, he unbent himself, dropped both hands to his sides, and strode briskly away.

And that, my little turnips, is this week's story of the man who picked up his bed and walked.

MARKETING FOR THE 325 priests and students of the priesthood who gather around the family board in St. Louis University refectory is the job of Brother Joseph Raemdanck. He came to this country from Antwerp and is known to his friends and to those with whom he trades as Brother Van. His advice to housewives for economic buying is to follow the seasons. If rhubarb is plentiful and cheap, buy rhubarb. If it's a good apple season, feed your flock, no matter how small, on apple sauce, baked apples, stewed apples, and apple pie until they cry for mercy.

Brother Van is always on the look-out for bargains. He calls buying up a batch of foodstuff cheap from a merchant who has overstocked, "helping him out." And incidentally cutting down his own budget. Just the other day he "helped out" a bakery by taking off its hands 40 of the 75 too many "specials" it had prepared. The chances are that after a consecrated day the priests will be served cakes iced with mottos like "To Our Dear Mother," "Will You Be My Valentine," "Happy Birthday to You" and so forth. But that superficial ornamentation, as one of the "family" explained, in no way affects the flavor, just provides a laugh to aid digestion.

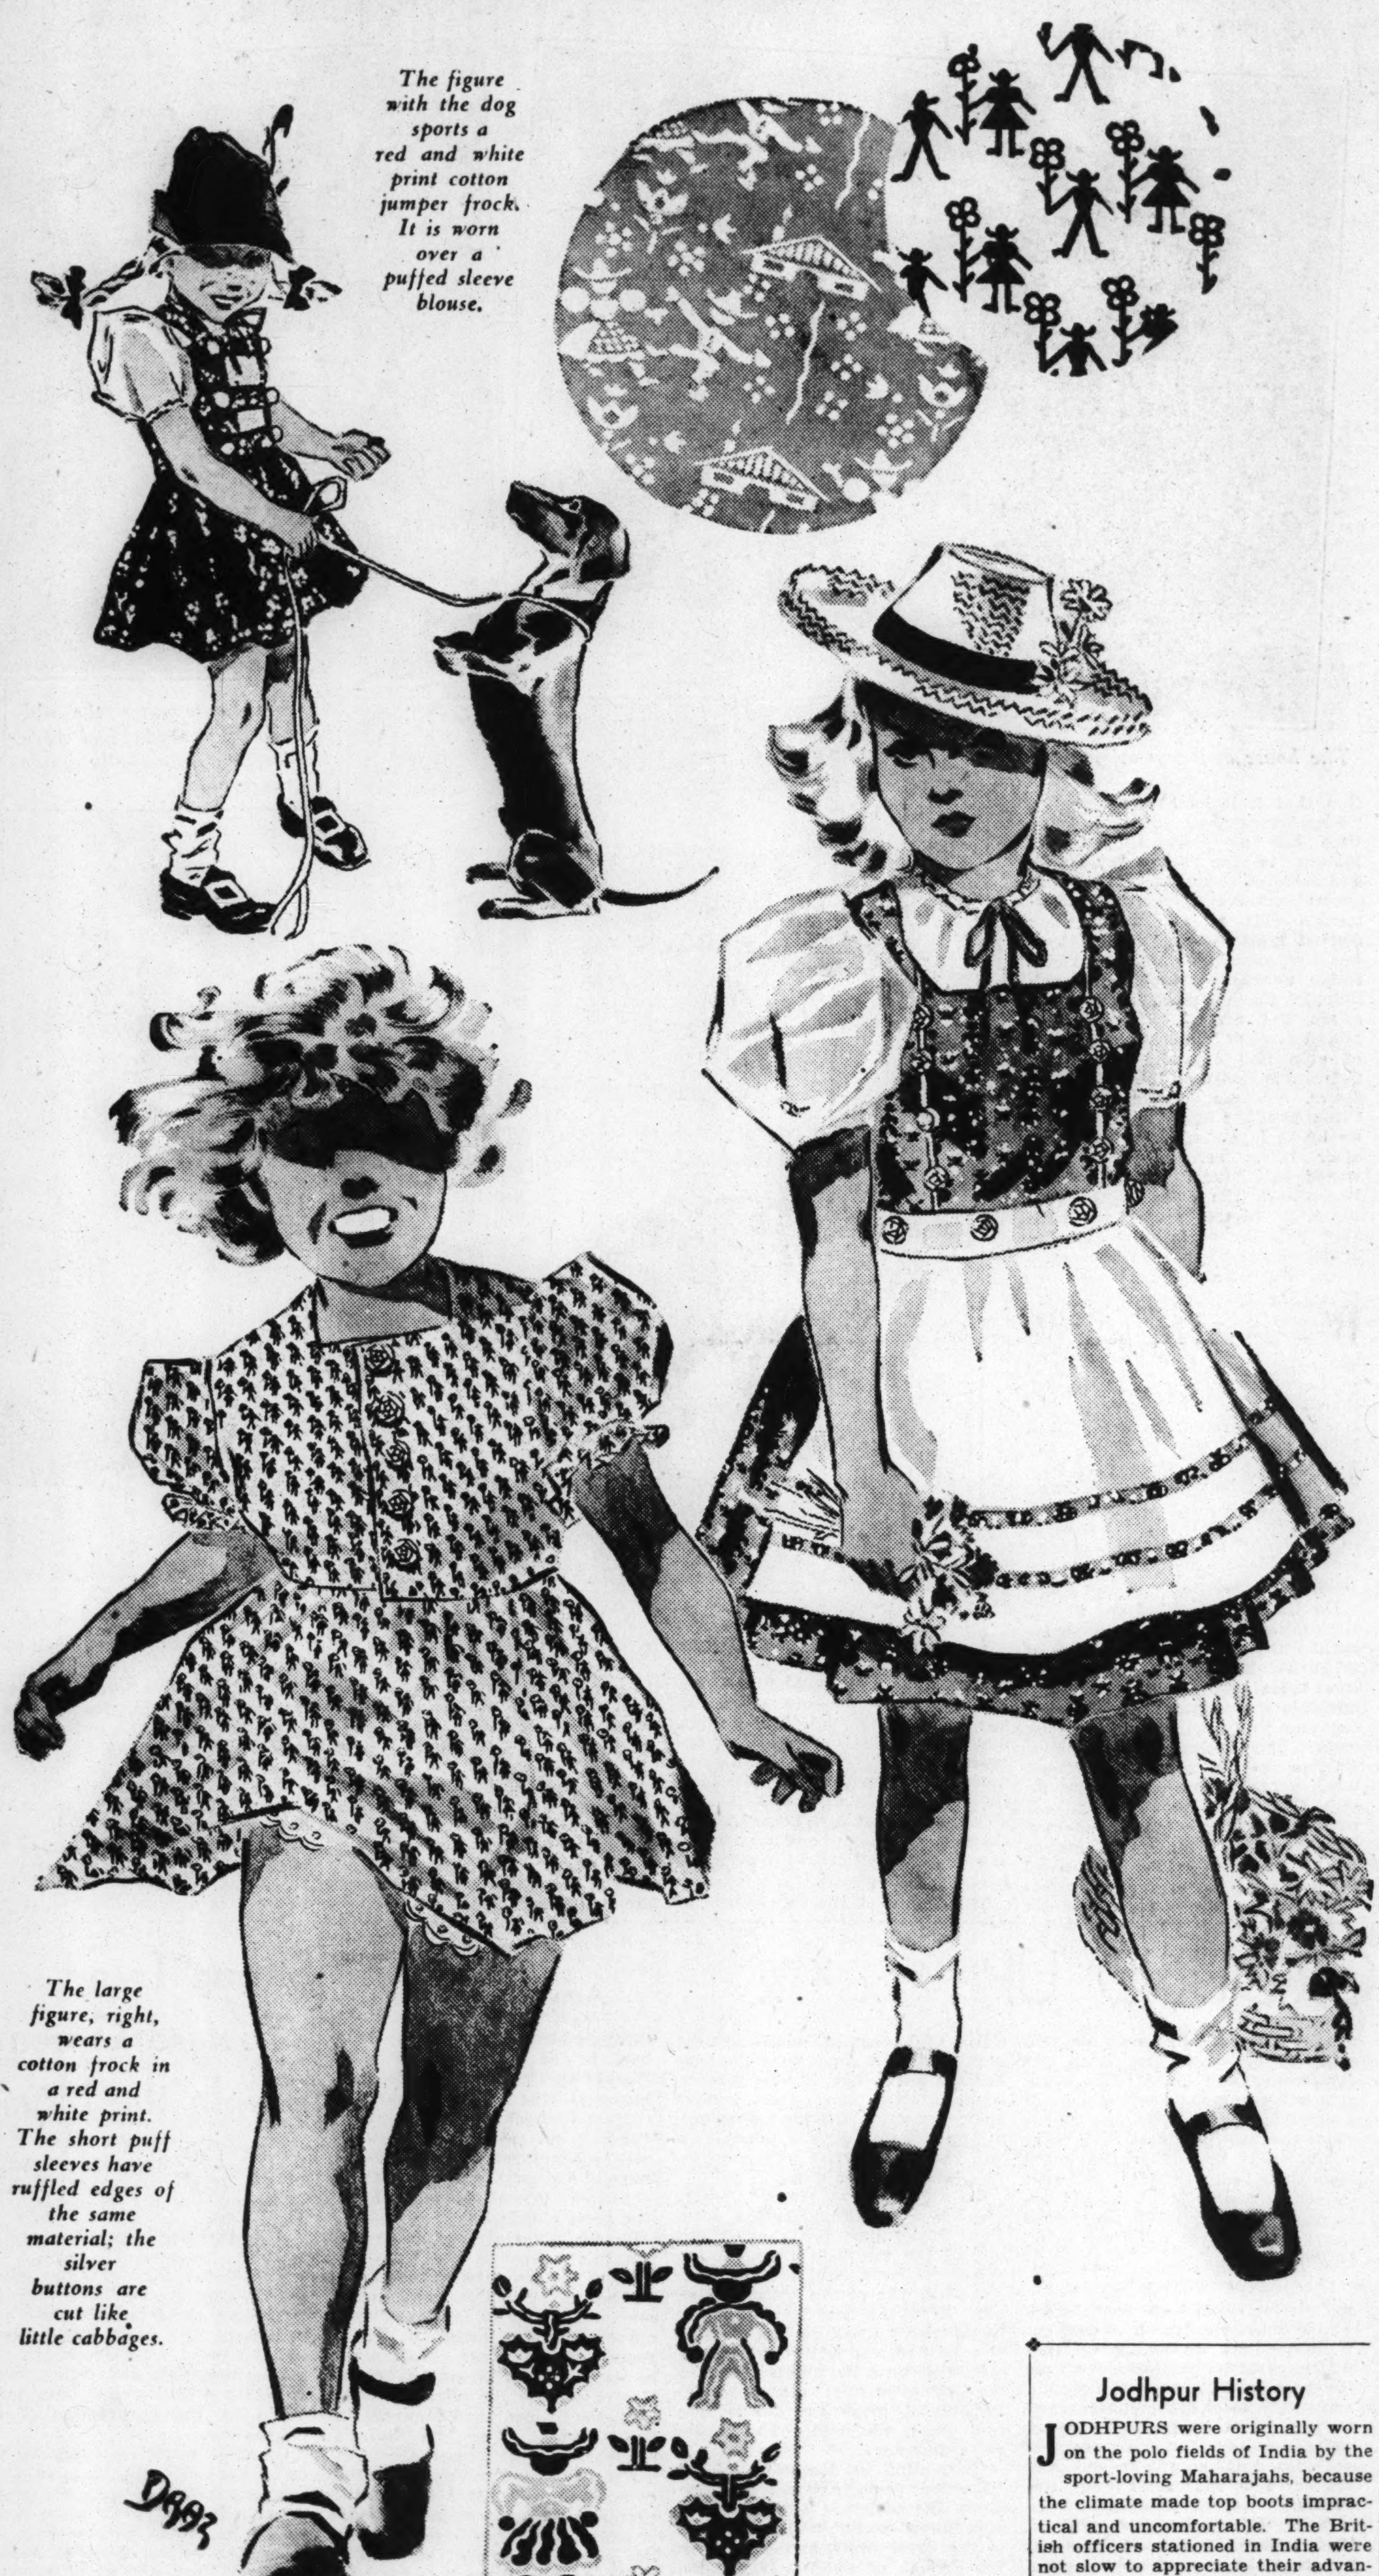
CHILDREN'S FROCKS in COTTON PRINTS

"Puffed Sleeves Are an Important Note, Whether on Dresses or Blouses"



The figure with the dog sports a red and white print cotton jumper frock. It is worn over a puffed sleeve blouse.

The large figure, right, wears a cotton frock in a red and white print. The short puff sleeves have ruffled edges of the same material; the silver buttons are cut like little cabbages.

EVEN the most seriousminded of our very young ladies will be excited about the prints designed for her summer frocks, if this department knows anything about that generation. The subjects of the prints are, left above, Mountain House; right above, Little Man, and below, Gingerbread Man. They can be had in several bright color combinations, in the dresses sketched, as well as by the yard.

—o-o—

PUFFED sleeves are an important note, whether seen on dresses or blouses under jumper frocks. And the blouses are made of white cross-bar dimity.

The little girl in the straw Tyrolean hat is wearing a jumper dress that shows the Austrian peasant influence. It is a tri-color cotton print and is worn with an apron and blouse of cross-bar dimity.

LITTLE visor-like caps that are made of linen vie with the beach hats for popularity this summer. These caps look much like those which jockeys wear as they have long bills to shade the eyes. Most of them tie at the back, handkerchief fashion, and have no crowns. Some have the rounded bill, while others have a square one. Because of so many novelties in beach hats and caps, the bathing cap has become quite practical and devoid of frills.

Bathing shoes are displayed in a great variety of styles and colors, but the choice depends largely upon whether the wearer wants them merely for their flashy appearance or as a protection to her feet.

Besides all of these apparel items there are many play costumes which are worn on the beaches, as well as for general outdoor sports. Slacks, shorts, cullottes, knitted cotton shirts, middy blouses and regulation overalls are among the modern fashions which are liked by those who want to keep up with the trend.

To consider in detail the different styles of bathing suits which have been illustrated today, there is the dotted suit worn by the figure at the top of the first page. The background is navy wool and the dots are red and white. Of special interest is the gathered line of the bodice, which is emphasized by an elastic band placed underneath. The braided straps are quite intricately attached, so that they can be adjusted several different ways, thus fitting the suit more snugly and comfortably to the figure. One set of straps forms the belt and joins the shoulder straps at the back. A little skirt covers the shorts.

SECOND from the top is sketched one of the new dressmaker suits of white silk, patterned with vivid floral designs. The pattern features the carnation and there is emphasis upon the dark red carnation tone, with green and blue contrasts. The V-shaped neckline has narrow shoulder straps. The divided skirt is rather full at the hemline. A belt of the material ties at the side, and the entire costume has the general appearance of a play suit. A foundation of white wool jersey is a practical feature.

The back view shows a wool knitted suit combining navy blue and white. A wide band of white forms a striking contrast on the dark suit and introduces a square neckline, which is unsual. Adpustable straps of white wool have a narrow red crocheted edging. Hand-decorated buttons from Honolulu give a novel trimming to the outfit, which looks very much as though it had been made entirely by hand. A brief skirt across the front ends at the side seams.

At lower left is shown a satin lastex suit which is white, unrelieved by any color. The weave is a diagonal one that gives the wearer a sylph-like appearance. The bodice has a high halter neckline; it gathers and ties in a bow.

The costume at lower left consists of two pieces, the suit and the coat. Both are made of figured crash, the coat lined with white terry cloth and being reversible The dressmaker suit is trimmed with the white cotton material and has a belt of the same. There are white jersey shorts attached to the short, flaring skirt.

Jodhpur History

JODHPURS were originally worn on the polo fields of India by the sport-loving Maharajahs, because the climate made top boots impractical and uncomfortable. The British officers stationed in India were not slow to appreciate their advantages and substituted them for the top boots they had brought out from England. Later they carried jodhpurs back to England with them and still later they came to America, where they now hold an enviable position in smart riding circles. While they are usually seen made up of Bedford cord or cavalry twill, the bold checked variety are particlularly smart. Jodhpurs should be cut to fit "skin tight" from the knee to the lower part of the calf, then they widen slightly just above the cuff to permit that part of the jodhpur to slip over the shoe or jodhpur boot. Sometimes they have elastic bands which pass under the boot. If they do not fit tightly there is a possibility of their moving about on the leg while riding, which would cause chafing. "Strappings" are an additional comfort.

Smoking Suits

Those tailored evening costumes which have their own jackets and have gone by so many different names now are known as "smoking suits." Several designers designate them this way to let it be known that they are the costume to wear for cocktails and dinner. Tailored themes are emphasized not only in the cut of the garments but in the materials. Heavy silks such as ottoman and wool are recommended while moire and taffeta also are considered satisfactory. The suits are being shown in the advance fall collections as a hint of the coming season

Evening Frocks

Evening frocks are romantic or dramatic, but always they are beautiful, as befits that most beautiful of seasons, spring. Flowers are still most important for evening wear, and so the bolero or cape made entirely of flowers is a popular notion. Most charming is a gown of violet chiffon with a very deep neckline in front and back. This frock is worn with a short-sleeved, collarless bolero jacket fashioned entirely of silk wood violets with tiny iridescent centers. Capes of white velvet gardenias or malmaison carnations, are popular models, too.

Novelty Chinaware

When vegetables are worn on frocks and food is served from plates that look like gingham, what freakish fashion will appear next? The plates that are the vogue for summer entertaining are as gay as any you can find. Plaid designs in a variety of vivid color schemes are featured and there are all sorts of dishes for informal entertaining. Containers for condiments and other cooking essentials also are included in the collection of interesting ware which St. Louis shops are showing.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

NEW YORK, June 6.

KATE SMITH, the rotund radio singer, tells me that she is going to charter a yacht this summer and sail away to Alaska—get as far away as possible from the demon microphone for awhile. And I tell her that I envy her, except that my bete noir is this rattling portable (God bless it!).

Kate's an amazing girl any way you take her, fore or aft, tonnage or talent. I first knew her when she was an unknown youngster down in Washington, singing in obscure roadhouses outside the capital for $10 a night and supper, and glad to get it. Then Eddie Dowling gave her a part on Broadway in his "Honeymoon Lane" — that's a decade back, now—and she sang her way to fame. Kate has never been known to hit a note anywhere but right smack in the middle.

Kate Smith

Good luck, Kate! Have a swell time, keep cool, and then come back to the studios. We need your grand voice, that just sings songs!

ONE OF THE hamlet's most devoted couples—Gladys Swarthout and Husband Frank Chapman, also a singer. Incidentally, la belle Swarthout has a new coiffure that is a knocker-outer. . . . I saw the largest hat of the year at the opening of the Japanese Gardens at the Ritz – enormous affair trimmed with black cellophane flowers. Oh, yes; it quite concealed the face of Mrs. Robert Morris Phillips. . . . There's a girl loose on Fifth avenue these days who's the deadest sort of ringer for Barbara Hutton, the Countess von So and So. If she'd been pushing a baby buggy when I met her I'd have chirped "Howdy, Babe!"

KATHARINE HEPBURN is coming back to the New York stage next winter, for the first time since her unhappy experience in "The Lake" in 1933. She is going to work for the Theater Guild in "Jane Eyre," and the town's wondering how much she has grown artistically in the past three years. Katie's an exciting girl. Boston and Cleveland are two towns that will see the show before we do . . .

If you're here in July, you can hear an all-George Gershwin program played by our philharmonic, with George himself as piano soloist. The concert will be under the stars at Lewisohn Stadium. . . .

DIRE TRAGEDY smote a luscious wedding here a few days ago, and one of the town's best known dressmakers is probably hiding in the coal cellar until the storm blows over.

The organ was pealing blithely, the guests were smirking brightly at each other, when three of the upper crust's leading dressers arrived within ten minutes of each other wearing identical frocks—white and blue print jacket dresses! They were Mrs. Harrison Williams, one of the leading "best dressed," Mrs. Raymond Guest and Mrs. Harry Gray. All concerned tried to laugh it off merrily, but it must have been a bitter moment for those lush ladies to whom the perfect ensemble is hardly an inch this side Paradise.

Mrs. Williams

In spite of all this, the young folks were safely married—and three of our best-dresed women probably went home, quietly picked up a carving knife and set out on the trail of that couturier!

LET ME SUGGEST

by

Josephine Walter

The author of "Let Me Suggest" will answer in this column questions on interior decoration addressed to her in care of the Women's Sunday Magazine.

WINDOW SHADES always become a vital decorative problem during the summer months for they are "so much with us." As they are frequently pulled down during most of the day, to keep out the broiling sun and make a room cool and dark, many people feel that they should be pleasing to the eye as well as utilitarian.

Of course, the perfect solution to this problem is Venetian blinds. Contrary to a rather wide-spread impression, they are appropriate to almost any type interior from the quaint Colonial to the very formal French. Both slats and tapes may be had in tones to blend with the color scheme of the room, the blind itself frequently being in one color and the tapes in a contrasting tone. Now, however, it is possible to make these blinds even more decorative by painting the tapes with some motif taken either from the wall paper or the upholstery fabrics. These motifs would naturally be done in the spirit of the room—Greek key borders or urns for a classical room, anchors for a nautical scheme, and fruit or flower designs for garden room or kitchen.

For those who feel that Venetian blinds are beyond the budget, there are shades on the market which combine the decorative qualities of these blinds with the reasonableness of the regular roller shade. These shades are of the roller type but they are plaited like an accordian and have tapes run through perforations in the sides. When rolled up, the tapes also roll up and the shade itself plaits up tightly at the top.

Finally, attractive and colorful shades, especially for the summer season when regular draperies are taken down, could be made from patterened chintzes. If, however, the regulation shade is to be used, it may be made more attractive by being painted in a floral design with oil paint or by a gaily colored border sewed over the slat which forms the base of the shade.

—o-o—

Bed linens, too, are being pepped up to add a decorative note to the summer interior. Sheets and pillow slips with colored borders have long been on the market, as have entirely colored sets, but now pattern is being added as well. If you begin to see "spots before your eyes" don't call the doctor; you've probably forgotten that the bed has been made with one of the new sets with polka dotted borders. Plaids, too, are being shown as well as charming little flower sprigged designs.

—o-o—

● IN AN AGE when a garden cart is considered as essential to the garden scene as the flowers themselves, it takes an ingenious contraption indeed to excite comment. One of the most amusing ones that I have spied to date was not only "eye" but "ear filling" as well. Made of bamboo with separate compartments for every type of drink equipment desired, it boasted a row of bells at each end. When pushed across the lawn, these little bells make a tinkling sound to warn unwary guests that a drink is approaching. Possibly a little unnecessary but very gay, nonetheless.

AND WHILE WE'RE on the subject of garden carts, I spied a cunning, miniature one which would be a charming center-piece for a country house table. Made of tole, in push-cart style and complete even to the little wheels, it was filled with a variety of dwarf plants in tiny, white flower pots. It would also be attractive filled with cut flowers or a variety of summer fruits.

● QUESTION: I have bought some pine reproductions of Early American furniture which I think are quite nice in design but the finish on them in very bad. Could you tell me how to refinish them to give them the look of original old pieces? MRS. L. R. G.

Answer: First remove present finish with varnish remover. Then apply linseed oil and wax, either separately or in a mixture and rub well. If you use each separately, you apply the linseed oil first. It should either be double-boiled or thinned with benzine and should be allowed to remain on the piece over night, after which all remaining traces should be wiped off with a woolen rag or piece of cheese cloth. Then the wax should be applied with a stiff brush and additional wax rubbed in well with a cloth. Repeated applications of the wax will result in the patina to be found in old pieces. If you wish to use a mixture of linseed oil and wax to save time there are many excellent furniture polishes on the market containing these two ingredients. Lemon oil is also an excellent furniture oil to obtain an old world finish.

The House You Live In

RENAISSANCE OF AN 80-YEAR OLD HOUSE

Victorian Home in Webster Groves, Remodeled to Furnish a Background for Rare Early American Furniture

FEW old houses are granted the privilege of being restored to their former state; rare, indeed, is the house reborn to greater glories than it has ever known before. Such a renaissance of a lovely old Victorian house has been accomplished by Mr. and Mrs. Howard Cammack with the able assistance of their architect, Harris Armstrong.

The house, which was built more than 80 years ago at 115 South Gray in Webster Groves, immediately appealed to Mrs. Cammack, when she discovered it, as an excellent background for the very rare Early American furniture which she had brought with her from her home in Philadelphia. She felt that, with careful restoration, this old Victorian house, with its lofty ceilings and handsome woodwork could be made to blend with her antiques of an earlier period. How completely successful this has been is attested by the photographs accompanying this article.

The classic simplicity of the exterior was marred by an ugly dormer window in the roof and an unsightly veranda across the front. The dormer was removed and the veranda replaced by an entrance porch, purely classical in design, but with enough weight to add dignity to the facade. In addition, an open porch placed to one side of the house, was made to blend with the entrance way. Altogether, an adroit "face-lifting" job which provided a nondescript house with a charming exterior which is an excellent introduction to the gracious atmosphere to be found within.

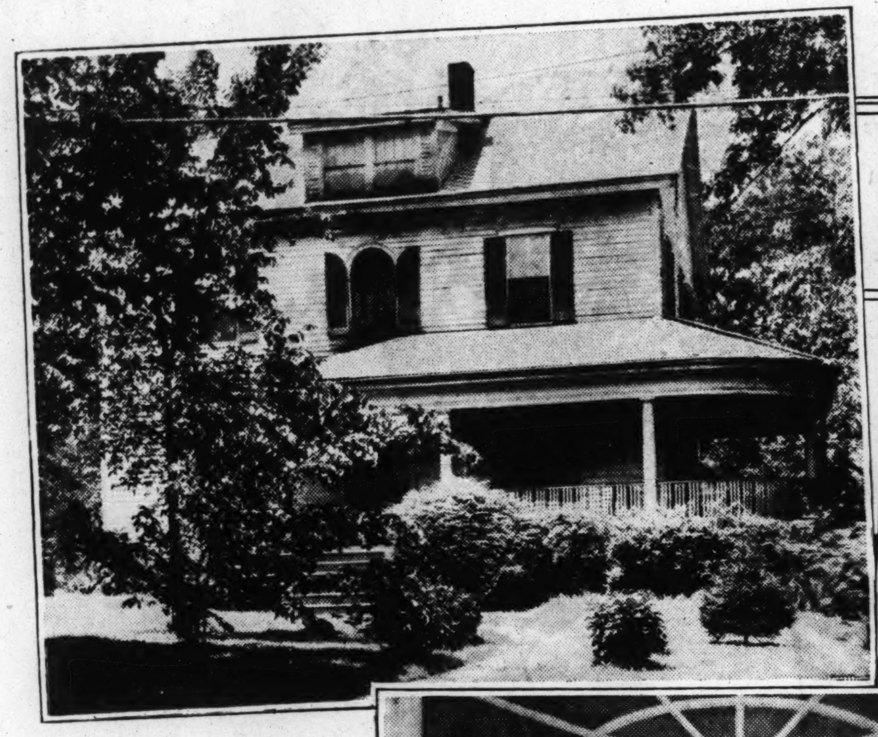
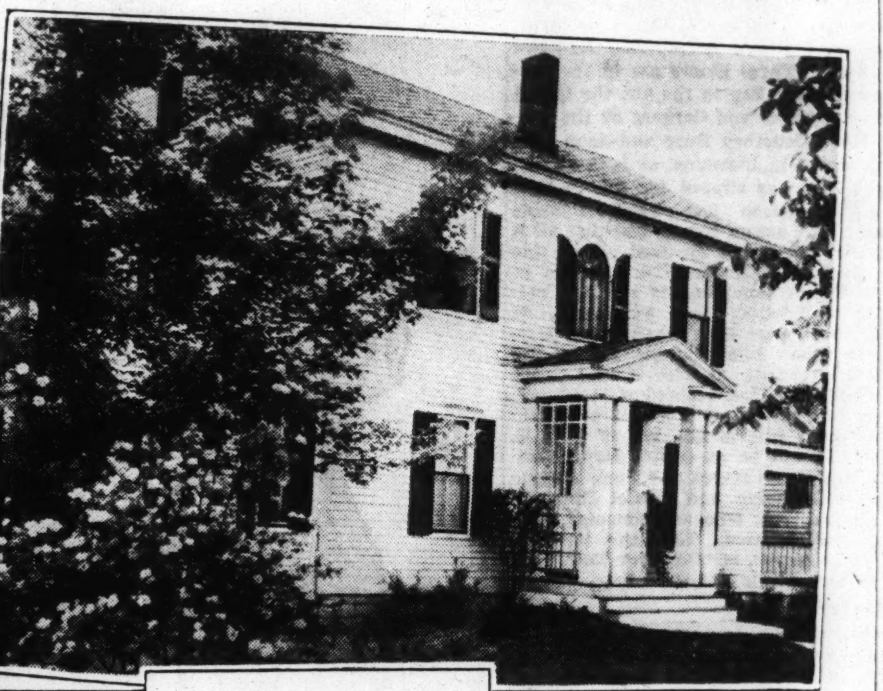
THE entrance hall gives one the first indication of the very beautiful and rare pieces to be found throughout the house. Here, the only remodelling done was to break through the back wall and add a door leading into the garden; a through hall being a characteristic feature of early Colonial houses. Against a background of wallpaper in old Colonial design in tones of yellow and off-white is hung a handsome gilt mirror which originally belonged to the wife of Dr. Shippen, a member of a famous Philadelphia family. It is flanked by a pair of beautifully wrought, gilt sconces and beneath it stands a fine old Sheraton console handed down from a great-aunt of Mrs. Cammack's. The side chairs at either side were especially designed to go with the table.

To the left of this hall is the living room or, by rights, the "parlor." The Victorian mantel, Italian in origin, and the rather small size of the room are suited in feeling to the delicate proportions of the truly priceless antiques with which this room is furnished. To one side of the fireplace is placed a comfortable couch which is the only modern piece in the room. Next to this couch stands a tilt-top table, unquestionably the rarest piece in the entire collection, for it was designed by Savery, one of the most famous of early American cabinetmakers. Against one wall stands a Sheraton sofa upholstered in an off-white damask of Chinese design, very similar in pattern to the original covering, remnants of which are always handed down with the sofa. Above this couch hangs an unusual Oriental rug, so fine in execution that it looks like a tapestry.



The house as it was originally.



The house after the old-fashioned veranda had been replaced by a classically simple entrance porch.

Another object in this room that has an interesting family history is the mahogany drop-leaf table of Sheraton design. For generations, every girl on Mrs. Cammack's side of the family has started housekeeping with this as her first dining room table. Decorative accessories include an old, Colonial, three-paneled mirror hung above the mantel, on which is placed a set of Victorian girandoles of gold and crystal. A colorful Oriental is placed on the wide board floors. These floors, original throughout the house, were covered up by 15 layers of paint but now, after being scraped down and waxed, they have a beautiful patina. Because of the color in the rug, the walls in this room have been kept pale cream in tone and the draperies are of old gold damask.

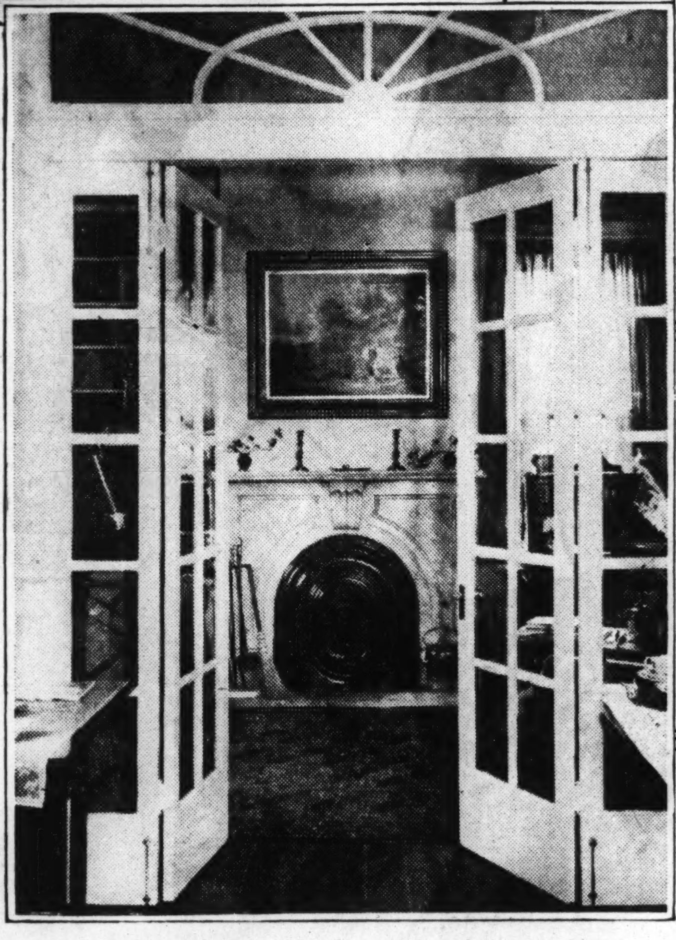
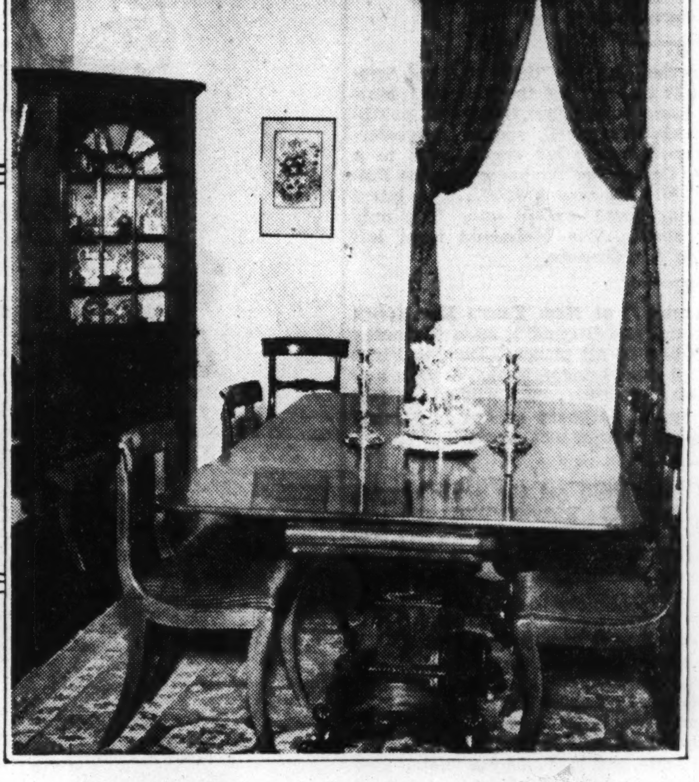
BETWEEN this room and the library beyond is a handsome doorway filled in with glass and wood molding. Although an original part of the house it is more classical than Victorian in feeling. The features of this room are the built-in bookcase and the charming bay window with its accompanying window seat. The windows are hung with sheer curtains in a Georgian green tone while the seat is covered in a colorful printed linen. Other comfortable chairs are suited to the "bookish" atmosphere of the room.

On the other side of the hall is the dining room; a room which bespeaks the gracious hospitality of an earlier day. Here a pair of pedestal tables, made by an early Philadelphia cabinetmaker, are placed together to form one big dining table. The chairs, of American Empire design covered in striped black horsehair, were presented by Mrs. Cammack's great-grandfather to his daughter when she started housekeeping. This same grandmother was the original owner of the lovely red silk brocade draperies which now grace Mrs. Cammack's dining room. Of particular interest among the decorative accessories is the painting of pheasants, done in 1801 by Peale, one of the most famous of early American artists who, incidentally, is a family connection. Lustre ware, Crown Derby and other rare porcelains fill the corner cupboard and the sconces are of old Sheffield with even the screws silver plated.



Looking through the beautifully designed doorway from the living-room into the library.



The old red damask draperies in the dining-room which originally belonged to Mrs. Cammack's grandmother.

The details of the furnishings of the bedrooms would make another complete story. Handsome canopied beds with tester tops, swell-front bureaus, Duncan Phyfe sewing stands, and the charming little shaving stands which topped many an early American chest of drawers are all to be found in abundance in this house. Even the children's rooms boast rare and lovely objects, many of them in miniature size. And here, as elsewhere, the backgrounds have been chosen with infinite care so that the house and furnishings present a perfect blending of Victorian and Colonial details.

I might add, in case, by any chance, I have conveyed the wrong impression of this house, that it is above all a charming home and only incidentally a repository of rare and beautiful things. This house has the ability to display these handsome heirlooms which it contains much in the way a very beautiful woman might display priceless jewels. One has the feeling of entering an unusually pleasant house, and it is only on closer examination that one begins to understand the careful planning and the wealth of fine objects which is the basis of this impression of beauty.

FLOWERS in your garden are as necessary as bright draperies and pictures in your home, but to keep a succession of blooms during the dog days of summer after the profusion of May is no little problem. Annual flowering plants seem to be the best solution for filling the brown gaps in flower beds and brightening an all green effect in the garden until later blooming perennials can take up the good work.

We don't all have time to be thrifty gardeners with seedings in cold frames ready to be transplanted, but must resort to putting seeds right into the beds or else setting out plants from the local nurseryman. The supply of annuals either in small pots or in clumps is very plentiful this year with a large selection in varieties and colors, and of course seeds can always be bought easily.

Any of these will brighten your garden considerably: petunias, marigolds, nasturtium, calendulas, nicotiana, portulaca, bachelor's buttons, zinnias, salpiglossis, candytuft, poppies, gaillardia, cosmos, calliopsis. For shady places use pansies, four o'clocks, ageratum, satin flower, nasturtiums, mignonette, lavatera mallow. And there has been a great improvement in edging plants with dwarf forms of the hardiest sorts — zinnias, petunias, marigolds, nasturtiums, english daisies and the many sedums.

IN SETTING OUT small plants it is important to space them properly, and as annuals have but one season of bloom it is possible to crowd them and still get good results. However if they are given lots of sun and air above ground and food and moisture below, they can be made to develop into unusually large plants—a zinnia will cover 18 inches of ground in circumference and an African marigold will assume the proportions of a small shrub if given the space. Place the new plants at least eight inches apart, or farther, depending upon their ultimate height and size. Of course edging plants should not be more than four or six inches apart so that they will form a full border.

IF flower seeds have been broadcast directly in the beds and the small plants are coming up, they will have to be thinned out to get the best results. This thinning is one of the most difficult lessons to be learned in gardening—it seems murderous to pull up so many, and not quite sensible to leave vast open spaces for the remaining tiny plants.

Strangely enough they will fill these spaces if you water, feed and cultivate the ground around them. Find a place for the small plants you thin out in some other part of the garden so that none of nature's efforts are wasted. In moving these plants dig them up with a small trowel lifting some earth around the roots, and plant them immediately in the new location. Press prepared soil (garden loam, leaf mold and a little sand) around the roots firmly and water thoroughly. When the water has entirely soaked in and settled the ground around the plant, fill in with more of the prepared soil and shade the small plants for a few days until they get over the dizziness of being moved.

IF IT IS A large bed facing south or west, drive four to five-foot stakes in the ground at intervals along the bed and onto them tack strips of burlap, old cloth or even heavy paper. A shade over the beds has the advantage of also protecting the little plants from sudden heavy showers. Do this transplanting on dry dull days if possible; if not, then late in the afternoon before the sun goes down.

Once the plants are set, try to give them a little attention every day. Rake into the ground any one of the complete chemical fertilizers or bone meal to enrich the soil while the plants are germinating. After the first buds appear a liquid manure will do lots of good. It is best to wait with this piece de resistance until the plants are plainly distinguishable; otherwise the impetus it gives the weeds may fool you if you neglect the garden for a few days.

Cultivation or loosening of the top soil is important as it will conserve the moisture already in the soil, allow water and air to get to the plant roots, and keep down the growth of weeds. If you will give this care to your flowers regularly they just can't help but bloom their heads off for you.

—o-o—

SINCE the lilac is so widely grown, the reason for lack of bloom is a frequent question. This may be caused by any one of several factors, or a combination of factors. The principal reasons for lack of bloom are:

Too much shade. If a bush is set close to a house or fence so that it does not get much sunshine in the course of a day, this may be a contributing cause.

Starvation. The bush may be growing in a soil that is practically devoid of plant food.

Failure to remove old flower stems after blooming. If you will remove the old flower stems immediately after the bush is through blooming, cutting them back to the two buds just below the old spray, it will induce good bloom for the following year.

If the bush has not been thinned out properly and excessive suckers removed from the base, the growth may be so thick that there is not sufficient vitality for good bloom.

If your lilacs are not doing well, you might inspect the bark for signs of scale, and be on the lookout for borers. Scale insects must be controlled by spraying. Consult your nurseryman or seedsman for the proper spray to use. Borers may be destroyed by injecting carbon bisulphide into the burrows with a medicine dropper and plugging up the opening; or the affected branches may be removed.

Another point to remember in connection with lilacs is that they prefer a soil approximately neutral or slightly alkaline in reaction. They do not thrive where the soil is acid, and sometimes it is necessary to apply lime to get the desired soil reaction.

Fertilizers

Nitrogen, phosphorus and potash are the primary elements in commercial fertilizers. Nitrogen in the soil will produce heavy foliage, phosphorus will produce flowers, and potash will help develop fruit and seeds. Because commercial fertilizers are all different and show the percentage of the above elements on the labels, scout around for the right one for your plants. Grass will require a fertilizer high in nitrogen and potash compounds, flower gardens will require one high in phosphorus, and everything else you grow will have certain needs which can be properly fed.

Strong Trend Toward Green In the Home

Favorite Colors in Exhibit Range From Green-Gray to Chartreuse Shade.

HERE are some random notes taken at an exhibit of modern rooms, the latest in modernity, as it were. The rooms reflect pretty well the trend in furniture, arrangements, materials and colors, much of which evidently has been influenced by the decorations of the Normandie.

Green seems to be a favorite color for the moderns. It ranges from gray-green to a lovely chartreuse shade. There's hardly a room but which has some chartreuse somewhere, either as artificial leather, drapery, floor or wall covering. Some greens show leaf-patterned fabrics, a most softening note for the usually severe, monotoned modern rooms.

With this trend, we find wallpaper creeping into the modern scene. In one room, a room dedicated to dining and a cocktail bar, the ends are in blue paper, while the sides, also in blue, are papered with a restrained horizontal stripe.

One living room has a dining alcove papered in a copper-colored leaf design, and one of the bedrooms has two walls in a gray leaf. One of the most attractive rooms is a dropped living room. Its walls are partly white, partly off-white with the previously mentioned dining alcove in copper-colored paper, the alcove being on the balcony-foyer. Draperies are copper colored, upholstery in intermediate shades. The rug is a plain, light beige and the unit furniture is of walnut.

THE COMBINED dining and cocktail room has gray-blue walls, white furniture with copper handles and red cushions on the benches beside the long, rough glass-topped dining table that occupies one end of the room. A white upholstered sofa takes up the other end.

The bedrooms include a room calculated to delight the heart of any boy. Its walls are hung with sheet cork applied horizontally, and the floor is also cork. The furniture is in red or blue lacquer and is most attractive.

Garden Aches

● To avoid back aches from garden work put the body weight onto arm and leg muscles rather than onto the back and shoulder muscles. Crouch on one leg then shift to the other at intervals rather than bend from the waist. Keep the feet far apart for raking or hoeing, and keep the knees and hips springy and bendable. No position can or should be maintained for more than five minutes.

New Ideas in Bride's Model Home of 1936

Attractive Features in 10-Room Dwelling Include a Solarium.

By Eleanor Ross

TODAY we're back again in the lovely Bride's House, which is House Beautiful's salute to spring and gift to prospective brides. This time we'll concentrate on the many new features incorporated in this year's edition, which is a gracious house of 10 rooms.

These features include a lovely solarium, which is really a leanto greenhouse with its glass roof slanting away from the wall of the house with a curve instead of an angle where glass roof becomes glass wall. The whole roof is covered with a slatted wooden screen. Furniture is of natural rattan upholstered in gay red, white and blue stripes. Around the edge is a continuous plant box where real plants grow, aided by artificial light reflectors overhead.

Beyond the solarium is a terrace grass-covered and surrounded by a natural birch sapling fence. The garden furniture is white-painted wrought iron, upholstered in a navy blue and white diamond-patterned fabric. The table tops are of blue glass.

A door leads from the solarium into the bar, a room both convivial and smart. The walls are covered with Chinese rice paper woven in silver and white. The dark walnut furniture is covered in chartreuse green. The bar is of walnut. Venetian blinds in silver with chartreuse edges take the place of curtains, with the tapes faced with chartreuse silk. The floor is covered with herringbone-patterned cork. Bright and happy, too, is a little breakfast room with coral and gray walls and gray woodwork. It has china and silver cabinets, coral painted, with plenty of drawer space beneath.

Cries of admiration (tinged with plenty of envy) resound through the shining whiteness of the kitchen. It is U-shaped with refrigerator, cabinets, counters, dishwasher, sink and range placed scientifically along three sides. Working counters are topped with metal, with storage cabinet above and to the left of the refrigerator.

EVERYTHING IS compact. Between the electric range and the door that leads to the breakfast room is a serving cabinet in which trays are stored and where the food receives its final touches before being carried out to the breakfast or dining room. Walls are covered in a rich, deep blue agate structural glass applied with a heavy mastic. Therefore, the cheerful walls are washable and clean. Linoleum is marbelized black and gray. The lighting is completely scientific.

The master bathroom is in tones of clear ivory and gray with gray Carrara glass lining shower and bathtub niche with every corner curved. Fittings are of white crystal and there are white ninon curtains trimmed with crystal ball fringe with overdrapes of rubberized satin-colored silk. Shower curtains are also of rubberized silk.

The linen closet which opens off the principal bedroom is papered in a green and white delicate leaf design, with cupboards painted dark green, set off by white shelf edges. Snowy white linen and green quilts and blankets are piled on the shelves.

Another most interesting closet is part of the bride's dressing room. It is painted ice-blue with closet boxes in red and white plaid with red satin tops. Two long mirrors flank the shelves which are edged with mirror molding. The dressing room has walls papered in ivory satin plaid and curtains of plain white ninon. Floor covering is a sable brown rug. Under the window is a Regency dressing table of palest pine with bench upholstered in Italian red satin. The closets take up one wall.

Food and Drink

SAUCE for the GOOSE

by

Irma S. Rombauer

AS the weather reaches a point when it deletes your energies, it encourages you to dispense with all surplus effort.

After hangings and ornaments have been simplified or done away with, summer furniture covers adjusted, awnings discreetly lowered and cotton dresses donned, the kitchen is a good place to turn to. Electricity is a summer boon but if you have no electric range or other electric heat saving devices, invest a few dollars in one of the small metal ovens designed to be placed over a gas burner.

This is a practical thing to have on hand at all seasons. In winter it enables you to cook a meal that calls for both a hot oven and a slow oven (i. e., a souffle and a hot bread). In summer the substitution of the small oven for the range oven does a great deal to reduce the heat of the kitchen. The oven question having been disposed of, use a double boiler freely. In many instances it will serve admirably in place of the small oven and, of course, it calls for still less heat. Use it for reheating buns or other breads, for cooking souffles (grease it well), for steaming puddings, for reheating cooked food, etc. Next, revise your menus.

Cook simple foods, make the most of the fruits and vegetables in season, go lightly with sauces, creams and meats rich in fat or butter. Make full use of refrigerator dishes but discourage the exclusive serving of cold foods.

● MY FATHER, a physician in the general practice as far back as the eighteen-fifties (pause, modern doctors, and consider what that implied where a country practice was involved—or rather, don't!) insisted that the many cold foods served in the summer time were a detriment to good health, so, no matter how torrid the days, our home menus included hot soup.

Theories ground into the young persist (at least Hitler and Mussolini think so), and that is why I still find a soup valuable if not necessary addition to summer meals. This is a good time for cream soups (they are almost a meal in themselves), but if you want something still more seasonable, try the following chowder. It takes about 40 minutes to prepare it:

Quick Vegetable Chowder.

About three and one-half cupfuls.

Pull off the outer leaves of a head of lettuce. Shred the inner leaves. There should be about:

One cup shredded lettuce*.

Pull apart a stalk of celery. Reserve the heart to be eaten raw. Chop the best of the large ribs. There should be about:

One cup shredded celery.

Peel, skin and chop:

One medium-sized onion.*

Skin and chop:

Two medium-sized carrots.

Melt in a saucepan:

Four tablespoons butter.

Add the prepared vegetables and simmer them in the butter for about eight minutes. Add to them:

Two cups boiling water.

One-half cup skinned or canned tomatoes (optional).

When the vegetables are boiling stir in:

One-third cup noodles or two tablespoons rice.

Simmer these ingredients for 30 minutes. Season them lightly with:

Salt.

Paprika.

*The vegetables may be varied in kind and quantity, but keep about the same proportions of vegetables and water. The soup is very delicately flavored as it is.

Use the coarse lettuce leaves, the celery tops, the carrot skins etc.; to make the following:

Vegetable Broth.

About 2½ cupfuls.

This is quickly made and is very good. Chop:

3 cups or more vegetables.*

Add:

4 cups water or part water and tomatoes or tomato juice.

Simmer the soup covered for one hour. Add:

Salt.

Paprika.

Add if desired:

One teaspoon Savita or a leaf cube.

Serve the soup strained or unstrained.

*The vegetables may be sauted for five minutes in three tablespoonfuls of butter.

—o-o—

● I HEARTILY recommend that the two following effortless desserts be included in your summer menus:

Lemon With Sherbet.

(About one quart.)

Soak: 2 teaspoons gelatine

In: 2 tablespoons cold water.

Dissolve it over hot water.

Cool it with:

7 tablespoons lemon juice

1 1-3 cups sugar.

Stir these ingredients until they are dissolved.

Stir them slowly into:

3½ cups rich milk.

If the milk curdles do not become alarmed. It does not matter.

Freeze the sherbet until it is nearly firm. Beat it well with a wire or an electric beater.

Freeze it until it is firm.

Beat it again shortly before serving it. This will give it a fine consistency.

If the sherbet is to be frozen in an ice cream freezer, omit the gelatine.

Chocolate Drop Cakes

(Uncooked)

About 12 two-inch patties.

Melt over hot water one-half pound chocolate bars.* Stir in two cups corn flakes.

Cool the mixture slightly. Shape it into patties. Place them on a piece of oiled paper in a refrigerator tray until they are firm.

*I use the sweet chocolate bars purchasable in all drug stores. Buy two 10-cent bars.

Chocolate as Base of Cool, Sweet Drinks

Several Recipes for Iced Refreshments, Including Chocolate Milkshake.

FOR those who enjoy sweet drinks there is nothing nicer than drinks with chocolate as the basic ingredient. Hot chocolate in winter and nice, cool chocolate-flavored drinks in summer are welcomed by the sweet-tooth brigade. For the time being we will leave cold-weather recipes behind us and concentrate on some grand iced chocolate drinks—just in time for your next party.

We'll lead off the sweet procession with a recipe for basic chocolate syrup, a syrup that will keep for several days. Melt four or five squares of unsweetened chocolate over hot water; cool to lukewarm. Add one cup sugar to two-thirds of a cup of hot water, stirring until sugar is dissolved, then cooling to lukewarm. Add this syrup to two slightly beaten egg yolks, one-fourth at a time, beating well after each addition; add chocolate in the same way. Then combine, beating one minute or until slightly thickened. Turn into jar, cover tightly; place in refrigerator.

This syrup can be made with scalded milk instead of hot water if desired.

For a grand chocolate milkshake add one cup chilled milk slowly to syrup, stirring constantly. Beat or shake well. Pour into tall glass. If cracked ice is used, serve at once. Add a dash of cinnamon if desired.

Minted chocolate is another variation on this sweet theme. Add one cup chilled milk slowly to two tablespoons chocolate syrup, stirring constantly. Add two or three drops peppermint extract and beat or shake well. Pour into tall glass. Top with two tablespoons whipped cream and serve with sprig of mint. If poured over cracked ice to chill, serve at once.

For a drink that is nourishing as well as flavorsome, try a chocolate eggnog, a good choice for the person who has to feed up and is fed up on the usual food. Add one cup chiled milk slowly to three tablespoons chocolate syrup, stirring constantly. Add to one well-beaten egg and beat or shake well. Pour into tall glass.

For a very fluffy eggnog, beat egg yolk and white separately; fold in egg white last. Flavor with cinnamon or nutmeg, as desired.

Cooling Dishes For June Days

'TIS the time for cold and cooling dishes, with a hot June sun beating down to make them the more palatable and appreciated.

Daisy Ham.

One two-pound daisy ham.

One-half cup brown sugar.

One teaspoon dry or prepared mustard.

One-half teaspoon paprika.

One-half cup vinegar.

One-half cup boiling water.

Place the ham in a covered casserole and spread it with the brown sugar, mixed with the mustard and paprika. Pour the vinegar and boiling water around the ham and cover. Bake in a moderate oven of 375 degrees Fahrenheit, allowing 45 minutes to the pound. For boiled Daisy ham, cover with boiling water and simmer for two hours, or until tender. Serves two to six.

Cooked Salad Dressing.

Two tablespoons butter or margarine.

Two tablespoons flour.

One teaspoon dry or prepared mustard.

One-half teaspoon salt.

One egg yolk.

Two teaspoons granulated sugar.

Three-fourths cup bottled milk or there-eighths cup evaporated milk and three-eighths cup water.

One-fourth cup vinegar.

Melt the butter in the top of a double boiler. Add the dry ingredients and blend. Add two-thirds cup of the milk and the vinegar and cook until thick.

Melt the butter in the top of a double boiler. Add the dry ingredients and blend. Add two-thirds cup of the milk and the vinegar and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Beat the egg yolk slightly with the remaining milk; then pour the hot mixture into the egg mixture, stirring constantly. Return to the double boiler and cook for two minutes or until thick. Serves six. To serve two or three, make half this recipe, using one egg yolk for the whole recipe.

Be CLEVER With BREADS

There's Nothing That Gives More Pleasure Than Hot Breads; They Make the Simplest Meal Exciting.

By MARIE L. CASTEEN

Delicious in itself, orange bread also makes excellent French toast

BREADS, because of their universal popularity, offer a splendid opportunity to a clever hostess for making them the keynote of her menu.

Popular restaurants are usually those that make a specialty of serving delicious bread. When your friends praise the food of a certain restaurant or tearoom, they will, nine times out of 10, start by telling you about the delicious hot cinnamon rolls or the crisp, flaky biscuits that melt in your mouth.

I have just been reading about a Kansas woman who turned her farmhouse into an inn and soon became famous over the entire State because of the splendid food she served. The writer goes on to say: "The products of her kitchen that have roused the most widespread comment are her delicions tomato rolls and orange rolls." It doesn't matter what kind of bread you serve, yeast bread or one of the quick breads, if they are of superior quality, they are sure to be popular.

Quick breads are classified according to the consistency of the batter or dough. Waffles, griddle cakes and popovers are pour batters; muffins, loaf breads and drop biscuits are drop batters; biscuits, scones and shortcakes are soft doughs. These breads can be made on short notice and, if accuracy is used in measuring and following the directions given in the recipes, there should be no difficulty in obtaining fine results.

The recipes that follow were planned to fit into your luncheon menu, but they can be used on all occasions, whether breakfast, dinner, tea or picnics.

The first recipe, orange bread, besides being delicious in itself, makes delectable sandwiches. And it can be served as the main course of luncheon if you use it for orange bread French toast, garnished with several slices of crisp bacon.

Orange Bread

Two tablespoons shortening

One-fourth cup granulated sugar

One egg

One and one-half cups all-purpose flour

Three teaspoons baking powder

One-half teaspoon salt

One-half cup candied orange peel, minced

One-half cup milk

One-fourth cup orange juice

Cream shortening and add sugar gradually, creaming until well blended. Add egg and beat until light. Mix and sift dry ingredients and blend in candied orange peel. Add to first mixture alernately with milk. Add orange juice last. Pour into well greased loaf pan. Allow to stand 20 minutes. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about 45 minutes to one hour. This recipe makes one medium-sized loaf.

Apricot Almond Bread

One and one-half cups dried apricots

One-half cup almonds, chopped

Two tablespoons shortening

Three-fourths cup granulated sugar

One egg

Two and one-half cups all-purpose flour

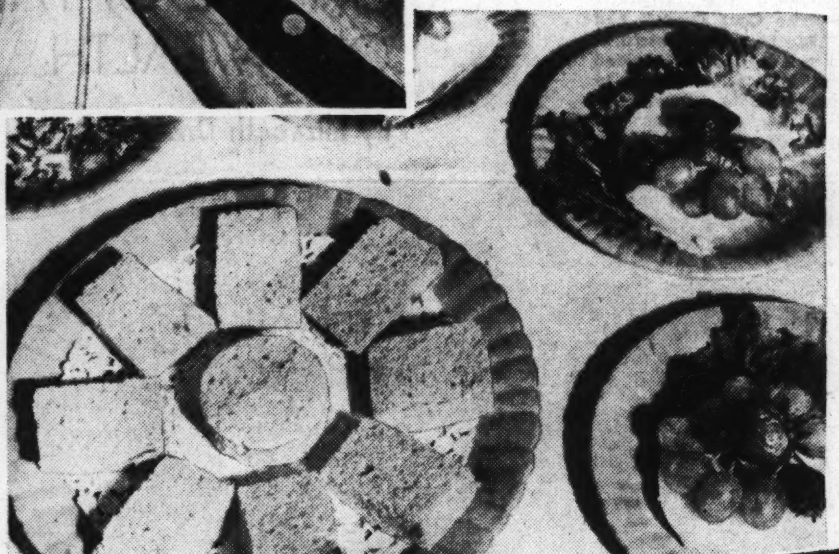
Five teaspoons baking powder

One-half teaspoon salt

One cup milk

Wash apricots, cover with water and cook five minutes. Drain, cool and chop. Combine with chopped almonds. Cream shortening, add sugar and blend until smooth and creamy. Add egg and beat until light. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add apricots and nuts. Add alternately to first mixtures with milk. Pour into greased loaf pan. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) from 45 minutes to one hour. This recipe makes one medium-sized loaf.

Peanut butter bread will make a pleasant change from your regular nut bread. It makes an attractive addition to your pet fruit salad and will also be useful for delicious sandwiches. And peanut-butter anything is a great favorite with men, as many a wife has discovered.



Try peanut butter bread with fruit salad.

Peanut Butter Bread

Three-fourths cup peanut butter

Six tablespoons brown sugar

Three eggs

One cup all-purpose flour

Three-fourths cup wholewheat flour

Four teaspoons baking powder

One teaspoon salt

One cup milk.

Cream peanut butter until soft and smooth. Add brown sugar and blend until well mixed. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add alternately with milk to first mixtures. Pour into well-greased loaf pan and allow to stand 20 minutes before baking. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) about one hour. This recipe makes one medium-sized loaf.

Hot breads are perhaps as popular as any bread served. Biscuits rank first place among the different varieties of breads served hot. The first recipe is for regular baking powder biscuits with a little additional touch.

Daffodil Biscuits

Two cups all-purpose flour

Four teaspoons baking powder

One-half teaspoon salt

Three tablespoons shortening

Three-fourths cup milk

One teaspoon orange rind, grated

One egg yolk, well beaten

One and one-half tablespoons butter, melted

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Cut in shortening. Divide mixture in two parts, one slightly larger than the other. To the larger part, gradually add enough milk to make a soft dough. To the smaller part, add orange rind and egg yolk with remaining milk to make a soft dough. Toss plain dough on lightly floured board and roll to three-eighths inch in thickness. Repeat process with yellow dough and place over plain dough. Fold dough as for puff paste, so that yellow dough is entirely covered. Roll to desired thickness for biscuits. Cut and arrange on cooky sheet. Brush tops with melted butter. Bake in a hot oven (450 degrees F.) about 20 minutes. This recipe makes about 16 small biscuits.

The next recipe makes biscuits particularly suitable to serve with salads. American cheese can be substituted for roquefort cheese.

Roquefort Cheese Biscuits

Two cups all-purpose flour

Four teaspoons baking powder

One teaspoon salt

Dash of cayenne

One-fourth cup roquefort cheese

Two tablespoons shortening

Three-fourths cup milk

Two tablespoons butter, melted

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Cut in roquefort cheese and shortening. Gradually add milk to make a soft dough. Roll on a lightly floured board to one-half inch in thickness. Cut with biscuit cutter. Arrange on cooky sheet and brush tops with melted butter. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 20 minutes. This recipe makes about 16 small biscuits.

Savory Biscuits

Two cups all-purpose flour

Three and-fourth teaspoons baking powder

One-half teaspoon salt

One tablespoon paprika

Ever taste Roquefort cheese biscuits? Try them.

One-half teaspoon baking soda

One-fourth cup butter

One and one-half tablespoons onion, minced

Two tablespoons parsley, minced

One tablespoon pimiento, minced

Three-fourths cup buttermilk

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Cut in butter and when thoroughly blended, add onion, parsley and pimiento. Add buttermilk to make a soft dough. Roll out on a lightly floured board to one-half inch in thickness and cut into biscuits. Arrange on cooky sheet. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 20 minutes. This recipe makes about 18 small biscuits.

Toasted scones are always welcome, and when served on the spring or summer luncheon menu, they are sure to make a hit. The advantage of serving scones is this: They can be made the day before and placed in container and kept in a cool place until ready to serve. Split and toast.

Scotch Cream Scones

Two cups all-purpose flour

Three teaspoons baking powder

Two teaspoons granulated sugar

One-half teaspoon salt

One-half cup butter

Two eggs

Three-eighths cup light cream

Mix and sift dry ingredients. Cut in five tablespoons of the butter. Beat eggs and cream together and stir into dry ingredients. Toss on lightly floured board. Divide dough into two equal parts. Roll each into round pieces, six and one-half inches in diameter. Cut each circle into quarters and place in greased round baking pans. Brush tops with remaining butter, melted. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) about 20 minutes. This recipe makes about eight scones.

Scotch scones can be kept fresh over night in a cool place.

A Springtime Luncheon of Two Courses

Stuffed Sweetbreads Are Used in This Successful Menu.

By Gladys T. Lang

Two Course Spring Luncheon.
Stuffed Sweetbreads
Pepper Souffle Baked Tomatoes
Prune and Graham Muffins
Orange Ring Salad

SOAK four pairs of sweetbreads in cold water for one hour. Cover with boiling water to which has been added one stalk of celery, one bay leaf, a small slice of onion, the juice of one lemon, salt and pepper. Cook for about 20 minutes, drain, plunge into cold water. Remove the skin and membranes and cut each sweetbread lengthwise. Make a dressing by sauteing one clove of garlic in two tablespoons of butter until the garlic is tender, then remove the garlic. To the butter add one pound of peeled mushrooms which have been run through the meat grinder. Let simmer for five minutes. Add one scant tablespoon of flour and stir until melted, then gradually pour on one cup of cream and add salt and pepper and one-fourth cup of chopped parsley. Spread dressing thickly on halves of sweetbreads and place other half on top, holding them together with toothpicks. Place in a buttered baking dish and spread with baking drippings or creamed butter and bake about 20 minutes, basting frequently. Remove to heated platter and pour over the following sauce:

Two tablespoons of butter.

Two heaping tablespoons of flour.

One-half tablespoon of Worcestershire sauce.

One-half cup of cream.

One-fourth teaspoon of kitchen bouquet.

Three cups of soup stock or three beef cubes dissolved in three cups of hot water.

One heaping tablespoon of catsup.

One-fourth teaspoon of paprika.

Salt to taste.

Three tablespoons of sherry.

Brown the butter and flour (very brown) add all ingredients except cream and sherry, cook for 30 minutes. Then add the cream and sherry and cook very slowly for 10 minutes. (This sauce is delicious on lobster, chicken or sweetbreads and can be kept in refrigerator for a week and used when required.)

Pepper Souffle

Remove seeds and parboil six medium sized green peppers, skin and run through the meat chopper. Add grated corn from six medium sized ears of corn, one-fourth cup of heavy cream, one tablespoon of catsup, three slightly beaten egg yolks, salt and pepper. Mix well, then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of three eggs. Pour into a buttered mold or individual timbal molds and bake in a pan of water until firm.

Baked Tomatoes.

Eight medium sized tomatoes.

One cup of minced celery.

One small grated onion.

Two tablespoons of butter.

One cup sugar.

Two-thirds cup of bread crumbs.

One teaspoon salt.

Scoop out tomatoes and invert to drain. Salt and pepper. Chop the tomatoe pulp and simmer with the minced celery and onion in butter until soft. Add sugar and bread crumbs and just before filling tomatoes add a small teaspoon of baking powder. Crumb tops and dot with butter. Bake for 15 minutes.

Prune and Graham Muffins

One cup of graham flour.

One cup of cake flour.

Four teaspoons of baking powder.

One-half teaspoon salt.

Two tablespoons of sugar.

One cup of cut up cooked prunes.

One well-beaten egg.

One cup milk.

Three tablespoons of melted butter.

Mix the dry ingredients and cut in the prunes, then add the beaten egg, and the last thing the butter. Mix well and bake in buttered muffin pans in a moderate oven.

Orange Ring Salad

One tablespoon of gelatin.

One-half cup of cold water.

One-half cup of boiling water.

One and one-half cups of orange juice.

Juice of one lemon.

One tablespoon of chopped mint.

One-half scant cup of sugar.

One and one-half pounds of white grapes, skinned and seeded.

Two cups of shredded lettuce.

Two packages of cream cheese.

One cup of sour cream dressing.

Soak the gelatin in the cold water for five minutes. Add the boiling water, lemon and orange juice, sugar and chopped mint. Stir until cool and beginning to jell. Mash and form cheese into balls the size of large marbles. Pour a little of the jelly into bottom of mold which has been lightly buttered and place balls at intervals while pouring on the remaining jelly. Place in refrigerator. Unmold and fill center with the peeled grapes mixed with the shredded lettuce and sour cream dressing.

Italian Recipes to Vary Menu

IT IS a nice idea to vary meals once in a while by preparing dishes of other nationalities. Some housewives make it a pleasant practice to serve a meal now and again that is entirely foreign, from soup to dessert. Each country has distinctive dishes, be it Italian, Spanish, Bavarian or Swedish cookery.

One reader writes that she generally serves a foreign meal when she has company and her guests enjoy the novelty of it. Today we are giving ore Italian recipes as that cooking seems to be a favorite with ever so many people. The recipes are all from fine Italian restaurants and are therefore authentic.

Frittata is a very popular Italian dish. This is generally a vegetable in season, cook and combined with green onions, eggs, cheese and lettuce and fried as an omelet. To make a frittata with spinach is especially nice. Chop fine one green onion, and chop lettuce leaves. Stir into some cooked spinach which has been chopped, the onion and lettuce, also some grated parmesan cheese and one egg for each person. Season, add a little olive oil and cook as an omelet in a well-greased pan. This also is nice made with cooked asparagus stalks cut into small pieces, or with chard or zucchini.

A delicious, typically Italian dessert is crema fritta, and the amounts given here are for four portions. Mix eight egg yolks, one cup sugar and two cups flour together. Stir in one quart of warm milk. Place in pan over low heat and stir constantly while mixture thickens. Flavor with vanilla and pour in pan so it will be one-quarter inch thick, and allow to cool. Cut in squares and roll each piece in beaten egg, then in bread crumbs. French fry and serve with sprinkling of powdered sugar and a dash of rum which has been lighted. Serve while rum is blazing and there you have a real, grand company sweet.

The arguments about the superiority of cioppino over boullibaise continues unabated. It is a nice idea to be neutral about the whole affair and eat and enjoy them both. Recently we gave a recipe for the boullibaise of old Marseilles and so today we'll even matters up by giving the recipe for a crab cioppino that is served in San Francisco and is always popular whenever crabs are in.

Place in a saucepan three tablespoons olive oil, two tablespoons chopped onion, one tablespoon chopped green pepper, half teaspoon chopped garlic and two tablespoons chopped celery and saute a light brown. Add half cup white wine, one cup fresh chopped or solid pack tomatoes, two teaspoons salt and half teaspoon pepper and cook for five minutes. Then add one live crab chopped with the shell the size of clams, half pound diced rock cod and one tablespoon chopped parsley. Cover closely and cook for 25 to 20 minutes and then serve.

Rinse your milk bottles out with cold water immediately upon emptying. Then wash them when you are doing the dishes.

Real Iced Coffee

● There are lots of warm days ahead—days when iced coffee will be a welcome note for luncheon and dinner. But no one likes diluted iced coffee, so here's a way to preserve its full rich flavor.

Pour freshly made coffee into the freezing trays of your automatic refrigerator and freeze it into cubes. Put these cubes into tall glasses and over them pour hot coffee of the usual strength. As the coffee cubes melt they will not dilute the flavor of the coffee as ice cubes would.

When making an apple pie, sprinkle a little grated lemon rind and juice on top of the apples. One or two cloves will also improve the flavor.

OFF the LEASH

by

H. F. Owen

MOST dogs have good sense of smell. Dogs of course are bred for different uses so naturally some have a keener sense of smell than others, depending upon the breed and the work they perform. However, most dogs can be taught to discriminate between articles by their different odors and learn to connect them with the spoken name of the article. For example, you say, "get your harness." He soon learns the word harness means the article that smells of leather. "Ball" means the rubber smell. "Go get the paper," the connection is sight, smell and sound of the word "paper." This is called scent discrimination.

The way to teach your dog to pick out different articles is to take one article at a time and give its name each time you ask him to pick it out. We will start with the ball.

Have your dog lie down. Now take a ball and put it on the floor or ground a few feet away from him. Go back to your dog and say "get the ball," emphasizing the word "ball." Of course he will get it because he saw you put it there and there is nothing else to get. When he brings it back say "That's right, the ball." Now, when he is not watching, place the ball where it is not too noticeable, then in a short time, without looking or pointing at it, call him to you and say, "get the ball." He may not understand the first time so repeat the command.

● WHEN HE HAS learned the meaning of "ball" teach him in the same way with his harness or collar. When he has learned this to your satisfaction place both articles on the floor and say, "get the ball." If he should make a mistake and start to pick up the harness, say, "no, the ball." He knows by now that "no" means that he is not doing right, but he has been sent to pick up something and if the harness is wrong the ball must be right so he picks up the ball. Immediately say, "That's right, the ball." When he has brought it to you and delivered it properly say "now go get the harness." Then place them as before, but this time say "get the harness." He has just brought you this so it will be fresh in his mind and he will not be likely to make a mistake.

● MRS. W. F. asks, "What is the best way to cure dogs of shyness in the show ring? We have lost several shows on this account although they appeared to be well trained at home."

ANSWER: I believe your dog is more temperamental than shy. He has evidently been shown to some extent and only shows these traits occasionally. I think he becomes irritated and bluffs the handler when he feels so inclined. I would suggest that you muzzle him and while he has the muzzle on, handle him and do the very things that seem to aggravate him.

The muzzle is advised more for your own good than to punish him, for if you are afraid that he will bite, your dog detects it instantly and bluffs you. If his muzzle is on you have confidence and your dog knows it. Thus, you show the dog that he must allow you or any one else who is handling him to do anything that they wish to do.

When you have practiced this and are sure that you have confidence in yourself, and the dog acts properly, work him the same way without the muzzle. With some dogs it is "bluff or be bluffed."

● MRS. E. R., of Jerseyville, Ill., writes: I have a pup born Jan. 14, 1936, that has killed two chickens and last evening caught another one. I have whipped him hard but he does not respect that. How can I break him?

ANSWER: Whipping seldom corrects a dog of this habit unless it can be administered while he is in the act. Even then we do not recommend whipping.

Try fastening a rope about 10 feet long around his body, as we explained in our lesson, "Coming When Called." Now take the dog to the chicken yard and stake him out as you would a cow. He will thus have about seven feet on all sides of him. When he lunges at a chicken he can only go a little way until something grabs him around the middle and hurts. He will forget the chicken and after a few more attempts will decide that if he does not bother the chickens the rope will not bother him and as he sees more of the chickens and they of him the less they will notice each other. Your dog is very young, so you should be able to correct him easily.

KING HARRY LEHR AND THE GILDED AGE

NEWPORT IN THE DAYS WHEN IT WAS THE SUMMER CAPITAL OF FABULOUS WEALTH.

By Elizabeth Drexel Lehr

This is the fourth of a series of stories from the book, "King Lehr and the Gilded Age," by Elizabeth Drexel Lehr, widow of the Baltimore champagne salesman, who became the social arbiter of America's "Four Hundred" in the latter years of the mauve decade. Lehr, basking in the favor of Mrs. William Astor, replaced Ward McAllister as society's leading man.

EVERY summer Harry Lehr and I went to Newport like everyone else in our world, for in those days so much prestige was attached to spending July and August at the most exclusive resort in America that to have neglected to do so would have exposed a definite gap in one's social armour. It was an accepted fact that only those whose position in society was unstable never went there. Let them vaunt the charm of a country holiday, of a summer spent in Europe as much as they would, they deceived no one. Their acquaintances knew that they stayed away because they were afraid. For Newport was the very Holy of Holies, the playground of the great ones of the earth from which all intruders were ruthlessly excluded by a set of cast-iron rules.

"Avoid Newport like the plague until you are certain that you will be acceptable there," Harry Lehr would counsel ambitious newcomers who sought his expert advice. "If you don't it will be your Waterloo. Above all, don't take a house there and launch out giving parties. Try to get invited for a week or two on someone's yacht as an experiment to see whether you are a success or not. In that way you will leave your retreat open to you, and you can always pretend that the climate does not suit you and go back to New York without anyone having witnessed your defeat. . . . "

Dire indeed was the fate of those who were not "acceptable" if they had been unwise enough to take a villa for the whole season, for in so small a community, there was no escape for them. Every week their humiliation was brought home to them more and more as one after another the all-powerful queens of Newport chose to ignore their existence. Splendid balls and dinners every night, but not for them. Bathing parties on Bailey's Beach, yachting at Hazard's, but both these sacred precincts were closed to them. Their men were not permitted to join the Reading Room or the Casino Club; their women had not the entree to a single drawing room. They might play an admirable game of tennis, their thoroughbreds might carry off the best prizes at the Horse Show . . . in other places these distinctions would have availed them something, never in Newport. They could only sit in the palatial villa they had so rashly acquired and accept their defeat with what grace they could. They seldom had the temerity to last out the season. A month of ostracism would usually send them over to the less aristocratic but more hospitable pastures of Narragansett, where they would try to console themselves with the big summer hotels on the water front, the smartly dressed crowds on the pier, the friendly holiday atmosphere which they had sought in vain at "The Millionaires' Playground."

EVEN those acceptables who had triumphed had to walk warily for the first season or two in Newport. . . . "The battle isn't won yet," Harry Lehr would warn them. . . . "You have still got to be careful . . . " And if he were advising a woman he always gave her three golden maxims, "First, be modest. Go quietly at the start; don't try to be original in your entertaining or your equipages. . . . Follow the lead of the others instead of striking out your own trail. Second, never try to take any other woman's man, whether husband, lover or well-wisher. . . . Third, never try to outdress or outjewel the other women."

None knew better than he that Newport Society was composed of a series of cliques presided over by the reigning queens, and that to offend any one of them was to court disaster.

The line of sumptuous villas—"The cottages," as they were ironically called by their inhabitants—which stretched the length of Bellevue avenue along the cliffs and over Ochre Point, was Newport's glory. Here were the homes of its millionaires, the settings for that brilliant chain of balls and parties which made its season the gayest in two continents.

One splendid villa after another, each owned by men whose names made history in the world of finance, who thought nothing of spending ten million dollars for a house in which they lived for six weeks in a year. . . . "More riches to the square yard in Newport than you would find in miles anywhere else," Harry would say.

Near James Gordon Bennett's villa was "The Elms," a fine old brick house where lived Mrs. Burke-Roche and her twin sons, Maurice (now Lord Fermoy) and Frank, who were so alike that it was impossible to tell them apart, a fact of which they never failed to take advantage. They were constantly getting each other out of scrapes, and always took turns at entertaining bores.

"Say, Boy"—Maurice would call on the beach—"I had to sit next Miss X at dinner last night, to oblige you, so will you replace me at the Clam-bake Club luncheon today?" So "Frank" would be "Maurice" for the rest of the day.

"Elm Court" came next, the E. J. Berwind's palatial mansion which was filled with the masterpieces of French and Italian art for which "The Coal Baron" had ransacked Europe. The Berwinds had been to England, admired Buckingham Palace, and tried to reproduce some of its salient characteristics in the architecture of their own palace; consequently they had cost $5,000,000 to build, and had the only house in Newport which boasted three massive entrance doors so that three carriages could discharge their loads of guests simultaneously.

"MARBLE HOUSE" . . . home of the powerful Belmonts.

Opposite "Elm Court" was "Arleigh," the house which Harry and I rented from Mrs. Ruthven Pratt. It was the scene of my calvary. How often its walls would echo to the bitter reproaches, the recriminations hurled at me, the incessant demands for more money.

"Isn't it enough that I have to endure your presence here? I hate the sight of you—you are hideous to me. The only thing that you can do is to provide me with money which I at least have the taste to spend properly. . . ."

Sick at heart I would give in to him, sign endless cheques. . . .

ONE June day we lent our house to Reggie and Kathleen Vanderbilt for their marriage. Everyone had expected them to have a fashionable New York wedding and those who were not in the secret were astonished at their change of plan. The reason was an amusing one. Reggie Vanderbilt with all the vast wealth at his disposal was in flight from the Law! He dared not appear within the State of New York for fear of being served with a summons to give evidence at the Canfield trial.

For a long time there had been complaints of the manner in which the smartest gaming house in New York was being run, but as Reggie Vanderbilt said plaintively it was rather hard luck that the police should have chosen to raid it on the very night that he had lost $150,000, and should thereupon insist on his giving evidence for the prosecution. He left New York the next day, resolved to stay out of the State until the whole affair had blown over. But he reckoned without the tenacity of the police. The more determined he was to avoid the unwelcome publicity of the trial, the more determined they became to have him as a witness at all costs. They must prove to the world that even a Vanderbilt could not flout their authority. They put plain-clothes men to watch the house of his fiancee, Kathleen Nielson, knowing that sooner or later he would be bound to slip back to New York to visit her. Once they had served him with a summons they could be sure of him, he could not disobey it under pain of arrest. Their supposition was justified. One afternoon he stole into the house. He had come alone and on foot, dressed in the most ordinary clothes he could find; he looked like a respectable young salesman. But even those precautions were not enough. Within ten minutes the house was surrounded. Escape seemed impossible. Then Kathleen rang up the most resourceful man she knew—Harry Lehr.

HARRY went round to the house at once, heard what had happened, rushed down to the servants' hall.

Half an hour later the police saw the Nielson's stout Swedish cook leave the house and take the Sixth avenue car, but they paid no attention to her. It was only after hours of fruitless vigil that they realised that their quarry had escaped them. Harry Lehr's genius for costumes had served its turn. The supposed cook was none other than Reggie Vanderbilt, dressed in clothes borrowed from the servants, and made up by Harry and Kathleen.

MRS. WILLIAM B. LEEDS . . . crashed the gate.

Elisha and Mrs. Dyer were our neighbors at "Arleigh" and then came "White Lodge," a beautiful villa whose nile green ballroom and panelled dining-room ornamented with the delicate Gothic scrolls of Walter Crane were considered the last word in elegance. It belonged to Lispinard Stewart whom every single woman in Newport had been trying to marry for years. Tall, thin and courtly, he was famed for the perfection of his manners and for his conceit. He never forgave Mrs. H. O. Havemeyer for the slight she put upon him at one of Mrs. Oliver Belmont's dinner parties. He had been deputed to take her in to dinner and, as the procession of couples advanced at a stately pace into the dining-room, was congratulating himself on the impression he was making. But

Mrs. Havemeyer was young, pretty, rich and correspondingly spoilt. She saw some friends at the other side of the room and evidently preferred their company to his. Without a word of apology she left him, seized a chair and drew it up to the other table. Poor Lispinard Stewart, left to sit where he would, fumed throughout dinner. . . . "I was faced with two alternatives," he explained gravely in recounting the incident to me afterwards. . . . "Should I remember my birth, my training, my aristocratic family, and offer her my arm again as we left the dining room, or should I obey my natural impulse and leave her to walk out alone? In the end my breeding won. When we rose from the table, I bowed stiffly to her, held out my arm without a word and escorted her back to the drawing room. But I never addressed a single word to her, and I never will again. . . ."

One of the most beautiful homes in Newport was "Rough Point," a gray stone Tudor house with a great Gothic hall and lawns running right down to the cliffs. There Mr. and Mrs. William B. Leeds entertained regally as befitted "The Tinplate King" and his consort.

They had come to Newport tentatively enough at first, like all newcomers, and for at least two seasons their fate hung in the balance. At one time it looked as though they were going to swell the number of those defeated in the social lists. They leased Fairholme from the John Drexels, who were much criticised for letting them have it. . . . "It's not fair to the rest of us," proclaimed Edith Wetmore who, as daughter of the Governor of Rhode Island and owner of "Le Chateau sur Mer," was the center of one of the most exclusive cliques. . . . . . .

"How can you lease to those horrible, vulgar people? Why, the whole house ought to be disinfected after them! . . ."

Alice Drexel, plump and placid, laughed. . . . "Well, we are going to Europe this summer, and I shall have the house redecorated while we are away, so I thought they might as well have it."

But the Leeds found a champion in Mrs. Oliver Belmont, that valiant warrior to whom opposition was as the breath of life. Nothing made her happier than the knowledge that she was pitting herself against the rest of the world. She loved to see herself as a pioneer, to make others bend to her will, to have them follow her in the end, meek, sheeplike. . . .

—o-o—

"I ALWAYS do everything first," she would say. "I blaze the trail for the rest to walk in. I was the first girl of my 'set' to marry a Vanderbilt. Then I was the first society woman to ask for a divorce, and within a year ever so many others had followed my example. They had been wanting divorce all the time, but they had not dared to do it until I showed them the way. . . ."

She quickened to the sound of argument as to a clarion call to arms, and arguments broke out in Newport whenever the name of Leeds was mentioned.

One morning she summoned Harry Lehr to her. . . . "I like those Leeds people, and the wife is lovely. I am going to take them up and put an end to this silly nonsense about them, and you have got to help me. . . ."

So she issued invitations for a dinner and ball at her house "in honor of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Leeds." The recipients were in a dilemma. Many of them had been strenuously opposing the advance of the Tinplate King and his wife; they had voiced their opinion in no uncertain tones, they could not very well go back on it. On the other hand if they declined the invitation Belcourt with all its lavish hospitality would be closed to them for the rest of the season. They hesitated, uncertain. Meanwhile everyone was talking of the ball; the preparations were being made on a staggering scale of magnificence; Harry Lehr was planning a marvelous cotillion.

Of course they gave in in the end. Their letters of acceptance were carried into Belcourt in shoals.

The light of victory shone in Mrs. Belmont's eyes as she stood at the entrance of Oliver's enormous armour gallery to receive her guests on the night of the ball.

By her side stood Mrs. William B. Leeds, young then and imperially beautiful in her white satin dress, her superb diamonds emphasizing the delicacy of her coloring, the velvet darkness of her eyes. She too had her night of triumph. Her charm was far more potent than her husband's milions. Society took her to its heart from that moment. William B. Leeds, young, handsome, and ambitious for his beautiful wife, gazed at her in adoration. Her beauty had won the day for him.

DR. AND MRS. HENRY BARTON JACOBS had a fine house at the corner where Narragansett avenue and Ochre Point avenue meet. There they gave stately dinner parties and musicales. They were both

THE STAMP REVIEW ˣˣˣ By John Chamberlin

● THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT took a definite action with regard to the issuing of the twenty-four cent airmail stamp of several years ago with inverted center. They changed the plates, not with reference to the way the stamp was printed; the top border was changed. Before the error was discovered, only one plate had "Top" in the top sheet margin, that is the word "top" appeared in only one color.

Soon after the sheet of errors was discovered the stamps were issued with the word "Top" appearing in the top sheet margin in two colors, that is, in the color of each plate used in printing the single sheet of stamps.

Since that time, all bi-colors issued by the United States have had "Top" printed in all the colors used in printing the sheets, to enable the checkers to eliminate any errors.

WEDNESDAY, June 10, will mark the one hundredth anniversary of the death of Andre Marie Ampere, the famous French physicist in whose honor the electrical unit, the ampere, was named.

Ampere was born in Polemieux Jan. 22, 1775. In his early life he was a teacher of languages, chemistry and mathematics, moving, in 1801, to Bourg where he became professor of physics and chemistry. Eight years later he was made professor of mathematics at the Ecole Politechnique in Paris. Continuing his scientific research for eight years, he was finally admitted to the institute. An authority says of him:

"It is on the service that he rendered to science in establishing the relation between electricity and magnetism and in developing the science of electro-magnetism—or as it is called, electro-dynamics—that Ampere's fame mainly rests.

"On Sept. 11, 1820, he heard of H. C. Oersted's discovery that a magnetic needle is acted on by a voltaic current. On Sept. 18 he presented a paper to the academy, containing a far more complete exposition of that and kindred phenomina. The whole field thus opened up he explored with characteristic industry and care, and developed a mathematical theory which not only explained the electro-magnetic phenomina already observed but also predicted many new ones."

The French Government has issued a stamp commemorating his death one hundred years ago, on June 10, 1836.

THE portrait of Gen. Louis Leon Faidherbe appeared on the 1906 issue of the stamps of the seven French West African colonies, but the stamps have never been called commemoratives.

Faidherbe was born June 3, 1818, at Lille, and received his military education at Ecole Polytechnique in Metz, and entered the engineers in 1840. From 1844 to 1847 he served in Algeria, then two years in the West Indies, after which he returned to Algeria where he took part in many expeditions against the Arabs.

In 1852 he was transferred to Senegal, and two years later was made governor of the colony, which post he held until 1865. France's colony of Senegal then consisted of a strip of coast, and the small town of St. Louis in the interior. By boldly advancing his troops against the Muslims, who controlled the country and were trying to drive out the white people, he extended the border of the colony to Middle Niger and by treaty with Omar el-Hadji extended the colony to touch the Niger River. He also conquered the country lying between Senegal and Gambia.

WHEN HE RESIGNED the foundation of French domination in West Africa was laid. His dream was the creation of a French African empire extending across Africa to the Red Sea. In 1863 he became General of a brigade, and several years later served in Algeria, and was in command of the Constantine division at the beginning of the Franco-Prussian War. Later he was made commander in chief of the Army of the North.

At the end of the war he was elected to the French Senate, but disliked politics and resigned. In 1872 he went on a scientific expedition to Upper Egypt to study the monuments and inscriptions to be found there. He died Sept. 29, 1889.

His greatest and most enduring monument lies in the work he did in West Africa, but there are many statues raised in his honor, one of them in St. Louis, the capitol of Senegal in Africa.

THE Hungarian stamps of 1904-07 (Scott's Nos. 66 to 82 inc.) can be divided into three sets. They are listed with two watermarks (134 and 136) which can readily be distinguished by the illustrations. They are also listed Perf. 12 and Perf. 15. A set may be had Perf. 12 of Type 134, including the error of color (No. 78a), occurring only in this way, which is not a rare stamp. The set Perf. 15 with watermark 134 does not contain this error, and it also ends with the two krone value. The set Perf. 15, and watermarked type 136 goes from the one filler through the five krone value, and does not include the error of color, but No. 83, the 16 filler can be added to this set as this is the only way it belongs with either of these watermarks.

The real rarity of the sets is the two krone blue, Perf. 12. It is a very scarce stamp.

Men's Outfit For Week-End Vacation Trip

"Elimination of All But the Essentials Is in Order When Going Out of Town."

By Esquire

WEATHER and work permitting, the modern conception of the sabbatical day of rest is a miniature vacation. The week-end holiday belongs to no particular season. Summer, however, offers a wider variety of diversions.

Week-end sojourning, like lengthier holiday, calls for serious consideration of the subject of clothes that will put you and keep you at ease—come what may. Elimination of all but the essentials is in order. With the exception of a change of "linen," we suggest a minimum week-end wardrobe that will suffice to meet every eventuality of resort activities.

Start with a double-breasted gray flannel suit. The jacket of this suit will serve later for wear with white flannels. A light-weight felt is a practical hat for a week-end journey.

Either a sennit straw or the panama hat will be in keeping with the clothes of this week-end kit.

One piece of luggage is ample to carry all we've suggested. One has hangers that will keep your pressed jackets and trousers in shape, and it provides room enough for all accessories. It folds into a convenient kit-bag shape.

Time is precious on a week-end. The suggestion that you have a good wrist-watch seems in order. A strap constructed of expanding metal will keep a good watch safely on your wrist.

For less dressy moments, a sport shirt of light-weight knitted lisle may be worn with your flannel slacks, giving you another alternate outfit.

The popularity of the abbreviated knitted swimming trunk is unquestioned. Many men of heavy build, however, are better attired in flannel or gabardine shorts of this kind.

A white Palm Beach or linen jacket, worn with the gray flannels, will furnish an alternate outfit that's as smart as it is comfortable.

Lounging Robes For Double Duty

HERE'S good news for those who want one summer lounging robe to serve both in the boudoir and on the beaches. The shops are showing some heavy cotton robes that resist water so well they can be worn over a bathing suit while going to and from the pool, and also are sufficiently attractive for pullman and boudoir wear. Designs in primitive colors are emphasized although more modest color schemes are available. Such a robe is an ideal addition to a vacation wardrobe and takes up very little room in a traveling case.

Sandals also are of the double duty type, providing that the right sort are selected. The woven sandals, for example, are ideal as beach accessories and can be worn with the tailored robe indoors. Some fabric sandals likewise are important and practical in the vacation wardrobe.

Raffia Accessories

You can start with a raffia headband and add sufficient other accessories of the straw to complete a summer ensemble. Headbands are designed primarily for sportswear, but some smart young girls have been wearing them with their cotton formals. Necklaces, bracelets, clips, belts and sandals are among the other costume accents which follow the raffia vogue. A sports dress which has buttons of the novelty material is cleverly created so that the tones of yellow and green which predominate in the print are brought out in the trimmings.

NEW BID in BRIDGE

By Ely Culbertson

LADIES and gentlemen of the contract playing world: I have the honor and the joy to announce that the ten-year civil war is over! No longer will the nights be made hideous by the battle cries of the preemptors and the anti-preemptors pursuing their traditional conflict. A peace treaty, with honor to both sides, has been arranged and the articles of peace shall become known to history as the "two-way three bid."

Even in auction days the question, "Does shut-out bidding pay?" was argued fiercely year after year. The advent of contract served merely to intensify the argument. The players who favored shut-out bids (preempts) took the keenest delight in producing example upon example where they had prevented a game bid by opponents with shut-out tactics; the anti-preemptors countered with just as many illustrations of shut-out bids that had silenced the partner and consequently cost a lay-down slam.

My associates and I recognized the merits of both viewpoints and realized the futility of attempting to persuade either camp to surrender. Obviously, the only solution was one which would preserve the principles of both schools of thought. The two-way three bid is just such a solution.

My limited space will not permit the full explanation of the new bid in one article. Therefore I shall do little more than begin its presentation here and now.

● ANY OPENING SUIT-BID of three in a major or minor suit is a two-way bid. It is so called because it combines in a rather paradoxical manner the treatment of two extremes of hands. One contains nothing but a long trump suit (seven winners) and no defensive strength outside; with such hands the three-bid becomes a pure shut-out hand.

The second type is a powerful hand, ranging up to 10 winners, with a solid or nearly solid suit and honor strength which is just below the opening two bid; with such hands the three bid becomes a strength-showing bid announcing a powerful trump suit. At the time that the three bid is made it is truly a two-way bid, for neither the partner nor the opponents know whether the bid is a shut-out or strength showing. This places each opponent in an annoying dilemma: if he passes the three bid he may easily lose a game, or even a slam; if he bids, partner's hand may be worthless and a heavy penalty may result.

The objects of a two-way bid therefore are: first, to trap the opponents by compelling them to venture upon dangerously high ground; second, to shut them out; and, thirdly, to accomplish the first two objects without undue loss in game or slam premiums.

● TO BID SO dextrously that the enemy is never really certain (until too late) of the limits of strength or weakness in the hand is true strategy. It is easy to maneuver against the player who wears his bridge hand on his sleeve; he always and quite naively tells about the strength or weakness of his hand sufficiently in advance to help one to duck in time or to move ahead without fear of trouble. That is why in the Culbertson system, whenever possible, a bid is based on a two-way principle: not to tip off the enemy unnecessarily about the real strength or the real weakness of the hand. An opening suit bid of one, for instance, is a typical two-way bid: it may conceal tremendous strength while it tells partner just enough to keep him afloat.

The only good pure shut-out is a very high one, say an opening suit bid of four. A shut-out bid at the level of three, except possibly three spades, really shuts out nothing, and because everybody around the table knows that such a three-bid means extreme weakness, it often acts as a boomerang: it will inspire the most conservative of players to unexpected heights of bidding. As a result, the pure shut-out of three has become a "lazy" bid, uselessly occupying in the opening hand one of the most vital and important bidding levels in bridge.

If, as I have stated, the new two-way bid leaves the partner as well as the opponents in doubt as to the strength or weakness showing implication, the natural and extremely pertinent question that every player will ask is, "How can he tell which is which?" The answer is that he cannot tell until the nexe round of bidding, which is, of course, the crux of the situation and which will be fully discussed.

● POKER PLAYERS KNOW the value of "advertising"—that is, presenting the other players with a chart of your poker personality and tendencies which is quite different from the true chart. The same psychology pays good dividends at contract. I, for instance, am known to my adversaries as a player who dislikes psychic bids and plays. All I need to do is permit that impression (which is largely true) to sink in, and the stage is then set for a "double cross."

In the following deal I was fortunate enough to rescue a hopeless [illegible] against an expert who knew that I dislike the promiscuous use of psychic tactics.

	♠A Q 8 7 ♥7 6 5 ♦7 4 3 ♣K 6 3
♠9 3 2 ♥J 2 ♦A Q 10 9 6 2 ♣4 2	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠J 10 6 5 ♥K 10 4 3 ♦8 ♣J 10 9 8
	♠K 4 ♥A Q 9 8 ♦K J 5 ♣A Q 7 5

The bidding (both sides vulnerable):

South	West	North	East
1 heart	Pass	1 spade	Pass
2 N T	Pass	3 N T (final bid)

I held the West cards and selected the deuce of diamonds as my opening lead. Obviously, declarer could have made nine tricks by simply finessing against the king of hearts. But not knowing who held this important card, after trying to "break" the club and spade suits, he decided to throw me on lead so that after I should have taken my "three" good diamonds and possible spade trick, I would be forced to lead up to his heart tenace. Of course, he was not naive enough to feel safe against a possibly "phony" lead, but in this case my deceptive mechanism had had a spring within a spring.

I knew I could not fool him by merely leading a deuce, but I expected him to reason that if I held the 10-9 with the A-Q, I would certainly open the ten or the nine.

Of course, he was not very pleased when I ran off not three but five good diamonds!

● QUESTION: Dealer bid four spades. Next player (my partner) bid four no trump. What should I do with this hand:

♠A 6 5 ♥8 6 4 3 ♦7 4 3 2 ♣J 9?

ANSWER: Bid five hearts. Even though you hold the ace of spades, your partner's four no trump bid was an absolute demand that you name a suit.

QUESTION: Dealer bid one no trump. My partner doubled. Next hand passed, and I held:

♠K J 7 ♥A 10 8 ♦Q 10 9 ♣9 8 7 6.

What should I bid?

ANSWER: Pass for penalties.

Looking Ahead

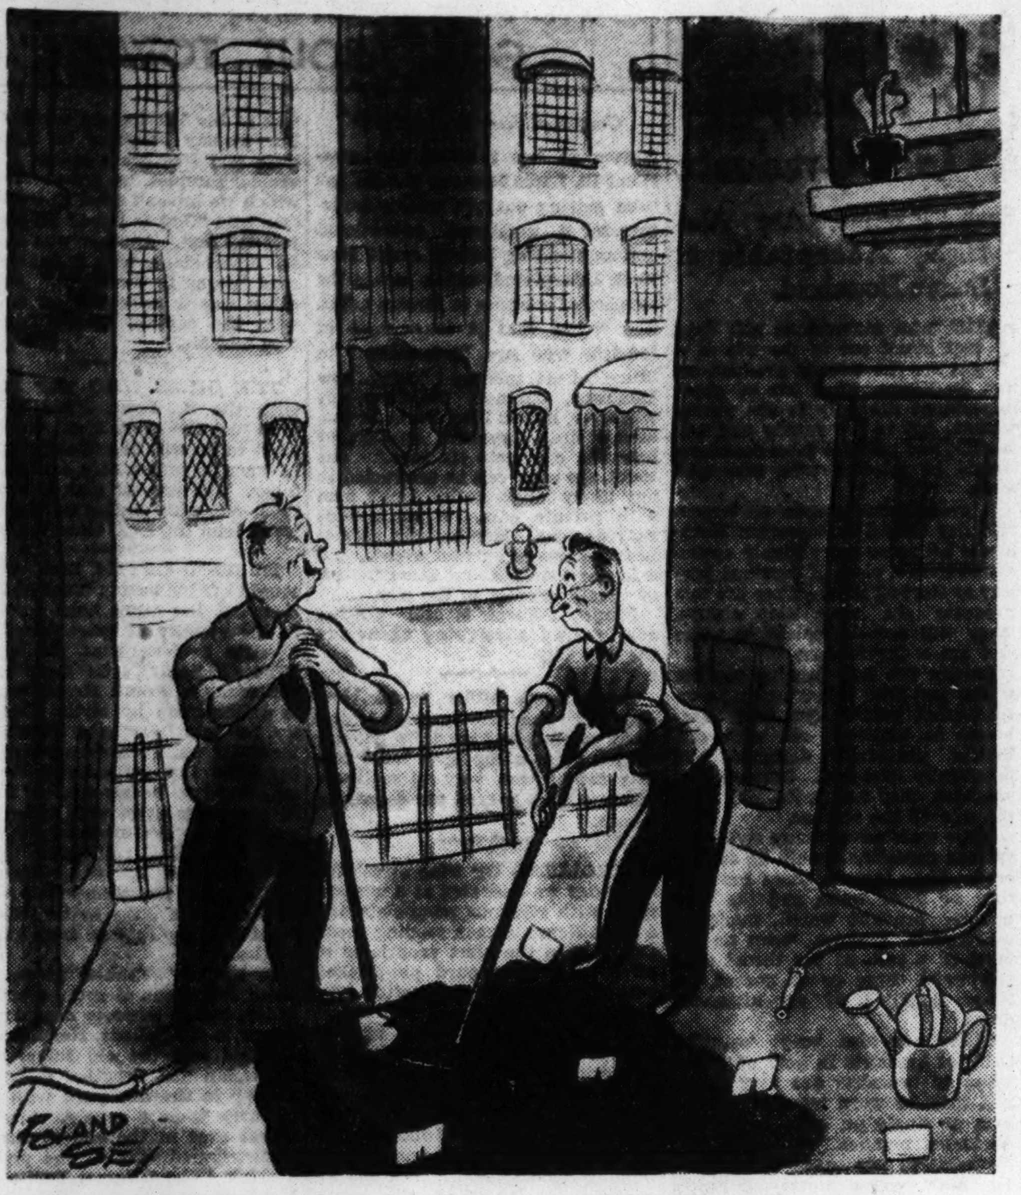
If you are one of those fashion followers who like to look ahead to new trends, remember that 1937 is Coronation year in England and that coronation colors will be all the rage in America as well as the British Isles.

There will be a variety of blues and reds in the color charts as a tribute to Great Britain while all of the regal tones associated with pomp and ceremony will be included. Look, likewise, for certain jewel shades because there are the jewels in the King's crown to consider and the apparel manufacturers aren't going to overlook any possibilities to vary the fashion picture.

Inexpensive wastepaper baskets (purchased in the five-and-ten cent store) can be made to look attractive if you cover them with wallpaper, gingham, chintz or silk. It is easy to paste any of these materials on a round, or oval basket.

IN THE BIG VILLAGE

By Roland Coe



"Shall we divvy up the crop as we did LAST year?"

KING HARRY LEHR

too old-fashioned and dignified to countenance balls and cotillons. Mrs. Jacobs had formerly been the wife of Robert W. Garrett, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, who for many years before his death suffered from a disease of the brain which gave him a curious delusion. He was convinced that he was the Prince of Wales. From having been a hard-headed business man he lived in a world of make-believe. To everyone's astonishment, his wife encouraged him, indulged his fancies. Her friends remonstrated. . . . "The man's crazy. You should have him put into an institution where they would look after him. . . ." She refused.

"My husband has worked hard all his life to earn his large fortune. He shall enjoy it in the way he wants. Why should I not spend it in giving him pleasure?"

So thousands of dollars were spent in maintaining him in his role. Their house in Green Spring Valley was transformed into a miniature court of England. A whole staff of actors was hired to impersonate gentlemen-in-waiting, court officials, Cabinet Ministers and Ambassadors from other countries, and an expert was brought over from London to insure that each of the costumes was correct. Robert Garrett was given copies of every order worn by the Prince of Wales; he had the uniform of the principal regiments of every country, so that he should greet each of his visiting Ambassadors correctly attired. Every day his wife would come to him as the Princess of Wales, go through hours of tragic farce in order that he might keep his cherished illusion.

Harry Lehr used to tell me of how he had once gone to visit Robert Garrett at his Baltimore house in Mount Vernon place and found him dressed in full regalia of British Field Marshal's uniform, while half a dozen orders glittered upon his breast.

Harry rose to the occasion by having himself announced as the "Crown Prince of Germany" and delighted the poor old gentleman by talking broken English interspersed with German throughout the afternoon.

MR. JAMES VAN ALEN, handsome and elegant, was Newport's most eligible widower. A lover of all things English, he called his house on Ochre Point "Wakehurst" and had it designed to look as much like an Elizabethan manor as possible. On his visits to England he rummaged among the antique shops of Chelsea and Bloomsbury, toured through villages off the beaten track in Devon and Warwickshire in search of "period furniture" to add to his collection. His English tapestries were famous, his hall bristled with oak settles and dower chests, grandfather clocks and pewter tankards; every bedroom had its copper warming pan, its Hogarth engravings. He even carried his predilection for the Tudor period into his vocabulary, and his conversation was so flavored with . . . "Egad . . . Zounds . . . and prithee" that one almost needed a special old English dictionary to talk to him. The very highest praise he could bestow on any favoured lady was, "A most delectable wench, forsooth . . ." while an impertinent railroad car attendant would draw forth an indignant, "Yon varlet insults us! . . ."

Coaching was an old English sport, so nothing pleased him better than to be regarded as an authority on it. His turn-outs were always perfection, every detail correct to the last shining button on his groom's liveries. He was such a stickler for the traditions that he maintained to the members of the Coaching Club that no guard in the United States could wind an authentic coaching blast and brought over a man from England at enormous cost for the express purpose of teaching them how it should be done. Unfortunately the newspapers got hold of the story and published sarcastic comments, with the result that the star performer on the horn was interned on Ellis Island the moment he arrived, and it was some time before he was permitted to land.

THE household at "Wakehurst" ran on oiled wheels; its hospitality was famous, for James Van Alen was a connoisseur of good food and good wines. His musicales were wonderful, for although he knew nothing of music, he acted on his usual principle, engaged the greatest artists, paid the highest fees. During Yacht-week he invited the whole of fashionable Newport to one of them, given in honor of Pierpont Morgan. I received my invitation . . . it did not include Harry Lehr. Crestfallen he rushed off to consult Mrs. Fish. What could have happened? Mrs. Fish was equally chagrined. Stuyvesant had been invited . . . but without her. She tackled Mr. Van Alen on the beach. Adjusting the monocle he wore with such lazy grace, he regarded her with Elizabethan gallantry. . . . "Very sorry, my dear. . . . Upon my word very sorry, but I can't have you and Harry Lehr at this party of mine. You make too much noise. . . "

"Oh, so that's it! Well, let me tell you, sweet pet" (her invariable expression when she intended to say something nasty) "that unless we are asked there won't be any party Harry and I will tell everyone that your cook has developed smallpox, and we will give a rival musicale. You will see they will all come to it!" . . ."

Sooner than rouse the enmity of one of Newport's most powerful hostesses he gave in. "The two disturbing elements" (as Mrs. Fish called them) were allowed to come to the dinner provided they promised to stay on the terrace during the music.

The gypsy type of bag made from a bandanna kerchief and knotted to form a handle is the slickest sort of accessory for the beach. It appears in a variety of color schemes and several different sizes. The type which has a waterproofed lining is the most practical for carrying wet bathing togs. Smallest versions are intended largely as cosmetic kits, some being fitted with the essentials of keeping beautiful under the summer sun.

Great Wisdom In Forgetting Past Mistakes

Transgressions May Be Used as Stepping Stones to Larger Living.

By Elsie Robinson

MADE a fool of yourself? Run amuck—wallowing in jealousy, greed, hate—some other swinish weakness? Maybe just been so yellow that you can't face braver humans again?

And now, of course, you're sorry—frantic.

Don't be! There's nothing unique in your situation, stranger. It happens in every hot-blooded, growing life. Regrettable? That depends on how you handle it. If, having made a mistake, you wallow in its memory ever after, it's certainly a tragedy. But if you use it as a stepping stone to larger living, that's something else.

All of which was said more than 2000 years ago, incomparably better than I can ever say it. The man who said it was a wise and powerful king—but that hadn't kept him from being both fool and knave on certain occasions. After one of those occasions he wrote a prayer. That prayer will stand forever, as the cry of every remorseful human heart reaching toward the Goodness it has betrayed. Even if you never read another word of the Bible, read King David's 51st Psalm.

—o-o—

"HAVE mercy upon me, O, God . . . blot out my transgressions. Wash me thoroughly from mine iniquity and cleanse me from my sin.

"For I acknowledge my transgressions; and my sin is ever before me.

"Against Thee, Thee only, have I sinned, and done this evil in Thy sight . . .

"Behold, thou desirest truth in the inward parts: And in the hidden part thou shalt make me know wisdom . . .

"Purge me with hyssop and I shall be clean: wash me and I shall be whiter than snow.

"Make me to hear joy and gladness: that the bones which Thou hast broken may rejoice.

"Hide Thy face from my sins and blot out mine iniquities.

"Create in me a clean heart, O, God: and renew a right spirit within me.

"Cast me not away from Thy presence; and take not Thy holy spirit from me. Restore into me the joy of Thy salvation; and uphold me with Thy free spirit.

"Deliver me . . . and my tongue shall sing . . .

"For Thou desirest no sacrifice; else would I give it . . . .

"THE SACRIFICES OF GOD ARE A BROKEN SPIRIT: A BROKEN AND A CONTRITE HEART, O, GOD, THOU WILT NO DESPISE."

—o-o—

A FEW short verses — yet in them there is all that any man need know of sin and its healing. He had sinned swinishly, had great King David—but he was not going to poison or prolong that sin by morbid wallowing. Clearly he saw the truth about sin—the everlasting truth.

We sin. In our ignorance and weakness we sin. And our sin against the god in ourselves is greater than our sin against any other mortal.

But sin cannot be healed by brooding. We must face it—clearly. We must regret it—wholly. We must bear the pain of its consequences till the very bones seem broken within us. We must ask for a clean heart—a new spirit. Then, having received them, we must be willing to use them.

WE MUST BE WILLING TO FORGET OUR SIN . . . BE WILLING TO BE GLAD AND NEW AGAIN . . . BE WILLING TO GO ON AGAIN WITHOUT A BACKWARD LOOK.

For it's as wicked to linger over a sin as it is to commit it in the first place. It's as vicious to brood over an old sin as it is to commit a dozen new ones.

There's only one way to make up for being a fool—

IF YOU'RE REALLY SORRY, GET GOING!

Novel Hat Styles

Every summer there is some novel hat style which takes the town by storm and prompts all of the girls to have a supply in their wardrobes. At present it looks as if the sailors' beret will be the pet of the season. It is a youthful type which looks especially well with both active and spectator sports clothes. When worn with the drape at the back so that the front stands up in halo fashion, a wind-blown effect is achieved. Shops have these berets in various materials, but pique seems to be the favorite. The white hats are banded with navy blue while the colored ones are variously trimmed in many introducing tricolor themes.

Kerosene oil will remove those spots on bathtub and basin, which resist other cleaning methods. Dip a damp cloth in a little kerosene and the dirt will disappear with little effort.

Compacts

Since the vogue of the moment is to make any style article look like something entirely different, the designers of compacts have fallen in line and produced some fabric novelties. Although made of metal and finished with enamel these compacts resemble squares of cotton fabrics. There is a nosegay design on white and pastel backgrounds that looks lovely with dainty summer frocks as well as an alphabet print in a gingham check for sports frocks. The alphabet theme is credited to Schiaparelli.

The Correct Care of Feet Is Important

Children Advised Always to Wear Shoes That Are Comfortable.

By Angelo Patri

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS: Take care of your feet. They must carry you far for many a day and year. They must bear you up in fair weather and foul, over rough places and smooth. They are the only pair of feet you can ever have, so take care of them as you would your right hand and your eyes.

Wash them and dry them carefully. Give the in-between places a gentle swishing with warm, soapy water, rinse them free of soap, dry them gently. Now powder them a little to make them cool and comfortable. Attend to the nails. Keep them short enough to protect the toes and still not get in the way of stocking and shoe.

Give your feet a daily airing. After a bath they like to feel the air flowing over them. They like to feel the soft grass under them, too. If it is possible to exercise them on soft grass so much the better. If not, then air them in your own bedroom by allowing them to stay uncovered for a time.

Select your shoes to fit your feet. Don't buy a shoe because it looks well on your chum's feet. Your feet are your own, and they are built on individual lines. Maybe the stylish shoe does not fit your style of foot. If it does not, don't buy it, for no shoe looks so bad as the ill-fitting one. You have seen a girl tottering along on spike heels, her toes thrust into a tip that could not admit them, her instep bulging and swollen above the restricting line. An uglier sight cannot be imagined, but the poor child thinks her feet beautiful because the movie star, or the girl in the big house wears them gracefully.

A BEAUTIFUL FOOT is the free foot, the one that has the spring and the grace of youth in it. Select the shoe that allows free movement, that accents your own foot lines. Never mind the size, but make certain that it is the size that your foot requires. Ill-fitting shoes produce corns, bunions, ingrowing nails, all the ugly deformities to which mistreated feet are exposed.

When using a swimming pool be sure to wear your slippers to walk from the locker to the pool side. Neglect in this particular is likely to bring on an infection which is very unpleasant. Use your own towels and never lend them to anyone else. The same rule applies to slippers.

Wear shoes appropriate to the occasion. Keep your dancing slippers for dancing, your walking shoes for hiking. Wear well-fitted, comfortable shoes through the day. Give your patient feet their bit of care every evening. Your health will be benefited, your vision helped, your personal feeling of wellbeing greatly accented. After all, you travel on your feet. You need them if you are to get where you are going and that means anywhere from where you are to "fairy worlds unknown."

Cordially yours,
ANGELO PATRI.

FACING the FACTS

By Helen Jameson

SHORT hair, long hair, all around the town! Put your ear to the ground and you may hear mutterings to the effect that the prehistoric pigtail is to be with us again. That is, the home-grown product. The detachable braid has been gracing women's heads for some time now, hasn't lost out. With ridiculous small flat hats smacked over one eye, braids are filling out head space at the back. They go across from ear to ear, then they come back again. Curls may frolic with them, fluttering from beneath the braid or popping out above it—one has to do something with them. Or, if the hair is long enough to pin up, the coronet conceals the nape fringe.

Everything goes, apparently. Pictures of society belles show shorn thatches, shoulder-length bobs, hair brushed upward to burst into curls. Puffs are going strong and they're nice for the tailored type who doesn't get along well with naive ringlets.

Movie beauties are going in heavily for the personality hairdress, which means one with a special quirk, like slanting partings, little braids that are looped and stand up, beau catchers in the right places.

Although this is not the season for hair growing, some girls are putting their minds on it in a big way.

—o-o—

IN DIRECT opposition to the contingent that is eager to grow Godiva lengths again, there are those who are shearing shoulder length bobs. Go into any beauty shop and you'll wade through an underbrush of hair that has been scissored away from feminine heads. The reason is the season. In the winter time it is easy enough—with the help of the permanent wave—to keep ringlets in fair form. Not so in the silly season. Now it is time to flirt with Al Fresco, to play tennis and golf, to swim, to tear along sunlit roads in a motor car with locks flying. Hair must be washed and waved often. It takes less time when locks are shortened, the wave consisting of nothing more than a few fluid undulations across the crown and back of the head, a few rosebud curls at the sides.

The fact is that the dear girls like a change. They grow hair and they cut it again, all of which is a pleasantly exciting diversion.

—o-o—

BANGS ARE stepping along. Often they impart a quaint, naive effect, make a young face look flower-like. They are particularly pretty with cart-wheel hats, wide of brim, flat of crown, trimmed gayly with flowers. The setting lotion and finger-wave keep them in fine form from one shampoo to the next. They aid and abet the sleeked back coiffure, the side or middle part, and they have a friendly feeling for the fashions of the day.

The oldsters among us can't remember a time when coiffures were so varied. In the past they have been pretty well standardized. Now anything goes that is becoming and has flair.

Date Recipes

WHEN MAKING up your menus, have a date with dates. For dates are as good to eat as they are good to take, and the same cannot be said for every food.

The staff of life to the Arabs, the luscious date is fast becoming a main prop with us. Many housewives discover for themselves the virtues of dates during Lent and make up their minds to serve them the year round. Dates are especially good in the spring, for they have qualities that make them a natural tonic. They contain vitamins A and B, plenty of calcium for the teeth and bones and iron for red corpuscles, as well as having a mildly laxative effect. After this glowing recommendation, we feel that the best we can do is to offer new date recipes, all of which are well worth trying.

Serve a date custard and watch the family scoop it up. Put six eggs in top of double boiler and add one pound of chopped dates; cook for 20 minutes, stirring occasionally. Rub the date mixture through a sieve; add six eggs, beaten; one and a half teaspoons salt, eighth of a teaspoon cinnamon and same amount nutmeg. Mix well. Place in custard cups and set in pan of hot water. Bake in moderately slow oven until a silver knife inserted comes out clean. It serves eight to 10.

For date loaf, sift one cup sugar, one cup flour, two teaspoons baking powder and quarter teaspoon salt together. Beat four egg whites until stiff and the egg yolks until light and lemon colored. Combine and add to dry ingredients. Add one pound English walnut meats, one pound dates and one teaspoon vanilla and mix thoroughly. Place in two loaf pans which have been lined with heavy wax paper and bake in slow oven (300 degrees Fahrenheit) for 45 minutes.

given by a peasant scarf folded over her head and tied under her chin and instead of shoes she had on a pair of beaded Indian moccasins. It was an entirely different Marie from the one I had seen the night before dancing at the Cocoanut Grove. Then she wore a blue cotton print evening frock with a greatly exaggerated white pique collar which extended well beyond her slender shoulders. There was a cluster of tiny flowers tucked in at the V neckline.

DOLORES COSTELLO is partial to lace frocks for dancing and Travis Blanton has designed one for her in which she looked quite ravishing when I saw her at the Biltmore Bowl at a gay dinner party. It was of a delicate shade of flesh color and the pattern in the lace was outlined in glistening cellophane. The low decolletage was supported by exceedingly narrow straps of the same flesh color and a narrow belt of the same shade encircled the waist and was clasped by a rhinestone buckle. A pleasing color contrast was effected by the addition of a sheer cape of turquoise blue chiffon which tied softly about her shoulders. At another table was the always perfectly groomed Norma Shearer dining with husband Irving Thalberg. Norma's exquisitely man-tailored hip-length suit was of the new "Yucca Blossom" shade gabardine and the accompanying blouse was fashioned from silk bandanas in delphinium blue. A white hat, banded in blue, and sandals of white charmoose kid trimmed in the same blue, completed the attractive costume.

BETTY FURNESS came into the Trocadero with Bernard Newman, one of Hollywood's well known designers, a few nights ago and on removing her wrap she unpinned a spray of flowers from it and was in a quandry as just where to place it upon her gown. Newman solved it by pinning them firmly to her wide but short puffed sleeve.

—o-o—

● NOW THAT SKIRTS are going up and up (sixteen inches from the floor is the proper shortness now, say this studio experts), shoes and stockings are taking on a new importance, with accent first of all on daintiness. So that's why, maybe, that it happened we saw no less than three new tricks for taking care of shoes, during the week just past. First is a new kind of shoeholder, a sack made of cellophane. Transparent and durable, they're flat-iron shaped, come by the dozen, and to use them, you just insert the shoe, give the wide end a twist like a paper bag, and shove it out of sight behind your dresses on the closet floor. The big advantage is of course, the cellophane scuffing of one shoe against another, and when you come to get them out again, there isn't any dust.

And then Rosalind Marquis, who is blessed with a big, well-lighted closet, has a shoe-rack made of three tiers of wire, with a brace behind to hold it up. Standing three or four feet high, it holds all the shoes even a movie girl could own, and eliminates all stooping down and hunting in the dark. Best of all, however, we liked the trick Carol Hughes thought up herself, a real boon to the apartment house dweller who has small closets, and don't we all? Carol goes to the dime store and buys curtain rods—the flat kind, not the round ones, she points out—and screws them to the insides of her closet doors. Then she hangs her shoes up by the heels, thereby keeping them off the floor, saving a lot of space, and making them much easier to select than if they were put away, in boxes or in bags.

MADGE EVANS is sporting a very dashing full length sport coat made of green gazelle which was brought to her by an aunt who is visiting her from England. There was also a hat which came with it "but the less said about that the better," said Madge. She left me totally in the dark. Possibly it was a genuine "Queen Mary" model.

A vacation in Yosemite was suddenly treminated for Madge when she was recalled to become Robert Montgomery's leading woman in "Piccadilly Jim," to be launched this coming week. Miss Evans was vacationing with her mother when the studio summons reached her, calling her back to start tango rehearsals with Montgomery for their roles. The picture will mark their first appearance together since "Lovers Courageous," three years ago.

—o-o—

ONE DRAWER in Barbara Pepper's dressing table is filled with large bright colored handkerchiefs of both silk and linen, with the squares forming quite an indispensable part of the blonde player's sports wardrobe for summer. Whenever she goes out in the sun, whether it be at the beach, on the tennis court, or the golf links, Barbara ties one of these kerchiefs around her head in one of several ways. She also uses one for active sports to keep her comb, hankie, compact, lipstick, etc. in instead of carrying a purse. She dumps all of her articles in the middle of the square and then knots it up. She even uses these squares to tie around her waist instead of a belt.

KETTI GALLIAN is busy shopping for a wardrobe which will look well with her new car. Pale cream color with a yellowish cast on a sporty, low slung convertible roadster with a band of chromium and a light green monogram — that's Ketti's new toy.

So, true to the Travis Banton theory that the really chic woman plans her clothes with a definite idea about how they'll "go with" the background against which she is most apt to wear them, Ketti is gathering pale yellow blouses, sweaters and scarfs to wear with natural linen.

I don't know whether the whole world has become too cynical to see the point in a cute idea I picked up the other day out here in Hollywood. In spite of any rumors to the contrary, there are a lot of adoring young couples who "go steady," as we used to call it. And for those couples there's a new fad which I don't think ought to be neglected by similar couples throughout the country. Eleanor Whitney and Louis da Pron, who met first in the cast of a picture, are running around together now dressed almost exactly alike. Summer sports outfit, with matching accessories and everything. Eleanore wears a navy gabardine skirt, very short and with an inverted pleat in center front and back, a navy crepe shirt made along mannish lines and a white silk man's tie and over it a tailored sports jacket of white silk linen. Her shoes are navy and white and her hat a white panama with a navy band. Louis' costume is exactly like Eleanore's. Trousers of navy gabardine which matches her skirt, navy shirt with a white tie, white silk linen jacket, panama, white shoes with navy saddles. Everything in his outfit matches that in hers. And if you don't think those two have a set a "catch-like-wildfire-fad"—come right out to Hollywood and see how the younger set has gone for it.

WHEN ANNA STEN, Russian motion picture star, arrived in Hollywood the first time, it was mid a veritable storm of glamour, publicity, conjecture, photographers and Russian wolfhounds. It was over a year before Miss Sten began her first American picture. And she returned to Europe soon after. Too much temperament it was rumored. She will be here again soon. This time Miss Sten will arrive quietly with her husband, Dr. Eugene Frenke, at a time and place removed as far as possible from knowledge of the press. And this time, Miss Sten and Dr. Frenke will begin work immediately in production of "The Witch," the star's new vehicle, which will be filmed in Hollywood instead of England, as originally planned.

SAW MARY LIVINGSTONE, who is Mrs. Jack Benny, going into a hat shop to ask if some deep crowned panamas in the window were going to be in style out here in Hollywood. She was told "No." The place just caters to women who haven't been able to adjust themselves, and their hair cuts, to the new fangled shallow pancakes.

Keep a package of heavy paper napkins in your bathroom—and use for cleaning the mirror, when you give the room its daily cleaning.

Sterling Silver Or Jewelry to Girl Graduate

Such Presents Are Also Highly Acceptable in Bride's Household.

THE most momentous gift days that stand out in the life of a girl are the current graduations and weddings. They are of great importance not only to the young woman, but to her family and her friends, and gifts for these occasions should be selected with care and taste.

A present that marks an important day should be important. Nothing is better or more highly appreciated than a piece of precious jewelry or sterling silver. They are two presents she may keep always. They will not depreciate in value and are a joy forever.

Among the new jewelry for the young girl who is beginning to go to formal parties are hair ornaments in platinum set with diamonds, gracefully designed and beautifully executed. Delicate and youthful, they are in keeping with the age of the wearer.

Little watches in many styles for various occasions should be considered. They include those for daytime or dress wear, and the very popular pendant watch, made by well-known makers, worn on the lapel of a suit, at the throat of a shirtwaist dress or to accent the lower neckline of an afternoon dress.

There are also very beautiful pairs of bracelets in gold or silver. Pairs of bracelets are very smart and may be worn together on one arm or singly on both, in the old Victorian manner.

Necklaces are again being worn by smart young women. First in choice for the graduate or the bride are pearls. Very good-looking and chic are the handsome gold and silver heavy necklaces, for other occasions, many in the new copper gold types, some set with semi-precious stones, others worked in the modern manner in modern design.

RINGS ARE MANNISH and massive for daytime wear and are set with precious and semi-precious stones. If the girl belongs to a family with a coat of arms, the crest may be carved in the stone, making a distinguished and unusual gift. The crest ring is, as well, a handsome gift for a young man, who, after all, may also have a graduation present.

The young lady of 1936 has stolen the articles of wearing apparel of her brother, lock, stock and barrel. She will accept with great pleasure a set of shirt buttons, studs and cuff links. She will wear a tie pin, and pearl hatpins are new and very decorative. The young lady will wear a monogrammed belt with her mannish suit. A fob watch will be much to her liking and a wrist watch in leather like her brother's will be quite the thing for active sports.

In the evening, her slippers will go ultra feminine with brilliant buckles, another welcome gift. She will be able to use silver toilet articles, and a set of beautiful sterling silver spoons will be just right for her hope chest.

powers at one time on the now-silent St. Louis Review. Laura has been getting out the weekly bulletins for a combined educational and sight-seeing bureau called New York Interpreted, which serves the purpose of couriers in foreign cities. She writes that it takes care of tourists who are "interested in liturgical art, modern housing, how Mexicans, Chinese, Russians or whatever, live in New York, in theatrical life, Japanese scrolls, or how the city gets its food." The tours, she says, can be conducted in any likely language by young men with private cars. It all sounds very de luxe. Her bulletin carries brief notices of current events, and a longer article about some matter of timely interest in the city.

STROLLING UP Pine street the other day we hesitated at a window filled with religious pamphlets and a large Negro woman reading them. Out popped the alert proprietor to offer us, free, a card pin-pricked with a Sunday School motto. The "come-on" lured us in. Mr. Eilers—that was his name—told us that he had already invented 16 different designs for the 5-by-7 cards, which were punched so that children could work them with left-over yarn. It sounded like a high-powered promotion scheme for any Sunday School. Mr. Eilers has already sold 150,000 of the cards to churches and hoped to boost the sales to a million when he gets the rest of his 100 designs worked out. For display purposes he pays a little girl five cents apiece to embroider samples. He gave us several which we haven't tried to work yet. One said "God Is Love," no picture, just the text. Another was marked for embroidery, with a candle and read "Jesus Is the Light." On another was a cross set on a slope with the caption "Jesus Died for You and Me."

THE GIRLS WHO play hockey with the St. Louis Field Hockey Club met the other night to decide what to do with the Welsh team of 14 when it comes here early in October. The present plan is to wear them out with parties so that they won't trim the local team too badly.

IT ISN'T OFTEN that we get caught off the beaten track at lunch time but the other noon found us in the vicinity of Allen street and Twelfth boulevard, at the sign of "The Original Turtle Soup Man." His name is Frank Hrebec and he is a Bohemian by birth. Ordinarily he just serves a merchant's lunch—it was corned beef and cabbage the day we were there—but on Saturdays he gives away a bowl of his turtle soup with every ten-cent drink. It's made of the meat of hard-shelled, salt-water turtles, finely ground up with vegetables and spices. Customers help themselves from a large kettle which is constantly replenished from smaller kettles.

In winter "Frankie" gives away about 35 gallons of soup, every Saturday, but in summer consumption jumps to 100 gallons. Neighborhood children and the old folks—it's a Bohemian and Croatian district — line up in the backyard with pails to carry home a supply. Any that is left over at the end of the day is distributed without the price of a drink. "The Original Turtle Soup Man" was really Frankie's father, who started the idea more than 10 years ago.

"Punch Drunk" Injury Is Not In Ring Alone

May Occur to Anyone Who Receives Severe Blow on Head.

By
Logan Clendening, M. D.

IN THE WORLD of fistiana, every boxer knows of a few old habitues of the ring who are what is known as "punch drunk," or "slug nutty" or "slap happy." They are described as "cutting paper dolls."

Punch drunk is an occupational disease. The victims have very marked personality changes which date from a tough fight when they got too many blows on the head and jaw. Their fighting stamina is gone; they are no good on the defensive and are unable to land a telling blow. They collapse under mild punishment. The personality changes are extreme. They are likely to go into a reverie, ask the same question over and over, develop glassy eyes, and sometimes an impediment in the speech.

Formerly it was generally supposed that these symptoms were due to the development of a streak of yellow, but that idea has been given up. The condition develops so regularly in those who stay in the ring indefinitely that it is considered that small hemorrhages occur throughout the brain, affecting the cells.

The condition is not confined to boxers, and may occur in football players or to anyone who receives a severe blow on the head. The condition commonly called "concussion" is now presumed to have the same anatomical changes in brain as a basis.

British Conservative Shocked By the Crime of Poverty Amidst Plenty, He Tells Associates

'Ashamed of Country, Government and Party That Such Condition Should Be Allowed to Exist.

(From the Manchester Guardian. Reprinted by permission of the Baltimore Sun. Reproduction prohibited).

SIR BENJAMIN DAWSON, chairman of the Bradford Central Division Conservative Association, a textile manufacturer, in a speech at the annual meeting of the association recently at Bradford, England, said:

"I have been in most countries in Europe, including Russia, both before and since the war. I have also been in America, and I can most definitely say that no country in the world has such a good government, such excellent social institutions, such a high standard of living, and such a great personal freedom as we enjoy in Great Britain. Most countries are a very long way behind us, and Russia is at the bottom of the scale. In comparison with foreigners (and I wish you to take particular note of this when I say in comparison with foreigners) we are well justified to be very proud and very boastful of our native land.

"The other day I saw the following advertisement in the Yorkshire Post:

"Coals for the poor and aged. In hundreds of homes visited by our Padre and sisters of the poor in the slums of Leeds there are little children and sick and aged people suffering from cold and hunger. We are very grateful to readers who help us to minister to the most needy of these, and further gifts in money, clothing, bedding, coals, etc., will be thankfully acknowledged."

Soup Kitchen 40 Years Ago.

"It took my mind back 40 years, when my father turned the sample-room at his mills in Bradford into a soup kitchen, where during the winter months I saw long queues of hungry people of all ages, a sight which will never be effaced from my memory.

"I thought we had such progress during the last 40 years that there was no need for such an advertisement so I decided to verify the conditions mentioned therein. I made an appointment with one of the staff of the society responsible for the advertisement, a society which is doing a wonderful work amongst the poor, and I spent half a day visiting numerous dwellings.

"When I had finished my tour, I felt thoroughly ashamed of my country, thoroughly ashamed of the National Government, and thoroughly ashamed of the Conservative party. The pigs on my farm are better housed and fed than some of the people I saw that day.

"How we, in this year of our Lord 1936, in this British civilization of which we are so proud and so boastful, can allow such abominable conditions to exist is incomprehensible.

"These conditions are to be seen in every large town in the country; in large districts known as 'distressed areas.' The Government definition of a distressed area is where 25 per cent of the men of 18 years and over are unemployed.

Cause and Cure of Poverty.

"We often hear the slogan 'poverty amidst plenty,' which is a true one, and some people try to find us by saying that this distress is caused by mal-distribution of goods. If you were living at the top of Mount Snowdon, with plenty of money to buy, there would be no difficulty in having whatever you wanted delivered to you. If the people in the distressed areas had the means to purchase, whatever they wanted would be distributed to them. The cause of these terrible conditions is poverty, and poverty arises from unemployment.

"There is a cure, and a simple one, but it is not applied because we in this country are steeped in greed and selfishness. We are not sufficiently interested in the distressed areas, in these poverty-stricken unemployed — unemployed through no fault of their own—to insist that the Government shall make these conditions impossible by legislation which will abolish unemployment for all time. We are all striving to get wealth. We are a nation of gold worshipers. The more money a man has, the more we admire, respect, or fear him. A banker will grovel before a wealthy man and kiss his feet, no matter how they are besmirched with the way he got his gold.

Wealth Defined.

"If people would only realize what wealth is we should make social progress in the land. My definition of wealth (and you can parse and analyze it as you like you cannot alter it) is this, "wealth is the accumulated com forts of our poorer brethren.'

"The time will come when gold will no longer be the god of the people, and when great personal wealth, if there be poverty in the land, will be considered a sure passage to eternal damnation.

"I suppose this greed and selfishness has always been with us. It was said that the abolition of slavery in America would damage the cotton industry. In the early days of the factory children of six years of age worked all the hours of daylight for four pence (about 8 cents) a week. The abolition of this child labor was objected to because it would interfere with trade. The same objection was raised when the factory hours were reduced to 12, to 10, to eight hours a day, but still trade has expanded beyond all expectations.

Favors Shorter Hours.

"I have told you that the cause of distressed areas is poverty, the cause of poverty is unemployment, and I now tell you the cause of unemployment is the introduction of labor-saving machinery, which is being continually installed in every trade.

"Don't think I object to machinery. We want all we can get, and the greatest possible encouragement must be given to inventors to produce it, because the main object of civilization is to be able to live in comfort with the minimum of labor. Therefore machinery must be the slave of man so that the hours of labor can be reduced and reduced as the years roll on.

"The cure of unemployment is to reduce the working hours so as to divide the available work among the workers. To keep up the standard of living there must be no reduction of wages. If wages were reduced not only would the standard of living be lower but the total wages paid would be no larger. But if the wages were not reduced with the shortened working week the standard of living would be maintained, the total wages paid would be greatly increased, say by three to four million pounds ($15,000,000 to $20,000,000) a week, which would be mostly spent on food and clothing, giving a great help to industry.

Rejected at Geneva.

"The Government has done nothing toward a permanent reduction of this distress; in fact, it has deliberately thrown cold water on a scheme which would eventually have borne fruit. I refer to the 40-hour week which was considered by 52 nations at Geneva. Each nation had three representatives — namely, Government, employer and worker. All the workers' representatives were in favor of the 40-hour week without reduced wages. The employers were against it, and most of the Governments were agreeable to the reduced hours under certain conditions. Two na-

THE FACTS as to UNEMPLOYMENT

Only Government Census Could Determine Exact Number

How Estimate Is Made

The unemployment problem, often confused by conflicting statements, may be reduced to a fairly simple set of facts by drawing on available Government data and other trustworthy sources.

1. Gainful workers, or employables (whether or not actually having jobs at the time), were enumerated in 1930 Federal census at —	48,830,000
2. Increase of employables due to additions to the population, as estimated by the American Federation of Labor, using Census Bureau and other data — — —	3,521,000
3. Total 1936 Employables —	52,351,000
4. At work, 1936, as estimated by American Federation of Labor, using employment indexes of Department of Labor established by wide-spread "sampling" of employers — — — — — — —	40,845,000
5. Number of Employables not having jobs, 1936 — — —	11,506,000
6. Owing to variations of definition of "unemployed" the A. F. of L. estimate is subject to the following possible deductions:
(a) Because of increased percentage of persons of working age who are in school—	500,000
(b) New persons earning living from agriculture, not listed as wage earners or farm hands — —	500,000
(c) Newly self-employed persons at miscellaneous work	2,000,000
Total deductions — — —	3,000,000
7. Seeming net irreducible minimum of unemployed —	8,506,000

It should be noted that many of the newly self-employed have only make-shift work, and the A. F. of L. prefers to consider them as unemployed.

A. F. of L. Works on Basis of 1930 Census and Percentages With Room for Errors of Million or Two.

By SAM J. SHELTON
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
WASHINGTON, June 6.

ANALYSIS of the methods by which published estimates of unemployment are derived shows there is substantial agreement that at the lowest the number of jobless in the United States today lies somewhere between 8,000,000 and 9,000,000, and that there is weighty evidence supporting higher figures, running up to 11,500,000.

Seeking the facts of this question of such vital importance to the country, this correspondent examined the methods of making unemployment surveys used by the principal authorities which sponsor published estimates. It is apparent that an accurate exact figure cannot be determined without a comprehensive Federal census of unemployment.

The American Federation of Labor in its latest monthly estimate gave unemployment for April as 11,506,000. This was a decrease of 676,000 from its March estimate of 12,182,000.

"Too Much Guess Work" for Corporation Board.

The National Industrial Conference Board, a research organization maintained in New York by large corporations, estimated there were 9,649,000 unemployed in March. This organization has since ceased making estimates, the reason being, as given to the writer at its New York office, that there is "too much guess work in it."

Unemployment figures are not issued by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the Department of Labor, a Governmental organization and the one organization best equipped to make a fair appraisal of the proportions of the problem. This bureau, however, compiles monthly index figures showing the relative changes in actual volume of employment in recent years.

The index figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics are used by the American Federation of Labor in preparing its unemployment estimates, and were so used by the National Industrial Conference Board while that organization was still making monthly surveys.

A recent independent survey by a newspaper, the New York Sun, which assailed the A. F. of L. figures, has been in turn challenged by President William Green of the Labor Federation, in a letter to the editor of that paper, as falling far short of truly reflecting the magnitude of the unemployment problem. Tables published by the Sun gave the impression that its survey showed total unemployment was between 3,000,000 and 3,500,000. The text accompanying the tables, however, made it clear that the survey was limited to occupational fields which in 1930 included less than 60 per cent of the gainful workers.

The principal occupational fields not included in this survey were agriculture, the professions, personal and domestic service, forestry and fishing, public service and a part of the clerical group. The conclusions of the survey, a representative of the newspaper explained to the writer, were not intended to apply except in the field actually represented in the survey, broadly described as "industry" —manufacturing and mechanical work, transportation and communication, mining and retail and wholesale trade. The newspaper, its representative said, insisted that the figures showed comparatively little unemployment in "industry," but it would not challenge an estimate of 8,000,000 jobless in all classifications as being too high.

The reader may wonder how in a country so large as the United States with its great diversity of industries and occupations it is possible to arrive at any degree of dependable "guess" as to the number of jobless at any particular time. The process is comparatively simple, but there is room in it for errors of such magnitude that in the absence of confirmation by an actual Federal census the resultant figures should hardly be expected to come within a million or two of accuracy.

A. F. of L. Resorts to Census Percentages and Labor Index.

We shall consider here the American Federation of Labor estimate as most typical in method. It should be noted, incidentally, that all estimates go back to the 1930 census for basic figures. In that census 48,830,000 "gainful workers" were enumerated. This was done by occupational classifications regardless of whether the individuals were at the time employed. It included all persons of the age of 10 or over who had occupations by which they ordinarily earned all or a part of their livelihood.

These 48,830,000 are called the "employables" as of that time, April, 1930. Account then is taken of the increase of employables in the succeeding five years due to swelling population. This net increase is estimated by the A. F. of L. (based in part on Census Bureau percentages) at nearly 4,000,000, and after minor adjustments are made a total of 52,351,468 is arrived at for "employables" at present.

The number "at work" is then calculated for various occupational classifications, principally by means of index figures compiled by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. For April, the A. F. of L. accounted for a total of 40,845,182 at work in all occupations. It subtracted the number at work from the number of employables as follows:

Gainful workers (employables) —	52,351,468
Total employed — — — — — — —	40,845,182
Number unemployed — — — — —	11,506,286

3,500,000 on Work Relief Counted as Unemployed.

It should be explained that in this calculation the A. F. of L. counted as unemployed approximately 3,500,000 persons engaged on "work relief" projects such as WPA, PWA and Civilian Conservation Corps. It is the accepted practice of other authorities making unemployment estimates to count such relief workers as unemployed, as they are not engaged in normal productive activities, and should be considered as job seekers.

Since Federal Government census figures and Bureau of Labor Statistics index figures are relied on principally in the A. F. of L. estimates, there can hardly be any quarrel with the mathematical validity of the calculations. As stated, the Bureau of Labor Statistics does not itself issue unemployment estimates, nor does it publicly question the accuracy of the A. F. of L. figures. A representative of the bureau discussed with the writer certain factors affecting employment which should be considered. These are:

An increase since 1929, more rapid than before, in the number of persons of working age who are in school. The view was stated that if prosperity had continued through this period the increase would have been still more rapid, and so was not due to the depression.

A substantial increase in the number of persons deriving their livelihood from agriculture who are not listed as wage earners or farm hands, and so are not taken into account by the ordinary methods of estimating.

The persons who have become "self-employed" in new fields, and probably would not go back to old occupations even if jobs were available. This class includes those operating road-side stands and those engaged in such occupations as house-to-house selling.

Industrial Board Gives Up Trying to Guess—Labor Bureau Appraisal Limited to Indexes.

Deduction of 3,000,000 From Federation Figures.

Taking these factors into consideration and finding no reason to question the mathematical validity of the A. F. of L. calculations, the writer was able to work out the following as probably representing the best available statistical summary of the unemployment situation:

A. F. of L. estimate of unemployed— — — — — — —	11,500,000
Deductions for factors here stated— — — — — — — — — —	3,000,000
Net minimum number of jobless— — — — — — — — — —	8,500,000

The deduction of 3,000,000 was arrived at in this way: For the increased school attendance, 500,000; for the increased number in agricultural pursuits not classed as wage earners or farm hands, 500,000; for the "self-employed," 2,000,000. While no authority can be cited for these figures, there is good reason to believe they are fairly well substantiated as outside figures and that any variation from them would be on the side of greater unemployment.

The A. F. of L. is not unaware of these factors. It takes the position, however, that the majority of those in the self-employed and farm pursuit groups really belong in other occupations at which they would be working if jobs were available, and that this "temporary" or make-shift employment does not remove them from the jobless class.

Conference Abandoned 1930 Census as Base.

It will be seen that the figure of 8,500,000 arrived at in the preceding calculation is about 1,000,000 less than the National Industrial Conference Board's March estimate of 9,649,000 unemployed. It is probable that as of the present the difference would be considerably less.

The Conference Board, while believing that its figures were dependable as any that could be derived on the basis of available information, was not satisfied, a spokesman informed the correspondent, to continue putting them out as its estimates. He explained that the basic figures (census of 1930) were too old to be safely relied on. "The farther we get from 1930, the less reliable are the basic figures," he said. He added that only a comprehensive Federal census of unemployment would adequately show the true situation.

The 1930 census, taken in April, also included a special census of the unemployed, showing about 3,000,000 in that class. The depression had not been under way long enough to have much effect, and the unemployment of April, 1930, did not greatly exceed that of the latter months of 1929. The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates the average unemployed in 1929 numbered 2,500,000, but the A. F. of L. uses a lower figure, 1,864,000.

How Newspaper Arrived at Partial Estimate.

One of the criticisms lodged by the A. F. of L. against the scanty survey on which the New York Sun estimated maximum unemployment in "industry" at 3,000,000 to 3,500,000 was that the newspaper's estimate took no account whatever of the unemployment which existed in 1929. Admitting to the correspondent that no account was taken of the 1929 unemployment, the newspaper's representative said the amount of it was not enough the affect the estimate.

The scope of the newspaper's survey was very narrow compared with the widespread "sampling" by which the Bureau of Labor Statistics procures the reports on which it bases its indexes of employment. In the manufacturing industries the bureau receives monthly reports from 50 per cent to almost 100 per cent of the units. In very

Smuggling Is Japan's New Trick To Shoulder Out Trade Rivals And Weaken Chinese Government

Lloyd George Discusses Russian, American and British Interests Involved in New Threat to World Peace.

By DAVID LLOYD GEORGE
Former Prime Minister of Great Britain.

By Special Cable.
LONDON, June 6.

NEVER since the war has the British Foreign Office been confronted with such a variety of complications in every part of the world.

The Abyssinian trouble is still unsolved. The Rhineland coup has not yet been dealt with. Austria is on the brink of revolution. Arabs are in revolt in Palestine.

Any one of these problems at a time is enough to demand all the courage and wisdom the Government can command. But the combination is bewildering.

And now comes news that China can stand Japanese aggression no longer and is bristling for war.

So long as the Chinese people confined their complaints to diplomatic protests and appeals, America, Russia and Britain could send in reply sympathetic notes promising to look into the matter. But if the Chinese, in their desperation at seeing some of their richest provinces annexed one after another by Japan, decide at last to fight, then somebody must take notice of what occurs.

Russia has been preparing feverishly for trouble in this quarter. If trouble approaches her eastern frontiers, she will certainly take a hand; and that hand will be a much heavier one than it was the last time she had a quarrel with Japan.

Stake of U. S., Britain.

But Tientsin and the Pacfic provinces in that area are now the concern of America and Britain.

Japan is gradually driving all British and Amerncan trade out of China. Her latest method of achieving this object is original, ingenious and effective.

She has organized a gang of smugglers to break down the customs barriers of Northern China. By these means she attains the aims of very far-reaching character.

She is gradually reducing the Government of China to a condition of financial bankruptcy. In the next place, she is able to pour her goods into China through the northern ports, free of duty, to compete with all other foreign goods which, passing mostly through the southern ports, are still compelled to pay heavy duties.

Loss of revenue is so considerable that at the present rate it will amount to $100,000,000 in 1936—that is almost one-third of the gross allocation for this year. This is a serious deficit for a Government which cannot depend on direct taxation because of the poverty of the population.

If this plot develops, Japan will capture practically the whole foreign trade of China in certain goods and, moreover, the central government of the whole country will be entirely at the mercy of the Japanese military junta.

These cheap smuggled goods are already filtering through by rail to the central and southern provinces. Shanghai merchants are beginning to feel the effects on their business.

Plot Openly Conducted.

The plot is conducted quite openly by Japanese firms under the protection of armed forces from Korea, who drove off all meddlesome customs officials.

If this process continues it will reduce the National Government at Nanking to impotence. Northern and Central China will then be at the mercy of Japan and the formidable Communist movement in the western provinces.

It is too often overlooked that 90,000,000 of the population of China are governed by Communist Soviets. Hitherto the Nanking armies have been quite unable to suppress the Communist rebels or even to prevent the rapid spread of the rebellion.

If Gen. Chiang Kai-shek is deprived of the means of paying his army, owing to the Japanese raid on customs revenues, the march of Communism will be irresistible.

These are the considerations that are impelling Cantonese leaders to demand war on Japan. Canton is the real capital of the Young China movement. It started there and the best fighting for Chinese independence has been done by the armies raised in that province.

The gallant fight put up against the Japanese expeditionary army at Shanghai by young Cantonese volunteers is fresh in our memories. It had much to do with relinquishment by Japan of her designs in Central China.

If the Cantonese fail to resuscitate the national spirit of their countrymen and to organize effective resistance to Japanese aggression, then what may be the consequences?

The vast population of China may be divided between Japan and a Communist republic.

That is the prospect which America may have to contemplate when she casts her eyes across the Pacific at a no distant date.

Sanctions Problem.

As for Abyssinia, there is every indication that the sanctionist Powers are meditating a skedaddle. They mean to accept defeat for their policy of sanctions and do what used to be called in the old days of the Irish controversy —"shake hands with murder."

There are rumors, which I fear are well founded, of a friendly arrangement with Italy which will not only acknowledge her annexation of Abyssinia, but will establish a naval pact with her on the Mediterranean.

Much depends on the attitude adopted by the new French Premier. Leon Blum is an untried man. He is opposed to the Italian venture in Abyssinia and he approved sanctions in principle, but he is also anxious not to quarrel with Italy and he has serious trouble at home to engage his attention.

Germany and Austria.

What about Germany? If Blum acquiesces in the occupation of the Rhineland and in the fortifications which the Germans are busily throwing up in the zone that was demilitarized by the Treaty of Versailles, then the conference proposed by Chancellor Hitler can meet without further delay and, after prolonged discussions, some arrangement can be patched up which will preserve the peace of Europe until another crisis comes to disturb it.

It may not be long before Austria provides a really dangerous dilemma. Naziism is growing in strength in that turbulent province. The Socialists in despair are flocking to its banners and men of the suppressed Heimwehr are also threatening to join.

If the Nazis succeed in overthrowing Chancellor Schuschnigg there will be a government in Austria which will be in full sympathy with Germany.

Premier Mussolini will then be face to face with the spectacle which has haunted his dreams—Germans on the Brenner pass.

If he moves his forces into Austria he will have to deal not only with Herr Hitler, but with the Yugoslavs, who cannot tolerate Italian occupation of territory on their northern frontiers.

The Italians and Serbs have an old bitter feud which may easily explode on the slightest provocation.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Virginia Democrat on the New Deal.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IN '32, we were so delighted with his charming voice, so convinced by his frank and manly acceptance of a platform which was agreeable to us, and which seemed to be the product of the best brains of his party, that we went enthusiastically to the polls. Enthusiasts easily become doubters; and we were soon startled by his refusal to confer with Mr. Hoover. However great the blunders of the latter, he must, in four years, have learned much which would be useful to his successor, which no one else could impart. Mr. Roosevelt appeared ungracious.

Confidence was further impaired when we heard who were to be his most trusted advisers. Not the men in whom we reposed trust, but a host of theorists who rapidly converted the entire country into a huge and expensive laboratory, which differed from a scientific laboratory in that a scientist always has a working hypothesis, while the President's advisers either had none or the impossible one that the more you spend the more you have.

Everyone admits that the President was in no way responsible for the deplorable conditions which confronted him, and that those conditions demanded the expenditure of unprecedented sums. But does anyone contend that those expenditures were not made with lavish and wasteful profusion?

What, then, appears to us the President's chief defect? The greatest of all philosophical historians has said: "In all history there is not a single instance of a man having supreme power, excellent intentions and mediocre ability who has not done more harm than good." That the President, with the aid of the most servile Congress which has yet existed, has had supreme power can hardly be denied; that his intentions have been excellent his worst enemies will concede; the way in which he has met the situation shows the extent of his abilities.

Great men, of the English speaking race, at least, have been characterized by that common sense which one great writer has epitomized as "that far-sighted and sure-footed judgment" which amounts almost to genius. Washington possessed this in a pre-eminent degree. Has the President ever shown what we, in our vernacular, call "horse sense"?

Has he not, on the contrary, been vainly seeking panaceas, and has he not as steadily sought to decrease confidence in long-established and successful usages? By his petulant, not to say childish, comment on the NRA decision, did he not attempt to ridicule the Supreme Court, the one of our co-ordinate branches of Government which has the least deserved, and, the least received, serious criticism?

Did he not urged Congress to pass the Guffey act without allowing doubts of its constitutionality to influence it, thus defying the Supreme Court? Has he not, in many speeches, incited the hatred of the poor for the rich, the appeal of the demagogue from immemorial time? Did he not at last warn us that it would be unsafe to trust the powers he asked to any hands but his?

"My Lord," said Pitt, "I can save the country, and I am the only man who can." Pitt may have saved his country, but between the British minister and the American President, there stretches a great gulf—Pitt was a statesman. "The man of working ability tempers his judgment by the opinion of others. The giddy or imaginative genius soars on its own wings, it may be to cleave its course to the sunlight, and be the wonder of after ages, but more often to fall like Icarus." So Writes Froude and we fear the President's wing will prove of wax.

Of the many promises made by Candidate Roosevelt—the promises to reduce expenses by at least 25 per cent, to enforce the merit system, etc., only one has been effectually carried out. The eighteen amendment has been repealed. How much credit does the President deserve for this blessing? His predecessor in the candidacy went down under a combination of hypocrites, fanatics and religious bigots, but he fell like Samson dragging down the pillars of the temple of prohibition with him. He induced the people to speak, and the voice of the people is the supreme law.

It is charged that the President's critics offer no alternative policy. His critics urge a return of the merit system, the minimizing of Federal expenditures, a cessation of the urge of every man and woman to carry to the Federal Treasury a demand for relief from every ill that flesh is heir to; above all that we crush what one of the President's Cabinet has called the most persistent and pernicious of all lobbies—that of the officers of the Government itself. Over other lobbies, bad as they are, the President has no control; but a few stern words, such as Grover Cleveland would have uttered, would have stopped the lobbying.

To what political party does the President belong? He is the titular head of the Democratic party; but, if he is a Democrat, to what party did Thomas Jefferson, Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson belong?

WILLIAM G. CHRISTIAN.
Gordonsville, Va.

PROMISE VS. PERFORMANCE.

Without exception, every aspirant for the Republican presidential nomination has put himself on record as in favor of a balanced budget, to be attained in large part by the reduction of Federal expenditures.

Soaring Government expenditures under the New Deal, raising the public debt from $20,937,000,000 on the day Mr. Roosevelt took office to $31,425,000,000 on April 30 this year, with an anticipated total of 34 billions at the end of the fiscal year, make economy one of the foremost issues of the coming campaign.

There is often, however, a wide gulf between promise and performance.

Senator Dickinson, frequently mentioned for the Republican nomination, yields to no one in the fervor of his attacks upon the New Deal failure to balance the budget, yet he voted for immediate payment of the bonus, thereby aiding in throwing the budget further out of balance to the tune of some two billion dollars.

Senator Borah, who favors balancing the budget through reduction of expenditures, also voted for immediate payment.

Col. Knox, bitter critic of New Deal spending, yielded to political expediency last November and came out for immediate payment, with the qualification that the money come from the work-relief fund.

In addition to these instances, the records reveal that many New Deal measures, involving huge outlays, received the affirmative votes of Senators who now, as presidential aspirants, are making economy promises.

Mr. Roosevelt, who turned out to be the greatest spender in history, was an apostle of economy as a candidate for the presidency. He took to his bosom the Democratic plank promising a 25 per cent reduction in Federal expenditures.

Mr. Hoover found himself on the defensive in this connection. What with falling revenues and rising expenditures, Mr. Hoover enjoyed his last surplus in the fiscal year 1930. The following year, his administration rolled up a deficit of $902,000,000. In 1932, the Government was in the red by $3,148,000,000. The public debt grew in the Hoover administration from its lowest post-war point of $16,026,000,000 on Dec. 31, 1930, to $20,937,000,000 when Mr. Hoover left office, or by nearly five billion dollars.

In his Pittsburgh speech (Oct. 19, 1932), Mr. Roosevelt described reduction in Federal spending as one of the most important issues of the campaign, saying: "In my opinion, it is the most direct and effective contribution that government can make to business." How one of the first steps of the Roosevelt administration was to make good the platform plank by passage of the National Economy Act; how the act was sabotaged by powerful pressure of the veterans' lobby; how the President himself at last succumbed by signing the final bill which completed the victory of the lobby—all this is history.

While pouring out billions elsewhere, the President made his support of the National Economy Act untenable.

And once he was thoroughly embarked on his spending program, the economy plank of 1932 was completely violated. Its mention of "abolishing useless commissions and offices" and of "eliminating extravagances" has a quaint, archaic ring today.

Thus Roosevelt promise vs. Roosevelt performance.

But even when a President is sincerely wedded to an economy program, he must reckon with Congress and the many groups which prey upon it.

These groups have been exceedingly active in the last few years, encouraged by Roosevelt prodigality. So far have the Roosevelt policies gone that the recipients of Federal relief for a thousand and one purposes have come to feel a vested right in their handouts. They will fight to retain them.

Public officials, as well as private citizens, are hounding Washington for more and more funds—and getting them.

A high-powered organization, headed by LaGuardia of New York, known as the United States Conference of Mayors, is busily engaged in having the Federal Government pay for projects that heretofore have been financed from municipal taxation. It was able, in the pending deficiency and relief measure, to force a provision raising PWA grants from 30 per cent of the total cost of projects to 45 per cent.

The Mayors form what has become known as a pressure group. So do the veterans. So do various other self-seeking aggregations with powerful influence over Congress. Any thorough economy program would have to reckon with them, severally and perhaps even jointly.

So that, even though economy promises are made in all sincerity, the path to reduction of expenses is beset with difficulties.

The appetite for Federal funds grows by what it feeds upon. Not campaign promises or feeble administrative gestures, but the highest type of statesmanship and bulldog courage—the kind typified by Grover Cleveland—will restore Federal expenditures to a reasonable level.

MISSOURI CAN DO AS MUCH.

The Horner administration has scored a fine victory in the enactment of a permanent registration bill. Passed overwhelmingly by the House earlier in the week, the measure received a 34-to-14 vote last Thursday in the Senate, where it was killed before the primary at the behest of the Kelly-Nash organization. This time, the opposition consisted of 13 Chicago Senators, still loyal to the bidding of the bosses, and a lame-duck downstater.

The victory becomes all the more notable when it is remembered that it comes after a three-year fight. At the outset of his administration in 1933, Gov. Horner indorsed this obvious and simple reform as a safeguard against fraud and a means of reducing election costs and providing for the convenience of voters. A bill was introduced, but it failed to pass. An identical measure was introduced in 1935, only to meet the same fate. After the Kelly-Nash combination caused still another defeat early this year, Gov. Horner made permanent registration one of the issues in his primary fight for renomination. He rightly took the voters' repudiation of the Chicago bosses as a mandate for honest elections and called a special session to carry it out.

There is a lesson in this for Missouri. What Illinois has done, this State can do. If permanent registration can succeed on one bank of the Mississippi, it can succeed on the other. Missourians have just as much right to its savings, safeguards and conveniences as have the people of Illinois. On the eve of Illinois' primary in April, Boss Pat Nash was quoted in Time as admitting frankly that the "honest election" law would cost his organization 250,000 votes. How many votes would such a law cost Boss Pendergast in Missouri?

The victory in Illinois should encourage Missourians to take up this fight with new energy. Between now and the August primary, the voters owe it to themselves to see that every candidate for the Missouri Legislature puts himself on record for or against permanent registration.

NO INTERVENTION IN NICARAGUA.

A military revolt against the rule of President Sacasa is in progress in Nicaragua. If we were back in the good old days of dollar diplomacy and haphazard intervention, several thousand United States marines, with plenty of machine guns, artillery pieces and airplanes, would be on a warship by now, bound for Nicaragua. In order to settle the question of who shall be President of Nicaragua, lads from Missouri and Kansas and Iowa and elsewhere would have been called out to jeopardize their lives.

Fortunately, however, we are now living in the days of the good-neighbor policy. Washington may be watching the situation, but not a soldier or an airplane bomb has been mobilized. The attitude now taken is that neighboring republics are able to look after their own affairs, and that intervention, which impairs their sovereignty, is an unfriendly act.

Such a sweeping change in policy is scarcely credible to some of these nations, including Peru and Chile. They have just sent polite notes to Washington, diplomatically expressing hope that this country will not intervene. Their admonitions may nettle some Americans, but Latin American nations are not unjustified in viewing their big neighbor's announced reformation with a bit of skepticism.

It was a similar dispute over who should be President of Nicaragua that kept 5000 marines in Nicaragua for seven years, vainly chasing Sandino through the swamps and over the mountains. The expedition caused the death of 150 Americans and hundreds of Nicaraguans, cost millions of dollars and reduced this country's prestige almost to zero in Latin America. Uncle Sam has learned his lesson. Let the Nicaraguans (or the Costa Ricans or the Venezuelans) fight it out among themselves, is now his motto.

HOT-POTATO INTERLUDE.

The august members of the Senate were juggling the hot potato—and no potato is hotter than a tax bill in a general election year—when up spake brave Horatius in the elegant form of Senator J. Hamilton Lewis.

He rose to demand postponement of the tax bill until next year. A pin dropped and 78 Senators heard it. "We are on the eve of going to the people in the general election," said the distinguished Senator from Illinois, and "the righteousness, the justice, the inequalities and the burdens of different phases of taxation can be discussed during the campaign. Then Congress can draw a bill expressing the needs of the country and the will of the people."

Freud says that beneath our conscious minds is a deep stratum called the subconscious, where we store our repressed desires, our unexpressed longings, our secret wishes.

We present Senator Lewis—the subconscious of the Senate.

SOLUTION FOR KEYNOTER TROUBLES.

If, as the party conventions approach, the respective keynoters are suffering from spokesman's palsy or sound-offer's panic, or just plain anxiety neuroses, the cause is readily understandable.

Here is Senator Steiwer, supposed to view the administration's program with alarm and point with pride to Republican aims, but with a voting record that is a distinct handicap. Can he denounce NRA and AAA after voting for both? Can he deplore devaluation after helping give the President power to take that step by voting for the Thomas amendment? Can he castigate Government competition with private industry if he remembers his vote for TVA? Or New Deal deficits if he recalls voting to override the President's veto of the bonus bill and the Independent Offices Act of 1934?

Senator Barkley, doing the viewing and pointing for the Democrats, will also have his troubles. He must tread softly when speaking of the unbalanced budget, for he, too, voted to override the 1936 bonus veto. Economy is a ticklish subject, anyhow, since a majority of Democrats in both houses helped kill the Economy Act. Mr. Barkley's praise of the Social Security Act must be diluted if he remembers that Democratic votes weakened some of its important provisions. Boasts about how his party prevented inflation will clash with this fact: In both houses, Democratic majorities voted for inflation to pay the bonus.

These are trying circumstances for two eloquent spokesmen. But there is an easy way out: Let them trade assignments. Senator Steiwer, with his voting record, could make a rip-roaring address before the Democratic convention. And Senator Barkley, showing how Democrats helped Republicans pull against the administration, could bring thunderous applause at Cleveland.

A CHALLENGE TO THE ADMINISTRATION.

We print elsewhere on this page today an editorial from the Independence (Mo.) Examiner discussing the conflict of New Deal legislation with the country's organic law, and calling upon the administration to present the issue to the people in a direct, clear-cut way.

It is a cogent piece of reasoning.

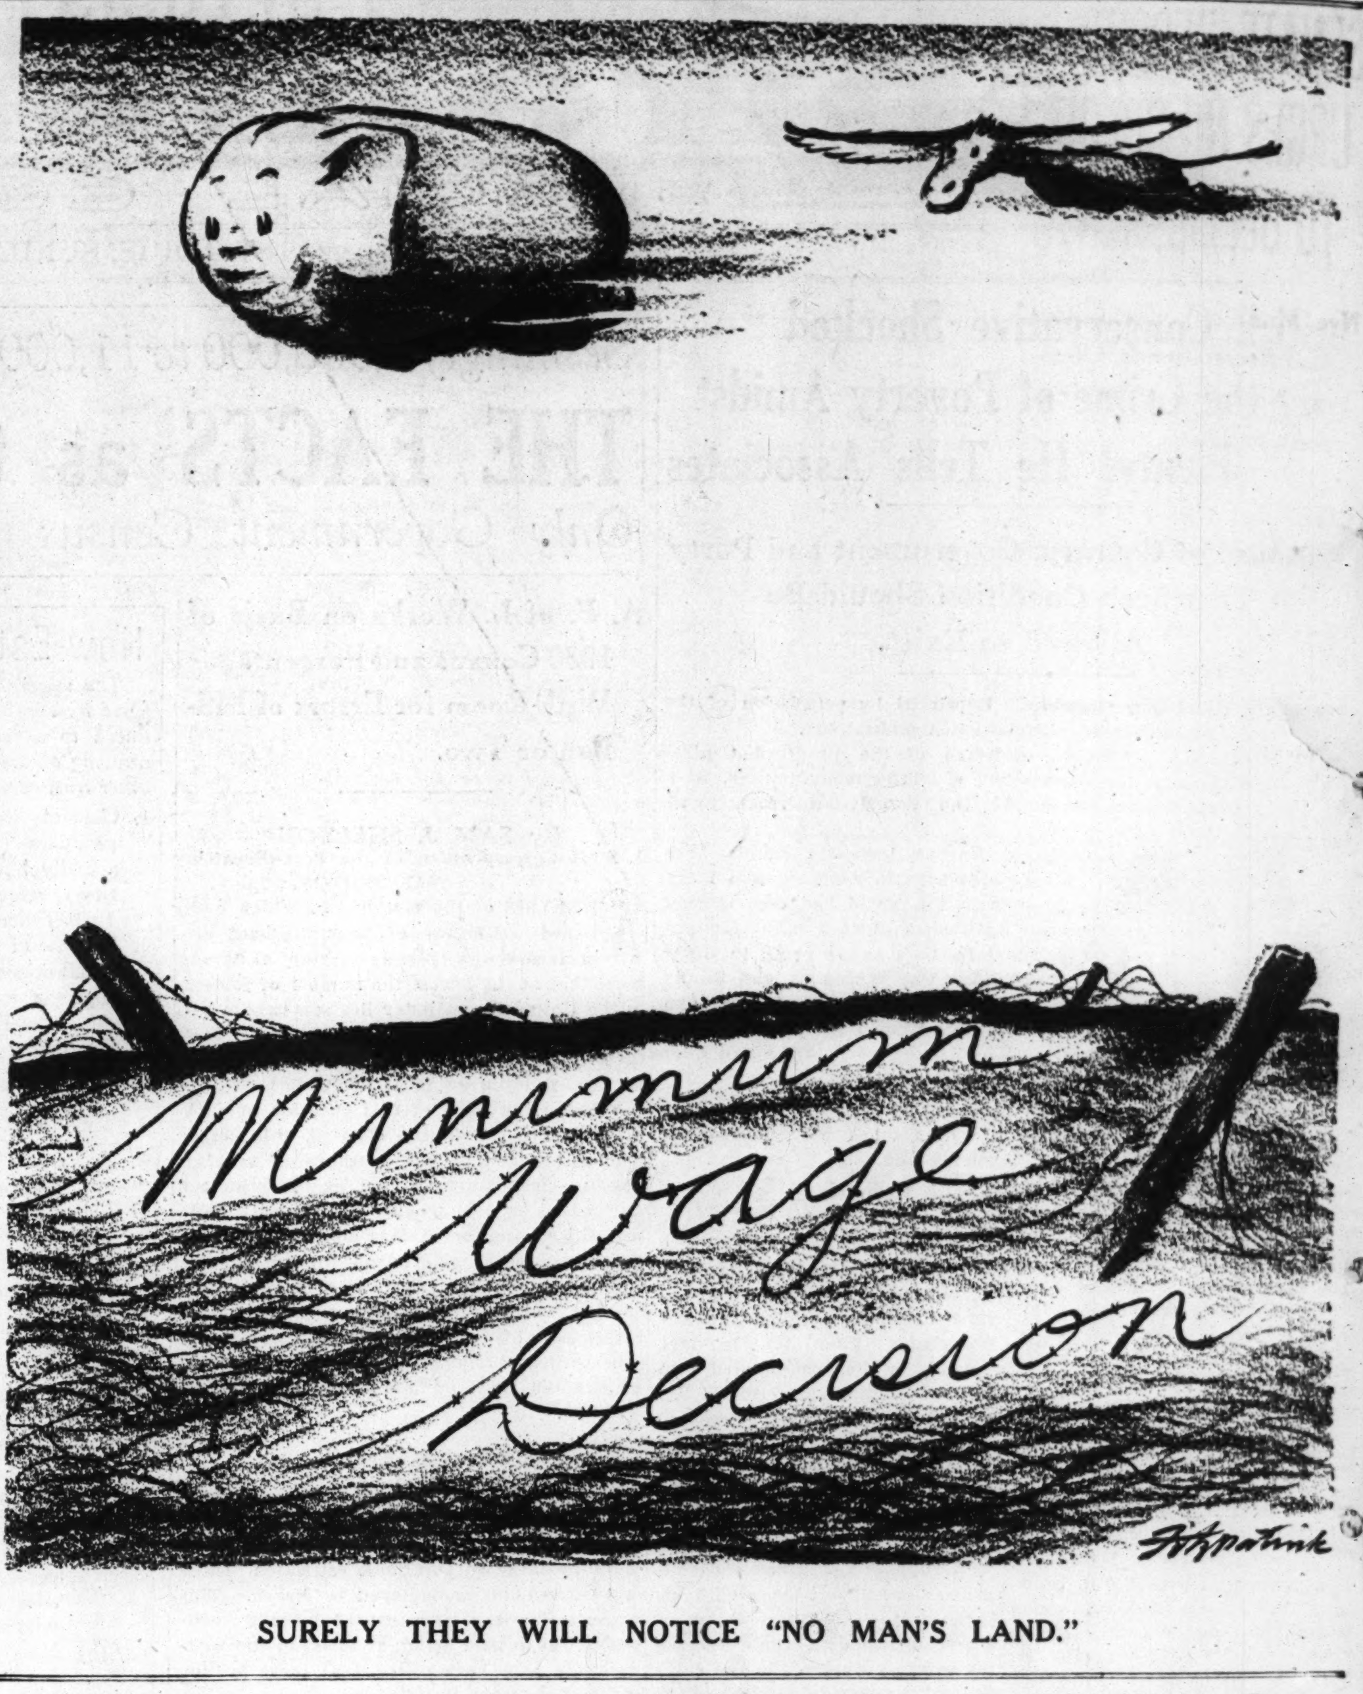
PART OF THE CIVILIZING PROCESS.

It is altogether safe to assume that the massacre of 30 Italian soldiers by Ethiopian tribesmen will not go down in the records as an isolated instance. There will be others; probably many others. The Italians may assert that the Ethiopian surrender is complete, that the country is fully pacified, but when enough warriors are left in the field with sufficient weapons to exterminate a military escort for a column of trucks, it is plain that a larger task awaits the conquerors.

It makes no difference whether the attackers are inspired by patriotism, by hatred of foreigners or by desire for loot. The Italians will find themselves beset by more guerrilla raids of this sort. It is the experience of all countries that undertake conquest. Years probably will be required to put down resistance in Ethiopia, and even thereafter, sporadic uprisings over the country are sure to occur.

It is part of the process known as civilizing Africa, or assuming the white man's burden, or bringing the blessings of European culture to the benighted Ethiopians.



SURELY THEY WILL NOTICE "NO MAN'S LAND."

Siegfried Looks at "America's Crisis"

Federal spending has stimulated an artificial trade revival, says French authority on America, but will be fatal if continued too long; true recovery cannot come, he adds, until frozen deposits go into industry and prices are reduced to attract buyers; thinks economic tide is turning and best policy now is governmental abstention.

Andre Siegfried in Revue des Deux Mondes (Translated by the Living Age).

THE trade revival now in progress in the United States originates, at least partially, in the Government's systematically spendthrift policy, which may be seen in the failure to balance the budget. The accumulated deficit of the last four years amounts to 13 billion dollars. This deficit continues and doubtless will continue for a long time, if one may judge by the gigantic expenditures promised, demanded and suggested on all sides.

In these circumstances, one need not be surprised to see the amount of money in circulation; and the effect of this circulation on both purchases and sales creates a part, probably an important one, of economic activity. Make no mistake; it is this policy, inspired by the doctrine of government intervention in economic processes, which supports the economic recovery.

The Government, with the presidential elections only a few months ahead, finds itself more or less obliged to leave the tap running. Even if the administration were dismayed by the proportions of this budgetary orgy, neither the House of Representatives nor the Senate could reasonably be expected to have the same scruples, since their constituents are, today, as always, convinced that America is a continent of "unlimited resources" and that the United States Treasury is bottomless.

A European's common sense tells him that lack of confidence, and then panic, are bound to be the natural, inescapable results of a policy which laughs at balanced budgets and seems to possess, from the point of view of economic wisdom, a certain aura of immorality. But the experience of the past months proves that the Government's borrowing capacity is far from being exhausted.

Despite a public debt which has grown from 19½ billions in 1932 to 31 billions today, and which will doubtless reach 35 billion dollars tomorrow, America, as contrasted with Europe, retains so great a margin of security that nobody feels any need to fear. After a few months in the atmosphere of the New World, a European critic loses all sense of proportion; he becomes American-minded, which means that he finds himself thinking that what would prove fatal in the Old World can do no harm to the New.

We are forced to the conclusion that the recovery, insofar as it is the result of a financial policy, is an artificial phenomenon. It cannot endure longer than the tempo of governmental expenditures can be maintained, and this tempo cannot be kept up unless borrowing remains a comparatively easy process.

In the opinion of the most reliable experts, recovery in the United States cannot be considered significant and lasting until the day when the industries which produce capital goods show renewed activity.

How can this problem be solved? First of all, by taking measures that will lead to investment of the frozen bank deposits in industries which are merely vegetating. Common sense will tell us that such investment will not take place until there is a hope of profit, and there can be little probability of such profit unless prices can be lowered to a level that will stimulate consumption, thus restoring to the message the purchasing power they have lost. The Government's policy of intervention in industrial production works against this solution by maintaining prices on a high level.

For these reasons, the end of the NRA caused no discouragement, but, on the contrary, brought new confidence to the business world. The fear of another period of reform, in the sense of interventionism, would serve to counteract this lukewarm optimism. Hence the uncertainty, not only concerning the results of the coming presidential election, but also about the President's intentions in case he is re-elected, remains a serious obstacle to a thorough revival of economic activity.

It is, however, easy to over-estimate the weight of any particular policy; the natural cyclic movement of the economic tides is likely to prove so much more important a factor than any policy. And it seems that the tide is about to turn, if it has not already done so without our being aware of it.

There are two parallel kinds of recovery. The first is the result of a definite policy; the second the consequence of an economic tide which this policy has not occasioned or even hastened. Thus two types of recovery are at work at the same time, their courses parallel to each other.

The governmental expenditures play the role of the starter which is needed to set the motor going; but the machine must have gasoline if it is to continue running.

The economic renaissance, once set in motion, will benefit most by a policy of governmental abstention. As for the wind of recovery which is caused by artificial stimulants, it would not be able to continue indefinitely; the financial and economic disorder, which it implies, must bring about its end. Under these conditions, the two kinds of recovery cannot exist together beyond a certain length of time.

When America was writhing in the throes of a crisis which she believed to be hopeless, President Roosevelt, in 1933, was able to restore the confidence she had lost. Since then the tide has turned: industry demands only one thing, and that is to throw off governmental control and regain the right to cure itself by its own means. Its present attitude toward the administration is that of hostility, which it no longer seeks even to hide. Business men have little by little become exactly what they were in prosperous times.

Their opponents say that they have learned nothing; and from the social point of view, in which America is at least 40 years behind Europe, this may be true. It is probable that a laissez-faire solution will be avoided, as the general public runs a risk in changing horses in midstream.

While prosperity is being reborn, the Government pursues a policy designed to encourage its return by means of a spendthrift demagogy, which is less efficacious against unemployment than would be a program of official abstention, and which is bound eventually to be fatal either to the Government's credit or to monetary stability. America has arrived at that stage of the crisis where the remedy is worse than the disease.

New Deal's Obvious Course

From the Independence (Mo.) Examiner.

IF the regimentation of industry, the fixing of prices, the paying under law of a minimum wages and the doctrine of scarcity is what we want in this country, we should have it. If the administration has figured out all these things and they would be for the benefit of the people, there is a proper way to approach the problem. The decisions of the Supreme Court have shown clearly that all of these things, however desirable they may be, cannot be placed in operation under a constitutional government guided by the present Constitution. The obvious way to reach the objective is to amend the Constitution.

We think the methods used instead have been unworthy of an administration which has high idealism and believes in what it is trying to do. When the NRA was declared unconstitutional, instead of recognizing this fact the administration tried to accomplish its plans by an obvious method of devious dodging. Instead of accepting the decision of the court, the NRA was maintained for months with a heavy drain of millions of dollars on the Treasury, and even as late as the President's speech in Baltimore, the purpose of maintaining the NRA was declared.

The Guffey coal regulation bill was a direct and clear flouting of the NRA decision. Every lawyer knew this and the President knew it when he urged Congress to pass the bill regardless of its unconstitutionality. Congress followed orders and passed the bill. The decision invalidating the measure was only to be expected. The same course was adopted when the AAA was knocked out. The administration tried to do by indirect methods what it had failed to do directly and openly. The Wagner Labor Disputes Act was again flagrantly and obviously an effort at indirection. While it has not yet reached the Supreme Court for decision, everybody knows what that decision must be.

It is axiomatic that a straight line is the nearest distance between two points and that two and two make four. The people of the United States do not like indirection; they like forthright declarations and the direct and positive statements of purpose and then the carrying out of those purposes. We cannot repeal the law of gravity.

The Supreme Court does not make laws. It does not, just because of a whim or opinion, declare a law unconstitutional. Congress makes laws. The laws made by Congress must not violate the basic law as laid down in the Constitution. All the Supreme Court does, all it can do, is to say whether or not a law made by Congress complies with the requirements of the basic law under which the Government operates.

The proper method now, the honest method, is for the administration to frame an amendment to the Constitution and submit it to the people of the nation. The adoption of a platform at the national convention demanding such a constitutional amendment would follow naturally. If the party believes in the legislation proposed, it would be only honest to put it in the platform and challenge the voters to say Yes or No. This is really the issue between the parties today.

SENATE REPORT URGES NO CREDIT TO BELLIGERENTS

Nye Munitions Committee Also Recommends Allowing No Increase in Exports to Them.

CITES J. P. MORGAN'S TRADE WITH ALLIES

"Created Heavily Capitalized Machine Dependent on Their Purchasing Power."

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The Senate Munitions Committee recommended today that the Neutrality Act be strengthened "to prevent the extension of large credits to belligerents in the form of acceptances, and to prevent the flotation of long-term bonds by foreign non-belligerents, the proceeds of which loans can be diverted to belligerent uses."

The recommendation was contained in a report submitted by Chairman Nye (Rep.), North Dakota. It includes the suggestion that Congress "consider most seriously" a limitation of exports to belligerents to the normal amount shipped to such nations during a typical peace time period. Hospital supplies would be excepted.

The committee also recommended that during any war in which this country is a neutral, port clearance be refused to armed merchantmen carrying passengers.

Cites J. P. Morgan and Co.

The report dealt at length with the part played in the international financing prior to American entrance in the World War by J. P. Morgan and Co.

Saying that "loans to belligerents militate against neutrality," the committee found that "the development of the export of war commodities to the allies resulted in a widespread expansion of almost all the lines of American business, an expansion which J. P. Morgan and Co., in their commercial agency contacts, specifically undertook to stimulate." It added:

"As a result, by 1916 there was created a tremendous industrial machine, heavily capitalized, paying high wages, and dependent upon the purchasing power of the allies."

Dangers of "War Boom."

The committee said Federal Reserve Banks should not be allowed to participate in belligerent financing and that "it is not desirable for the nation to engage in a war boom which may end suddenly and especially in any war boom which is financed by loans floated in this country."

"The danger in this situation is not only in sudden deflation but in pressure by commercial and banking groups to keep our foreign policy favorable to the nations with which they trade," the report added.

PRIEST TO CELEBRATE 25TH ANNIVERSARY OF ORDINATION

Reception Tuesday Evening at Church School for the Rev. J. J. Lonergan.

The Rev. John J. Lonergan, pastor of St. Cronan's Catholic Church, 1201 South Boyle avenue, will celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination at a reception at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening, in the church schoolyard. Visiting speakers will include the Rev. Francis Holweck, pastor of St. Bernard's Church; the Rev. Nicholas Brinkman, pastor of the St. Louis Cathedral; the Rev. P. J. O'Connor of St. James Church, Judge James W. Griffin of the Court of Criminal Correction, and Dr. R. Emmett Kane.

Father Lonergan, 48 years old, has been pastor of St. Cronan's Church since 1931, going there from Chaffee, Mo., where he had been appointed to his first pastorate in 1923. He was previously assistant pastor at St. Michael's, Holy Name and the Cathedral parishes. Born in Ireland, he came to St. Louis in 1908, entering Kenrick Seminary in that year and graduating in 1911.

NAZIS STUDY RACE PARADOXES

Nordic Garbo and Dietrich Regarded as Jewish in Conduct.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, June 6.—One may be as blond and as blue-eyed as a Nordic god, yet one's soul may be non-Nordic, or vice versa, says the Neues Volk, organ of the race-political office of the Nazi party, discussing the difficulties of race determination. This observation arose from a detailed study of the racial points of prominent film stars.

"Greta Garbo, for example, must be classed as preponderantly but not entirely Nordic," the Neues Volk holds, "because a close examination of her features reveals other, probably East Baltic, strains." As to Marlene Dietrich, the verdict is: "Her profile, hair and eyes may seem entirely Nordic, but her conduct and association with Jews under the previous regime have nothing in common with the Nordic outlook."

NEW PARTY SENDS ALDERMEN A QUERY

Progressives Ask for Views on Election of Board Members by Wards.

The St. Louis Progressive party, a political organization recently formed, sent letters yesterday to all members of the Board of Aldermen asking them to state their position on the election of Aldermen by wards, rather than by city-wide vote.

H. R. Hay, consulting chemist and temporary chairman of the party, said election of Aldermen by wards, next to relief, was the most important issue in St. Louis at present. "With election by wards there would be minority representation on the Board of Aldermen which would give the people on relief a voice in the appropriation for relief needs," he said.

Letters sent to the Aldermen remind them that when the State constitutional amendment permitting election of St. Louis Aldermen by wards was passed in 1934 the St. Louis vote favored the proposal 145,127 to 78,192. The Legislation Committee of the Board of Aldermen refused last week to report favorably a bill which would submit to the voters in November a charter amendment for election by wards.

The Aldermen were told that their views would be made public in the St. Louis Progressive News, a tabloid publication which is to be distributed within about 10 days in connecton with an effort to organize the Progressive party in the wards.

If replies are non-committal, the party plans to obtain 100 signatures in each ward to a petition demanding that the Aldermen make their views known.

The party has under consideration also a proposal to circulate initiative petitions to force submission of the charter amendment which has been held to be necessary before the city can elect Aldermen by wards. A committee for that purpose includes Mrs. E. T. Senseney, former president of the League of Wometn Voters; Robert H. Wadlow, president of the Locomotive Engineers' Brotherhood; Prof. Joseph M. Klamon of Washington University; George Sueltthaus, 5153 Palm street, and Hay.

Hay said the League of Women Voters had indorsed the initiative proposal.

COMMITTEEWOMAN RESIGNS POSITION IN CITY JAIL

Darst and Warden O'Meara of Opposite Faction Say Rift Had No Bearing on Job.

The resignation of Mrs. Lottie Meyers, Democratic Committeewoman from the Tenth Ward, from her $115-a-month job as matron at the City Jail was announced yesterday by Director of Public Welfare Joseph M. Darst.

Mrs. Meyers, who has filed for reelection to the Democatic City Committee, is a member of the faction opposed to Mayor Dickmann's administration, but Darst denied this had anything to do with the resignation. Warden Henry C. O'Meara of the jail made a similar statement, adding that there had been no "argument," but that Mrs. Meyers simply said she had not been well and wished to give up her job.

Mrs. Meyers, who resides at 3568 South Broadway, could not be reached.

Only Government Census Could Fix Total of Jobless

few divisions did the newspaper's average anywhere near equal this.

The Sun's survey was made by means of letters directed to about 8000 employers, and returns were received from by no means all of them. In retail trade alone there are approximately 1,000,000 employing units and in manufacturing there are something like 150,000.

In his criticism of the Sun's findings, President Green of the A. F. of L., said that it omitted at least 8,800,000 of the unemployed. He itemized this total as follows: In industries not covered by the Sun's survey, 722,000; not counted in industries covered by the survey, 3,305,000; increase in those seeking work not counted, 2,915,000, and unemployed in 1929, 1,864,000.

Discrepancies in Figures Checked With Labor Index.

A striking discrepancy is shown by comparison of the Sun's figures on employment in trade (wholesale and retail) with the index figures of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. In its estimate, the Sun assumed that employment in this field in 1935 was 109 per cent of that in 1929—that is, greater now than in the last of the boom years. By comparison, the Labor Bureau index shows that in retail trade, 1935 employment was only 82 per cent of the 1929 volume and in wholesale trade it was 84 per cent of the 1929 figure.

In some other important groups, 1935 employment, according to Labor Bureau figures, bore the following percentage relationships to the 1929 volume: Anthracite mining, 53.2 per cent; bituminous coal mining, 76.7; metal mining, 47.3; crude petroleum production, 74.9; electric railroads, 71.2; electric light and power and manufactured gas, 84.8, and telephone and telegraph, 70.1.

In the mining classification as a whole, excluding oil production, the Labor Department estimates employment is only 64.7 per cent of the 1929 volume, but the Sun survey estimated it at 71.8 per cent. In manufacturing as a whole the Labor Department reports that present employment is 78.4 per cent of that in 1929, but the Sun survey assumed it was 93.8 per cent.

In two classifications where the surveys by the Labor Department and the newspaper were approximately equal in coverage, the percentage figures arrived at were almost identical. These are automobile manufacturing where the Labor Department index is 97.8 as compared with the Sun's estimate of 97.9 and cotton mills, where the respective figures are 92.7 and 93.0.

Green Criticises Survey as Being Inadequate.

In his letter criticising the Sun estimate, President Green of the A. F. of L. said:

"The Sun bases its conclusions on reports from firms employing in the aggregate only 5,000,000 workers and treats these reports as representative of 29,937,000 workers (in the particular industries covered). The firms reporting to the Sun are not typical of American industry, since they are in general the larger firms and include many concerns which have absorbed smaller firms during the depression. They, therefore, show a false increase in employment. The United States Department of Labor and Interstate Commerce Commission give monthly reports on firms employing 7,300,000 persons and have taken greatest care to secure records from firms representative of American industry in general. The American Federation of Labor bases its estimates on these and other Government figures. . . .

"The Sun reports do not adequately cover even the industries included in its estimate. This is particularly true of the manufacturing and mechanical groups. Firms reporting to the Sun for this group are chiefly in the automobile, textile and metal industries, but their records are taken also to represent building construction, food industries, leather, lumber, tobacco, rubber, chemicals, printing and a number of other industries. The inadequacy of the Sun reports for building construction is particularly serious since it leads to the omission of 1,160,000 unemployed in the building trades."

Concluding his lengthy letter of criticism, Green wrote:

"The Sun figures do not account for firms going out of business since 1929. Unquestionably, failures account for thousands of lost jobs, and the firms going out of business since 1929 have by no means been offset as yet by new firms starting in business."

Charles H. Franklin of the Sun staff, who was in charge of the survey by that newspaper, said to the writer that many of the Sun's reports were from the larger corporations and chain and mail order stores. Some indication of the growth of chain stores at the expense of competitors is afforded by Department of Commerce figures showing that in the retail field the percentage of total sales attributed to the chains increased from 20 per cent in 1929 to 25 per cent in 1933.

Employment in Class 1 Roads 64 Pct. of 1929.

In the railroad field, complete employment figures for the Class 1 carriers (the greater part of the industry) are available monthly from the Interstate Commerce Commission. Total employment there in April of this year was 1,072,000. This was only 64 per cent of the 1929 employment, which was 1,660,800.

Another index which the A. F. of L. asserts supports its estimates of unemployment is registration of job seekers at the offices of the National Re-employment Service and the State Employment Services. As of Feb. 29, the active file of registrations at the combined offices was 9,196,423. Miss Margaret Scattergood, in charge of the unemployment survey of the A. F. of L., cited this fact to the correspondent as bolstering the federation's estimate of a total of 11,500,000 unemployed. She said it was obvious that many of the unemployed would not be registered for various reasons, and so the total registration should be taken as an understatement of the number of jobless.

There are certain modifying factors, however, to be considered in connection with this registration. One is that registration at these offices was required for WPA jobs. Another is that in many cases there may be more than one registration from a family where in fact only one job is sought, and if one member of the family obtained a job the other registrations would be withdrawn. The list, in all probability, includes many persons who are employed but seeking better jobs, and also some farmers who are seeking part-time work on public projects.

Estimates Based on Various Definitions of "Unemployed."

It is obvious that definition of the term "unemployed" is one of the factors causing conflicting estimates of the number of unemployed. If the 3,500,000 engaged, most of them temporarily, in the Government's various work relief projects could be counted as employed, the number of jobless would be correspondingly reduced. Then there is the large amount of new self-employment. For the most part the A. F. of L. prefers to consider this as makeshift employment and to count those so engaged as jobless.

The revised estimates of the A. F. of L. place the maximum unemployment at approximately 15,000,000 for March, 1933. Its figures, also based on Labor Department reports, account for 5,500,000 jobs restored since then, but, due to the increase in the working population and other factors, this did not result in a net reduction of unemployment in an equal amount.

In any event and on any basis of estimating, the volume of unemployment remains staggeringly large, and is a recognized deterrent to "recovery," however, variously that word may be defined.

Poverty in Midst of Plenty Shocks British Conservative

tions gave it a cold 'No,' and therefore, put an end to further international conversations on the subject. England was one of those two nations.

"The Government objection is as follows: 'Britain has such powerful trade unions that in the event of a shorter working week, we should not be allowed to reduce wages, whereas foreign countries without these powerful trade unions would reduce wages, and they are waiting for this oportunity to take advantage of us.'

"At the moment unemployment is diminishing, because we are in feverheat of munition working, but we have still nearly 2,000,000 idle.

Closing "Redundant Mills."

"The Government seems to be working on exactly the same lines as the Bradford woolcombers. These firms have formed an association to increase the charge for combing wool by reducing the amount of machinery in the trade. It is worked in this way. Each firm in the association pays into a fund a fraction of a penny for every pound of wool it combs. This fund is used to purchase what is described as redundant wool-combing machinery, which is all broken up. With the closing down of these 'redundant' mills, competition is less and up go the charges for combing. This is done solely for the benefit of the employers. It does not reduce unemployment.

"The Government Cotton Spinning bill is on exactly the same lines. Each firm of cotton spinners will be compelled to subscribe to a fund which will be used to buy and break up 10,000,000 cotton-spinning spindles. This reduction of machinery will reduce competition and enable the employes to raise the charge for spinning cotton, but it makes no provision for the people who were working these 10,000,000 spindles. To destroy this machinery, this power of production, is criminal.

"Similar action is being taken in shipping and in agriculture.

Potato Control Stupid.

"There is poverty and hunger in the land, yet the Government is restricting the growing of potatoes in order to keep up the price. At the moment potatoes are so scarce that the Government has taken off the import duty, but the restriction on the farmer as to how much he may grow still remains. You must admit that this potato control is nothing but gross stupidity when I tell you that if I grow an extra 100 acres of potatoes on my farm the Government will inflict a fine on me of £500 ($2500).

"There are no words in the English language sufficiently vile to describe this action, but I will put it very mildly by saying that it is a diabolical crime perpetrated by the National Government.

"If this scheme of reduced hours can be arranged internationally it will have a very far-reaching effect.

"Today each nation is waging a desperate economic war against the rest of the world. Fortunately for us, we are the victors up to date, but what we have gained since the great trade slump other countries have lost.

International Economic War.

"I ask you why is each nation at war economically with the rest of the world? Because each nation is trying to do something to provide work for its army of unemployed by applying tariffs, quotas, restrictions, etc.

"If there were no unemployed there would be no need for these trade barriers. The economic wars would end, there would be a free flow of goods from one country to another, there would be friendly feelings between the nations, bringing about the time when there will be no more war or even rumors of war.

"Our democracy is such that when all is quiet, then all is supposed to be well. Unless the people make their voices felt nothing will be done for them. It took years of 'suffragette' agitation to compel the Government to give the vote to women, and during that time many women were sent to prison. Now we put up a memorial to Mrs. Pankhurst and honor her daughter.

"I therefore call on all Conservatives throughout the land to persistently press their members of Parliament to compel the Government to take immediate steps to abolish this terrible disease of unemployment. If you have sympathy for our poverty-stricken people you will answer the call. On this subject silence is selfishness."

ST. LOUIS U. SUMMER SCHOOL

Registration Ends June 17 and Classes Open June 18.

The St. Louis University summer school session, which begins June 18, will include courses in the history and philosophy of pre-school education and home-school relationships.

These courses will be taught by Miss Kathleen McCann, who has made a study of the subject in the graduate division of the Child Welfare Research Station of the University of Iowa. Soviet Stores Provide First Steady Manufactured Goods Supply in Villages

Many Show Profits Under New Co-Operative System—Headquarters Fixes Prices, Somewhat Higher Than in Cities.

By JOSEPH B. PHILLIPS.

(Copyrighted by the Herald Tribune.)

MOSCOW, May.

WITH the start of spring sowing, village stores in the Soviet Union are beginning, for the first time since the revolution, to offer peasants something like a steady supply of manufactured goods to buy. Six months ago, a new approach was tried to the old problem of the exchange of goods between town and country, or between proletarian-controlled factories and the collective farms. The enormous network of consumers' co-operative stores, once so powerful that it looked as though they might be the ultimate form of retail trade under the Soviets, were told to surrender all their shops in cities and towns to the state stores and to devote all their time to building up trade with the peasant villages.

The operatives have been at work in the new field since last November. Contrasts can be made. Village stores which, six months ago, had little more than the sign over the door to show they were supposed to be stores, now have goods on their shelves. There are many gaps still and a good many more bureaucratic entanglements of the kind warranted to gray the hair of an ambitious merchant.

Problem of Distribution.

Getting manufactured goods to the peasant has not been a trivial problem for the Soviet Government in the early years of the revolution, peasant resentment at the way the city proletariat absorbed all its own factory production sometimes reached dangerous proportions. More recently a primary task has been to convince the peasants that the collectivization of the land was working out well for them. Beautiful theories were not much used so long as the peasant could not get the things he needed.

Supplying the goods to back the theories has been the job of the co-operative stores. The way they had done it and the obstacles still in the way cannot be visualized any better than by comparing a few stores today with their condition six months ago.

In some respects the peasants in the neighborhood of Moscow never have suffered as much want as those in more distant regions. Supplying village stores near the capital, however, has been exceptionally difficult, precisely because they have been discriminated against to some extent in favor of those more distant.

Transport Is Difficult.

Paradoxically, transportation has been one of the chief difficulties for the co-operatives within a 75-mile radius of Moscow. Railway traffic is so congested that short hauls are not permitted. Even when the highways to the center of any group of co-operatives is in reasonable condition, the shortage of trucks is great. And roads from the district center to the real village store usually are impossible. Two of us paying a check-up visit found the director of one co-operative very proud of a new "model store" he had built in a village 10 miles from the center, but our car surrendered to the mud holes before we got halfway there.

This co-operative center is on a main railway line from Moscow. It cannot get anything by train except an occasional carload of flour or sugar. As it did not make a profit last year, the central society in Moscow did not give it any trucks. Endless red tape, however, sometimes breeds experts with scissors. The director manages to get trucks. Two of them arrived during our visit loaded with candy and cakes.

Transportation charges are heavy, whether the use of trucks is acquired by bureaucratic means or common sense ones. Mainly because of transport costs, kerosene costs 71 kopecks a liter 20 miles from Moscow and only 47 kopecks in the city. Many other prices in the villages also are above city prices. Cloth, handbags, razors, playing cards and many other manufactured articles are from 5 to 10 per cent more expensive. Food prices, however, are about the same percentage below those in town.

Headquarters Fixes Prices.

Prices still are fixed by the central headquarters. Headquarters is placing a great deal of emphasis on profit. Regional societies which do not make a profit do not get trucks, or credits to build new stores, or are penalized in other ways. As a consequence, most of them around Moscow are showing profits this year. One place we revisited, which is not in very good standing because it just broke even last year, already has shown a profit of 83,000 rubles for the first four months of 1936. Most of the profit has come from the increased sale of manufactured goods.

In November the largest store of this society at district headquarters was decidedly woebegone. Excepting sardines and packages of coffee made from acorns, the only factory products on the shelves was a collection of baby caps. That picture has changed vastly.

First Showcase.

A third of the space now is given over to the display of manufactured goods. Bales of flannel cloth and machine-made lace for curtains, stockings, gloves and several dozen sweaters now fill the shelves which were bare six months ago. A small glass showcase—an item of interest as the first ever seen in this district—contains handbags, playing cards, razors, belts and combs. An entire small department is full of face powders, toilet waters, perfumes and soaps.

Even last year the director could get all the cosmetics he wanted, but they didn't sell. This year the trade is beginning to be brisk. Soap has a phenomenal sale. Practically all the clothing material is of inferior quality and a lot of it probably would be turned down anywhere else as flagrantly out of season as well as out of style. The director said the buyers from headquarters still were far from expert. There is not much grumbling from the customers about styles and seasons. They still are only one step removed from scarcity.

The figures in the books of this regional society speak eloquently of the change that is taking place. It has 18 stores and serves a radius of 17 kilometers. Last year the turnover was 3,500,000 rubles, of which only 40,894 rubles was in manufactured goods.

The planned turnover for 1936 is 6,000,000 rubles, and signs are in favor of surpassing the plan. Turnover of manufactured goods for the first four months of the year amounted to 60,000 rubles.

Shortage of Shoes and Clothing.

This district still admits one serious shortage—of shoes and ready-made clothes. The director said they were available, but central headquarters refused to send him as many as he needed until he built a new store. The day before our visit, he had negotiated a loan with the state bank—at 8 per cent—to build a 60,000-ruble store and a new bakery to cost 51,000 rubles. The bakery is an innovation. Most peasants make their own bread. This co-operative has had so much success with a small bakery it started that home baking is on the decline in its district.

Last November, the town of Pushkino, 18 miles out of Moscow, was going through a sizable upheaval in its retail trade. Trying to check up on the results brought on a good deal of confusion on the second trip. Where the co-operative offices had been a bored young man who said he was the "planning committee," gave us an address. It turned out to be headquarters of the state stores, which had taken over all the town trade from the co-operatives. Eleven clerks and twice as many visitors in one room were drinking tea, smoking beneath a "No Smoking" sign, and talking.

Figures on Trade.

The director said, not very happily, that the co-operatives, which now were serving only the villages in the neighboring territory, seemed to be doing better than his own organization. Certainly the co-operative was doing things more placidly. A single secretary was making herself some tea and the director had finished work and gone home at 4 o'clock.

His books showed reason for satisfaction. The society, since it was moved out of the factory town of Pushkino, has 36 stores serving a peasant population of 30,000. Last year its profits were 30,000 rubles. Profits for the first four months this year were 150,000 rubles. The 1935 turnover was 3,000,000 rubles, and the plan for 1936 calls for a turnover of 14,000,000 rubles, of which 45 per cent should come from the sale of manufactured goods. Prices of factory-made articles, the director said, still were high. But, because of its good standing with central headquarters, the society is able to get a considerable variety.

Each village store has posted on the wall its list of 83 articles which it guarantees to supply from stock, or to get from the district headquarters. Two of the largest district stores, at machine tractor stations, had moderately varied lines of shoes and ready-made clothing and were even beginning to sell furniture.

Co-Operatives Seek Members.

Perhaps one explanation for the accent which is being placed on profits is the desire to bring in more members. None of the district co-operative societies has paid dividends to members since 1931. For four years after that, membership in the society was worth while without dividends, since members had first choice of goods during the time of acute shortage. In the reorganization of last autumn, that privilege was taken away.

Hence there is now no material advantage in membership. Enrollment drives have been attempted, stirring the patriotic and class sentiments of the peasants by telling them that the co-operatives now belonged entirely to them, no longer were run for city consumers, and should be supported by peasants as a peasant institution. The campaigns did not precisely strike a responsive chord. Most of them lost members. The society located at Pushkino has 5500 members. Sixty-five of them have joined in the last six months. The district co-operatives now are spreading word that the central offices in Moscow probably will allow them to declare a dividend for members at the end of the year.

RADIO DRAMATIZATIONS OF DISCOVERIES IN SCIENCE

Smithsonian Institution One of Sponsors of Programs Beginning Today.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Radio dramatization of discoveries in science will begin tomorrow under auspices of the Smithsonian Institution and the Federal Office of Education.

Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the institution, announced that its series of Sunday morning programs would deal with current scientific investigations and the historical and other material assembled in the collections, which are in some respects the most comprehensive in existence.

The first broadcast will be largely historical, dealing with Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's Spirit of St. Louis which is part of the Smithsonian aeronautical collection, the laying of the first trans-Atlantic cable, the beginnings of the telephone, and how Francis Scott Key, author of the "Star-Spangled Banner," happened to find himself on a British warship in 1814 when he wrote the song. The original flag which inspired it now hangs in the Smithsonian.

"Of Making Many Books"

EDITED BY JOHN G. NEIHARDT

The Ancient Teaching

THE MAN WHO KNEW. By Ralph Waldo Trine. (Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis.)

THE divinity that was possessed and revealed by Jesus of Nazareth, says Ralph Waldo Trine, author of that other notable book, "In Tune With the Infinite," was not peculiar to himself but common to all men—a divinity not deriving from the manner of his birth but from "the essential oneness of each life with the universal Divine Life." The young Palestinian Jew, this author says, had a clear vision of the Fatherhood of God and the Divine Sonship of man, and as flowing from this, the Brotherhood of Man. Out of this clear vision emerged "the greatest saying in the world's history:" "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. And . . . thy neighbor as thyself." And this neighbor is not to be loved as another person, but as one's self, or at least a part of one's self, part of the oneness that is comprehended in the divinity of man. This, Trine says, is the Kingdom of God within that was the burden of the Master's teaching—a kingdom that has its springs within and blossoms in the kindness, sympathy, mutuality and co-operation of all right human relations. This, then, is the religion of the Master, not subscribing to any beliefs or formulated statements about Him, but living as He lived, according to the truth that He taught, for "there is no complex system, or anything that could possibly be called a system, that can truthfully be evolved from his two-fold fundamental of love to God and love for our fellow men."

Incarnation, as this author views it, was not peculiar to Jesus but is available to every one who subjects personal life to the Divine Life within, the creation of a new life through inner identification, something very different from the system of appeasement which took form three or four centuries after Jesus' time, pushing aside his teachings and concerning itself with intricate discussions of speculative things about him. It is argued that the natural parentage of Jesus, implied and declared when he lived, was not incompatible with the divinity that accrued from his complete identification of himself with God the Father. The contrary doctrine concerning his birth is traced as a common occurrence in the traditions of antiquity. Substitution of dogma for spiritual meaning, this author declares, would have been bitterly condemned by the Master, who was perhaps the greatest enemy of dogma that the world has seen.

Concerning the substitutionary dogma, the author has Jesus tell a Philip of today that the idea of his death being a ransom for the sins of the human race is "all news" to him. "Otherwise," he is represented as saying, "I would have said something about it during my life and ministry here. . . . It was founded upon the imagined and alleged fall and consequent degradation of the human race. I knew nothing of it in my time. Be that as it may. My revelation and entire teaching were exactly the opposite—not the natural sinfulness and degradation, but the divinity, of the human soul. All are sons of God and God is love, not demanding an early Jewish conception of a sacrifice and of an atonement for an error or a sin, especially one that the individual never committed."

In his paraphrasing and colloquializing the author sacrifices dignity somewhat for the sake of the telling phrase. F. A. B.

Not Wholly Machine-Made

THE DOCTOR. By Mary Roberts Rinehart. (Farrar & Rinehart, Inc., New York.)

OF all the writers of machine-made fiction, Mary Roberts Rinehart stands among the foremost. Her product has the qualities of skillful plot mechanics, precision and smooth movement. It is turned out on a mass-production basis, for her latest book, "The Doctor," is her forty-eighth, not counting three collaborations.

Viewing only the plot, "The Doctor" is another mechanical product. There are (1) a promising young physician, (2) the right girl, (3) the wrong girl. Misunderstandings arise, he marries the wrong girl, and the right girl marries the wrong man. He begins a successful career, interrupted by the war, then suffers a disabling accident. At length, the tangled skein is unraveled: his wife gets a divorce, he recovers from his accident, and the way is cleared for him to marry the right girl, providentially a widow by this time.

It is not all done in the mechanical fashion, however. There are traces of fine hand craftsmanship throughout, passages where the tapestry of the tale is taken from the whirring machine for a few expressive stitches in the fashion of the ancient workmen.

Perhaps because of Mrs. Rinehart's comprehensive knowledge of what goes on behind the scenes in hospitals and in physicians' offices and nurses' homes, the book takes on more life-like qualities than machine creation alone can impart. When the banal plot does not intrude, there is presented a life-size picture of the medical man and his problems and outlook, of the conflict between personality and the most exacting of professions. Having these touches, aided by the writer's superlative talent for telling a story dramatically and swiftly, her newest book ranks high.

The outstanding novel of our day about a doctor's career is, of course, Sinclair Lewis' "Arrowsmith." Mrs. Rinehart's Dr. Noel Arden is no Dr. Martin Arrowsmith, nor is her book up to the high standard of Lewis' acknowledged masterpiece. The reason doubtless lies in the machine technique, geared to stamp out stereotyped characters and situations. Nevertheless, "The Doctor" is well above the usual mass-production item. F. G.

OKLAHOMA IMPRINTS. By Carolyn Thomas Foreman. (University of Oklahoma Press, Norman.)

CAROLYN THOMAS FOREMAN has recorded here the hundred and one years of publishing and printing in a country only 29 years a state, reaching back to the days of the Cherokee Indian, Sequoyah, who, intrigued by the white man's "talking leaf," invented an 86 character alphabet for his own people.

The 500 page story begins with Union Mission Press, established in 1835 by Rev. Samuel A. Worcester. The first issue was The Child's Book, which, like the first volume published in the United States, John Eliot's Indian Bible (1638), was also in an Indian language. Cherokee and Choctaw almanacs immediately followed.

The press was shortly moved to Park Hill where, by 1861, when it was discontinued, nearly 14,000,000 pages in Cherokee, Choctaw and Creek had been printed, mostly of a religious and educational nature.

The second press in the Cherokee Nation was located at Breadtown in 1843. On this Baptist Mission press was printed the Cherokee Messenger, which was the first periodical issued in Indian Territory. It was edited by the Rev. Evan Jones and Jesse Bushyhead. The contents of Vol. 1, No. 1, consisted of a portion of Genesis translated into the Sequoyah characters; Psalm 1; Bunyan's Pilgrim Progress; Peter Parley's Universal History; and an account of the Going Snake Temperance Society.

The Messenger was designed for those who "labor under great disadvantages in shaking off the remains of paganism and in rising to an equality in point of intelligence with the mixed bloods and white people with whom they must mingle."

The Cherokee Advocate, the most important newspaper of the Cherokee Nation, was begun in 1844, as successor to the Cherokee Phoenix published at New Echota, Ga., until 1839, but discontinued during the removal of the Indians to the West. The story continues with a recounting of the newspapers of the Chickasaw Nation, all published by noncitizens and whites; then those of the Choctaw Nation, the Creek, the Osage, Peoria, and Seminole Nations, followed by chapters on magazines, journals, books and pamphlets.

The final section is concerned with the newspapers of the Oklahoma territory. Its first paper was the Cheyenne Transporter, located on the Cheyenne and Arapaho Reservation when those tribes were only partly civilized. The whole account is carried to 1907, year of Oklahoma statehood. N. K.

THE SIMPLETON OF THE UNEXPECTED ISLES, THE SIX OF CALAIS, THE MILLIONAIRESS: Three Plays by Bernard Shaw. (Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.)

IF the urge to read prefaces is (as has been said) a mark of education, the urge to read nothing beyond the preface of a Shaw play of this late period may also be taken as indicating something about a reader's preparation for his duty. Regardless of the possible merits of the three plays this testy and acid old Irishman has brought forth most recently, no one will be surprised that the two full-length prefaces outrank them all in spice and finesse and general consequence. At any rate it would be hard to pass up a preface beginning:

"The increasing bewilderment of my journalistic critics as to why I should write such plays as "The Simpleton" culminated in New York in 1935, when I was described as a dignified old monkey throwing coco-nuts at the public in pure senile devilment . . .

"Livingstone risked his life in Africa every day to save a black man's soul . . . That is my attitude when I write prefaces. My newspaper critics may seem incapable of anything better than the trash they write; but I believe that they are capable enough and only lack instruction."

From which it may be gathered that G. B. S. has narrowed his Swiftian aspiration to vex mankind—till now he is almost content if he succeeds in vexing only a critic or two. Perhaps the decision to direct his still ambient invective at a relatively articulate group that can at least talk back, is a sign of increasing sweetness. At any rate it is pleasanter than it would be to see his haughty spirit relapse into the shallow black pool of an old man's misanthropy.

Of the three plays in question, "The Simpleton of the Unexpected Isles" is a Socialist's vision of judgment day. "The Six of Calais" is the same Socialist's version of a Plantagenet monarch as a rather plausible gangster. The third and best concerns itself with the general problem of bosses and dictators—what to do with them? The question is dealt with in a torrential preface and three acts of brimstone recrimination and fustian, only to be left unanswered in the end. Obviously the dramatist has struck a snag here, for he instinctively likes even plutocratic dictators better than ordinary men. Yet knowing that they are a political fallacy and a social abomination he finds it necessary to strike out in all directions, finally pinning the blame on Victorian snobbery.

"The Millionairess," as this play is called, is the only one of the lot that has pretensions to dramatic construction and interest. It is a comedy of character, more or less in the Ben Jonson manner. It's invective is good fun. The characters are absurd and somewhat amusing. The "Preface on Bosses" is excellent chatter and reveals that the dramatist's position on the lunatic fringe hasn't reduced his ability to produce a fluent crackle of English prose. The notions dispersed are original and suggestive, as Shaw's notions generally are, though they lack integration and retain more rant than constructive sense. Disregarding all that insofar as possible, the whole piece is good satire by any standard, and the subject of bosses (what used to be called "great men") continues to be a fascinating one—whether for rumination or for diatribe.

What one resents about these late plays is not the ideas that are intended to be shocking. For the most part these seem pretty sound anthropology and good entertainment. One does resent the sloppy construction—much as one resents the fleck of slobber on an untidy old man's bristle. M. P.

THE WHITE TICKET. By Michael Stern. (National Library Press, New York.)

THIS book, which might be described as the story back of past and recent headlines in the New York vice inquiry, does not make pleasant reading and does not purport to possess any literary merit. Nor does it contain any sentimental gestures. But it reduces statistics and ambiguities to case histories, utilizes records of the District Attorney's office to portray vice conditions in the language of the streets.

Recitals by members of the underworld, transcripts of tapped telephone conversations, emphasize in stark crudity the vicious nature of a commercialized traffic which cannot be clothed in sentimental phrases or dismissed with sets of statistics.

To the reader who views "The White Ticket" in any other light than idle curiosity it may bring home certain social and political implications whch too often are passed over with nothing done about them. Such a purpose would account for its only legitimate reason for publication. S. R. McC.

An Illuminating View Of Modern Europe

A POLITICAL AND CULTURAL HISTORY OF MODERN EUROPE. Two Volumes. By Carlton J. H. Hayes. (The Macmillan Co., New York.)

HISTORIANS may talk about their science, but the fact is history is more art than science. Part of every story is the man who tells it. It can hardly be otherwise. Exceptions apart, there are two kinds of history, one written from "a point of view," often with passion or prejudice, which makes for exciting reading, and the other written so prosily—objectively is the word—as to induce slumber in the midst of world-shaking events. To compose a third kind, neither distorted nor dehumanized, and withal readable, requires erudition, culture, interests and a sense of proportion that encompass the sum total of human existence, and these qualities must have double force for a combined political and cultural history which carries on the tale of who was king and when, who fought whom and why, and weaves into the narrative the concomitant developments in economics, mechanics, arts and sciences and philosophy. To state the field is to disarm criticism of any reasonably successful treatment of it.

Carlton J. H. Hayes, professor of history at Columbia University, has written a political and cultural history of modern Europe in two large volumes. The first deals with the three centuries including the Protestant Reformation and the beginnings of the Industrial Revolution, that is, roughly, from 1500 to 1800. The second, somewhat longer, charts the Industrial Revolution, the rise of Socialism and the dynastic changes down through the conquest of Ethiopia. It is engrossing reading.

Touch it where one will, there is always an alive, contemporary quality. "The wise need not be told that man without man's past is meaningless," says Prof. Hayes, paraphrasing some one else.

Although Prof. Hayes does not especially single it out for emphasis, and is not in the least doctrinaire about it, the economic thread is of greatest single pertinence today. Back in volume I, in the agricultural sixteenth century, were laid the foundations for the capitalistic society and the profit system of today. After a recurring mention or two, these vague beginnings take on form and meaning in volume II. The World War comes and goes, chaos and disillusionment and the paradox of poverty in the midst of plenty follow.

"Early industrial machines," says Prof. Hayes, "were vastly more productive than previous hand-tools, and later machines were progressively more productive." As they became "more and more automatic, they needed fewer human hands to operate them. . . . The latest stage of industrialization of the world under capitalistic auspices was demonstrating a most disconcerting fact, that as the production of goods grows more efficient, the distribution and consumption of goods grow less efficient"—because displaced workmen have not the money to buy the products of the machines that took their jobs. Thus it is that the Mussolinis and the Hitlers derive their followings. Prof. Hayes is a historian, not a prophet. He does not solve the problem he states, but he does conclude on a non-pessimistic, if not a hopeful note:

" . . . Change is always relative. . . . it always appears to be much greater at close range than from a distance. . . In all probability, the present age of war, dictatorship and chaotic art and science will seem to later generations progressively less revolutionary than it appears to us. And even to us it has significance only in relationship to, and as a continuation of, the whole story of mankind." H. T. M.

KNOCKOUT. By Charles Francis Coe. (J. B. Lippincott & Co., Philadelphia.)

CRIMINOLOGIST COE (as he calls himself in Who's Who) has laid aside his machine gun for a typewriter, and ground out another. This time he turns a professional strong man into a prize ring champion, just as was done with Carnera, for instance. Incidentally, he unveils the iniquities of the professional boxing game. Coe is the author of "G-Men," etc. This is one of the et cetera. P. C.

NATIONAL FAVORITES

According to reports received from 70 principal booksellers throughout the country, the books most in demand now stand as follows in the order of their popularity:

Fiction.

Sparkenbroke, by Charles Morgan, reported by 67 bookstores; The Last Puritan, by George Santayana, 61; The Thinking Reed, by Rebecca West, 30; Jamaica Inn, by Daphne du Maurier, 28; The Weather in the Streets, by Rosamond Lehmann, 23; Honey in the Horn, by H. L. Davis, 22.

Non-Fiction.

Wake Up and Live, by Dorothea Brande, reported by 56 stores; Around the World in Eleven Years, by Patience, Richard and John Abbe, 55; The Way of a Transgressor, by Negley Farson, 53; Inside Europe, by John Gunther, 36; Man the Unknown, by Alexis Carrel, 34; North to the Orient, by Anne Morrow Lindbergh, 24.

During the past week "Sparkenbroke" has increased its lead over "The Last Puritan" by five reports. Rosamond Lehmann's novel has made a remarkable advance, having had only three reports last week. The Abbe youngsters, in third place last week, now lack only one report to tie for first place in the non-fiction list.

Very Serious Minded Lot!

THE BEST SHORT STORIES: 1936. By Edward J. O'Brien. (Houghton Mifflin Co. Boston.)

"I LIKE to think of these annual collections," writes Edward J. O'Brien in his preface, "as records of the changing moods and emotions of the American people." If the current collection is a true record, the American people are changing into an alarmingly serious-minded lot; for nearly all the stories contained herein are preoccupied with the psychology of gloomily abnormal people, with proletarian problems or down-to-earth subjects arising from current events. Whimsy and zest for plot are scarcely to be found at all, and except in the stories of Karlton Kelm, Dorothy McCleary and Michael Fessier, pathos, too, is transmuted into stark tragedy.

This is not to say, of course, that these stories, or studies, are not worthy of the heading under which they are collected. Dorothy Canfield's "The Murder on Jefferson Street," to take one example, is a brilliant study of "complex and unstable beings perilously feeling their way, step by step, along the knife-edge narrow path of equilibrium that winds across the morasses and clings to the precipitous cliffs of life." Such propaganda stories as Ray Flannagan's and S. S. Field's tales of inhuman Negro lynchings, Albert Maltz's touching story of the miner dying of silicosis, and Karlton Kelm's Dickensian sketch of the underprivileged family of an unemployed father are absorbing and as successful as propaganda stories can be. William Faulkner's "That Will Be Fine" testifies to his wide acquaintance with unattractive people, but is an excellent example of a story told from a child's viewpoint.

The unrelieved gloom and sordidness, however, become comical (especially to those whose taste for the earthy has been ruined by the satire of "Cold Comfort Farm") in Field's "Torrent of Darkness" and Erling Larsen's "A Kind of Sunset."

Besides the stories which Mr. O'Brien considers the best published last year, this book contains biographical sketches, addresses of magazines publishing short stories, articles on short stories in American periodicals and other data of value to writers. S. F. K.

Big Shots Speak

SURPLUS PROPHETS. (The Viking Press, New York.)

IT IS a waste of valuable time and good paper for long articles and books to be written about the shams of public life. A little research among the clippings will do it quite as effectively, and far more amusingly, by letting the Big Shots speak for themselves. That method has been adopted by the anonymous compiler of this little book, and the keenest cross-examiner couldn't begin to entangle the Hon. gentlemen any worse than they entangle themselves in the quotations chosen.

There is Alf M. Landon, for instance, who as aspirant to the Republican nomination now speaks harshly of experimentation and regimentation. But Landon as Governor of Kansas favored co-operation with the New Deal, and even thought well of "trial and error and experience." And Landon the oil man urged a dictator for the industry.

There is Al Smith, who in 1936 applies the epithet of "Socialistic" to the administration, but who in 1928 remarked that, when arguments cannot be met fairly and squarely, "the old stock argument of Socialism" is always raised, but that everyone knows "it is simply subterfuge and camouflage."

To William Randolph Hearst, Al Smith was a "Morgan agent" in 1933; in 1935, Hearst was urging the same Smith to head a new party. To Jouett Shouse, the unbalanced budget now is a sin of the Democrats; the same Shouse, before he became head of the Liberty League, appraised it as "the direct result of 11 years of Republican misrule."

Changing the mind is, of course, a human privilege, but it is sometimes difficult for observers of the process to keep a straight face. This book, reminiscent of "Oh Yeah?," a similar compendium of unwittingly funny statements on prosperity and the depression, presents many a startling about-face by the great and near-great. One thing is lacking, however—contrasting quotations from the New Dealers themselves. but perhaps that would have made the book too bulky. Anyhow, there's an idea, waiting for some alert researcher to put it to use. F. G.

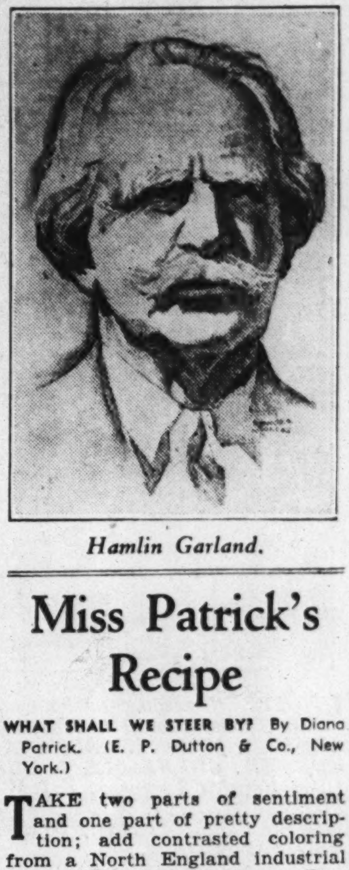
"Outlaw Phenomena"

Famous Writer Records Experiments



Hamlin Garland.

FORTY YEARS OF PSYCHIC RESEARCH. By Hamlin Garland. (The Macmillan Company, New York.)

RECENTLY a lecturer, discussing the social question with an audience on the "open forum" plan, was asked by one of the crowd: "Are you a Socialist, or maybe a Communist?" Having evidently not yet achieved the hard and glittering certainties of either the negatively or positively dogmatic in his consideration of livable human relationships, the speaker replied: "My friend, I dislike being called names!"

No doubt he had in mind the meaning of the wise old saying, "Give a dog a bad name and hang him." Presumably he was aware, as most seem not to be, that many terms of potentially vital import may be likened to empty bottles into which anything can be poured, from pure water to carbolic acid. Because the shapes are familiar, it is too commonly assumed that the content is identical. Perhaps most honest arguments grow out of this unconsidered assumption. At least it is not uncommon to overhear heated discussions in which the principals employ the same terms charged with very different meanings, often—perhaps generally—concocted of little more than emotion, prejudice, the inertia of intellectual habit.

Was it not for this that Socrates spent his life—to insist upon the importance of definition? We are still thinking largely in terms of tags, mistaking these for the things themselves; and probably most, or maybe all, of us shall continue to do so in a greater or less degree.

These remarks do not lack pertinence in considering the matter of psychical research. Express a serious interest in that field of inquiry, and the dominant response in the mind of almost any hearer, whether sympathetic or antagonistic in attitude, may be expressed by the words "spiritualism," "ghost." The positively over-credulous will approve with enthusiasm; the negatively over-credulous (and this expression deserves consideration) will as violently disapprove. Yet each may conceivably be wholly wrong in his response to the emotional stimulus of an expression that may well mean something vastly different.

It is the value of this thoroughly sane work by Hamlin Garland to leave in the mind of the serious reader, of either persuasion, a healthy view of the matter. For the negatively over-credulous, who simply deny that the strange phenomena under consideration occur, this record of 40 years is important. It is perhaps equally important for those who may have leaped to the conclusion that the "spiritistic hypothesis" is the only possible explanation of the phenomena.

Forty-five years ago Garland was one of a small group that founded the American Society for Psychic Research in Boston. He himself was decidedly skeptical of the apparently fantastic business, as were several of his associates. It was his duty to record all experiments, which were conducted under the strictest conditions the group was able to devise. But, as seems always to happen as a result of systematic investigation in this field, he and his co-workers soon lost all doubt as to the actuality of the phenomena.

The author's intense interest, developed at that time, has continued, and what we have here is taken from his records of hundreds of experiments concerned with all known phases of the subject. Those who are more or less familiar with the records of the British society, or with any of the major works on the subject, of which Myers' "Human Personality" is still perhaps the most impressive, will find nothing new here. But they will find a wholly unprejudiced and unemotional presentation of the phenomena.

It is clear that the author is not moved by wishful thinking. At the age of 75, with most of his friends and many of his loved ones gone, and himself approaching the end of life, he has not been able to accept the conclusion that the astonishing phenomena he has witnessed necessarily signify survival of the ego after death. On the contrary, he is inclined to suspect that the whole field is one for an extended science of biology. His only insistence is upon the actuality of the phenomena and their fundamental importance in any attempt to extend our understanding of ourselves. J. G. N.

Miss Patrick's Recipe

WHAT SHALL WE STEER BY? By Diana Patrick. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

TAKE two parts of sentiment and one part of pretty description; add contrasted coloring from a North England industrial city and the idyllic Thames valley; put in vigorous industrialists who are diamonds in the rough, exquisite creatures (male or female) who are gold-plated, a heroine who is gold through and through and "another woman"; add young love and its pangs; stir in plenty of romance in the safe style of Jane Austen; flavor with a pinch of sugar; beat until the mixture just begins to be froth—and you will have a good recipe for a Diana Patrick novel.

Miss Patrick (her real name is Mrs. Desamea Wilson and she is an Englishwoman) herself discovered the formula in 1920, and has been using it, often at the rate of two books a year, ever since. "What Shall We Steer By?" is not her best novel, but it is a representative one.

In this particular book, they laughed when the heroine sat down to write, but when she had produced three successful novels in two years and rehabilitated the family fortunes they proclaimed her a literary genius. Like many geniuses, however, she was wedded to her art rather than to her complete washout of a husband, who soon fell in love with another woman. The heroine gracefully released him, put the past behind her, and looked toward better things.

"What shall we steer by" when our hearts have led us astray?—this is the problem of the novel. By our heads? No, says the heroine (whose heart had led her into a wrong and too hasty marriage), women must trust their hearts; but the courageous woman, when she has read her heart too superficially, will rectify her mistake and steer back to a happier course.

If you expect of your novels a penetrating criticism of life, therefore, this book may not satisfy you. But the thousands of persons who buy the Patrick books—and Diana Patrick, her publishers say, has never written an unsuccessful book—will find in her latest novel what they expect. If you want a book that is pleasant rather than challenging, a swift story that reads well in a hammock on a hot afternoon, a good bet for cousin Anabel's birthday present—depend upon Diana Patrick. Memorabilia of a Man-Hunter

RIDING FOR TEXAS. By Tyler Mason. (Reynal & Hitchcock, Inc., New York.)

WHEN hell and high water threatened to stop Ranger Bill McDonald, he would scoop up a bucket of water and charge straight into hell. That was Bill McDonald all over.

Capt. William Jesse McDonald, Company B, Texas Rangers, was an artist. He plotted his campaigns and laid his plan of attack as a painter his perspective, and hungered for the final effect. He was deliberate but not dilatory. He studied details with such meticulous care that he knew precisely what was going to happen. He succeeded largely in eliminating chance.

Bill usually went after bad men in a buckboard, as he wanted plenty of room for his prisoners. He would lift his frontier nose over a little rise, get the layout, slither through the cacti and mesquite, walk plumb into a nest of outlaws and tell them they were through. After a squint at his twin forty-fives they usually agreed with him and, at his command, "reached." Even in his tightest spots Bill's humor never lagged.

If there was anything human Bill hated as much as an outlaw it was a lyncher. He had a way with mobs. His hypnotic eyes and soft "Go home now," sometimes emphasized by his ready Winchester, were too much for a self-righteous gang of misdirected minds. Politics often defeated him, mobs never.

The fame of Bill McDonald reached Washington. He guarded President Theodore Roosevelt during a Southwestern trip in 1905; and in the 1912 presidential campaign performed the same service for Woodrow Wilson, who later appointed McDonald marshal for Northern Texas.

Capt. Bill McDonald's biography was written a quarter-century ago by Albert Bigelow Paine. This book is not intended to supersede that. It is a collection of short stories related to the author by Col. Edward M. House and never before put into a book. No dates are given, and the names of people and places are, in most cases, changed to meet the demands of sensitive Texans. As history the book has slight value; as entertainment it's a romp. Among its few faults are the tendency to use old forms, the occasional use of slang too modern for frontier mouths, and the use of dashes in place of the delicious cuss words common in early hell-fire Texas. Music as Language

THE PURSUIT OF MUSIC. By Walford Davies. (Thomas Nelson and Sons, New York.)

THE persistent geniality of this book makes it a little difficult as a subject of consistent and consecutive reading. Too often one feels that the avoidance of dryness has been accomplished at the cost of explicitness. Mr. Davies is too generous with his fanciful allusions, too rich in analogies. But he protests his love too much, it is not because he is trying to disguise the thinness of his erudition. He knows music—knows its nature and its voluminous literature. Any one with a little patience will therefore find his book a sufficiently rewarding one, even though he will sometimes be annoyed at having to read a sentence twice before realizing that the meaning is quite simple.

In discussing the nature of music, Mr. Davies makes it clear, at the outset, that there is a quality in organized sound which should be understood if enjoyment of it is to be complete. Music, he says in effect, appeals to us both as audible beauty and as a language. The distinction between the two is important for the reason that millions of people, including many musicians, have only a vague understanding of music as language. These millions give themselves over almost wholly to acoustical or sensuous enjoyment of music, and regard any other consideration as stuff—and rather perverse and sickly stuff—for scholars. Yet music definitely has something to say in the way that poetry has—something that can be considered separately from the physical effect that the sound makes on the hearer's nerve ends.

Mr. Davies could have made more of this point than he does. But having implanted the idea of music as a language, he proceeds to an examination of its grammar and rhetoric and its vocabularies.

The discussion of phrasing is particularly good. Mr. Davies compares the musician's phrase to the painter's brush stroke, an exact and striking analogy. And there are many such—too many. Mr. Davies would have been more illuminating, this reviewer feels, if he had tried less hard to be so.

Mostly Mud

NEW YORK DISSECTED. By Walt Whitman. Introduction and notes by Emory Holloway and Ralph Adimari. (Rufus Rockwell Wilson, Inc., New York.)

"TALL, large, rough-looking man, in a journeyman carpenter's uniform. Coarse, sanguine complexion; strong, bristly, grizzled beard; singular eyes, of a semi-transparent, indistinct light blue, and with that sleepy look that comes when the lid rests half way down over the pupil; careless, lounging gait. Walt Whitman, the sturdy, self-conscious microcosmic, prose-poetical author of that incongruous hash of mud and gold—'Leaves of Grass.'"

Thus, like a mural painter inserting his own visage in a group scene, does Walt Whitman describe Walt Whitman in one of the series of articles written for a New York weekly in 1856, a year after the appearance of the "Leaves."

With a few exceptions, the articles here collected appear to be what are known to the trade as pot boilers, and the reader cannot help wondering if there be any magazine in New York today that would provide a market for them.

Some of the sketches, however, show the good gray poet as one would expect to find him. "Street Yarn," for instance, has him gazing into the faces of passersby in Broadway and deducing from their appearance their character and professions. Turning from the general to the specific, he gives us excellent brief sketches of many of the city's famous.

In addition to 11 Whitman articles republished for the first time, the authors have provided copious and interesting notes, and several early reviews of "Leaves of Grass." They have done a careful job of compilation and annotation, and to the true Whitman enthusiast anxious to add to his library all the mud, as well as the gold, of his favorite poet, a numbered copy of this limited edition may be worth the price.

THE LEMON FARM. By Martin Boyd. (W. W. Norton & Co., New York.)

YOUNG love and its destruction by well-meaning righteousness has been the theme of many stories; but few authors have been able to recapture the fleeting beauty of the theme and endow it with the touching pathos which is its due. Nor have many discovered the real tragedy that lies back of its destruction by those who, perhaps unconsciously, attempt to justify their secret quarrels with life.

Michael and Davina met by chance in an English fishing village and enjoyed a brief Paul and Virginia summer. They sailed and swam together, explored Silver Island, loved each other and planned to run away to Cyprus where they would spend their remaining days in golden content looking after a lemon farm. The gossips, who were either safely married or beyond temptation, fell upon this happiness like a flock of shrieking gulls. As a result, Davina went to her death in the Bay and Michael became a wanderer. In the entire village they had only one champion, and that was elderly Miss Cassie, who was herself an outcast because of her spiritualist tendencies.

The book has passages of arresting beauty. Throughout there is an indefinable quality, as though the author were reluctant to be either wholly serious or entirely light; and this is part of its charm. With very deft handling, the author has managed to preserve the sensitive bloom of his theme.

Cezanne to Picasso

THE SIGNIFICANT MODERNS AND THEIR PAINTINGS. By C. J. Bulliet, (Covici-Friede, New York.)

C. J. BULLIET, who is art critic for the Chicago Daily News, has undertaken in "The Significant Moderns and Their Paintings" to provide capsule appraisals of some 67 modern painters in breezy anecdotal narrative, accompanied by full page reproductions of 276 of their paintings.

The volume is a guide to that exciting and none too well charted movement in painting known as "Modernism," which began, according to Bulliet's calculation, with Cezanne, and ended when Picasso reached the peak of his powers.

Bulliet raises Cezanne to "solitary grandeur" among the Moderns, and ranks him with Giotto, El Greco, Rubens and Rembrandt, as one of the greatest artists of all time. Other "giants" of Modernism, outranked only by Cezanne, Bulliet says, are Seurat, Renoir, Van Gogh, Gaugin, Matisse and Picasso, whom he rates with Titian, Leonardo and Velasquez.

On a somewhat lesser peak are the "solitary rebels"—Toulouse-Lautrec, Redon, Rousseau, Rouault, Modigliani, Chagall, and Utrillo.

Below these are the "minor aristocracy," among whom he ranks Derain, Braque, Vlaminck, Leger, Segonzac, Kisling, Picabia, and Miro.

Bulliet disposes of 46 others under such headings as "The Women," "The Rank and File," "The Germans," and "A Solitary Englishman." Each of them gets a page or so of biographical notes and critical appraisal, along with one or two pictures reproduced in the back of the book.

"After the significant work of Picasso," Bulliet writes, "there has been only a mulling over and over and more or less feeble recombination of the inventions and discoveries of the Moderns when they were in their creative prime. Everything, apparently, has been brought to canvas and marble that the modern genius was capable of.

"Modernism will now go the way of its immediate predecessor, Impressionism, measuring time until some new impulse is born into the world. It may be for decades; if civilization slows down, it may be for even a boresome century."

Since the reproductions occupy so much space in a rather handsomely made book, one may be pardoned the wish that they had been better done. Much is lost, of course, in any black and white reproduction of modern painting, but the offset lithographs which illustrate Bulliet's book do not capture all the definition and detail possible in monochromatic reproduction.

Soldiers of the Spirit

CRUSADERS OF THE JUNGLE. By J. Fred Rippy and Jean Thomas Nelson. Illustrated by Willis Physioc. (University of North Carolina Press, Chapel Hill.)

BARTOLOME DE LAS CASAS has been famous for centuries as the missionary who thought that the Indians of America should be treated as human beings; but there were hundreds of other religious, unknown to most of us, who devoted their lives to the Christianizing of the natives of South America, and to the amelioration of their lives. "Crusaders of the Jungle" is the story of these men.

It is the opinion of Prof. Bolton, quote the authors, that "whoever . . . undertakes to interpret the forces by which Spain extended her rule, her language, her law, and her traditions, over the frontiers of her vast American possessions, must give close attention to the missions, for in that work they constituted a primary agency. . . . In the Spanish colonies the men to whom fell the task of extending and holding the frontiers were the conquistador, the presidial soldier, and the missionary." In their review of the activities of the missionaries, the authors proceed from an introductory summary of the discovery of South America, of the conquests, and of the general condition of the Indian, to a more detailed account of the principal groups of missions in the Spanish territories from the foundation to the end of the eighteenth century.

The authors do not pretend that they are writing history; this is a chronicle. It is true that they are inclined to accept as literal truth a good many doubtful stories of the miraculous. They write from the accounts of the missionaries themselves and from that point of view without attempting any critical evaluation (except in the last chapter). Nevertheless, the reader learns much of the folkways of the South American Indians and he is certainly led to revise his ideas of the importance of the missionary fathers as protectors of the natives against the cruelty and oppression of the laity, who were mostly concerned for their own pecuniary profit. The story of their activities is essentially an heroic one. These men gave up their lives to an unceasing struggle with the wilderness, and the first among them, at least, suffered much from change of climate, strange food, disease, and the difficulty of making themselves understood by natives.

The authors have told their story effectively. The book is handsomely bound, is rich with illustrations by Willis Physioc, is carefully documented, and capably indexed.

"Fury"* Is Sweeping The Nation! . . . .
"Watch out for the furore "Fury" creates when it opens," writes Louis Sobol in the N.Y. Evening Journal! "'Fury' is better than 'Fugitive From A Chain Gang'" says Walter Winchell! Hollywood critics say "Fury" tops "Big House" and all the smash dramas of the past for sheer dramatic power. Everything points to "Fury" as the dramatic sensation of this season!
"Fury" introduces a new and unusually daring theme for the movies. It's truly great entertainment, too, with a love story that will reach deep into every woman's heart. But most of all, "Fury" is a startling, ruthless drama of YOUR times...of a boy and girl caught in a maelstrom of today's angry passions and flaming hates ...of thwarted love, mob lust, mob f-u-r-y! You may question but you can't ignore "Fury!" You'll never forget it! We urge everyone to see it.

Municipal Opera Idea Spreads Over Country

Cities of South and Middle West Get Busy Building Amphitheaters — Much Activity in Prospect for 1937 Season.

LAUNCHED into its eighteenth season with the speedy and colorful "Kid Boots," Municipal Opera again finds itself in a unique position among American theatrical enterprises. Nowhere else is to be found a 12 weeks' season of light opera and musical comedy with the professional attributes of the Forest Park entertainment, or anything approaching it.

Yet the St. Louis venture has stirred inspirations on every side, and next summer reasonably may find a dozen outdoor operas in operation. Closest home is a project for Kansas City, abandoned only last Monday and then because the city fathers agreed with the experts they called in—Laurence Schwab, producing director, and Paul Beisman, public relations manager, from St. Louis— that there was insufficient time to get an organization going this year.

The Kansas City idea is a unique adaptation of the St. Louis experiment. With a large new civic auditorium at their disposal, Kansas City backers plan to redecorate a large section of the interior to simulate the outdoors at night. They would then have the al fresco atmosphere, without the hazards of Missouri thunderstorms.

Detroit, which last summer saw Shubert spectacles on a portable stage set up in Navin baseball field and took to the idea rather well, could not round up financial support for the same sort of thing this year. The question of an ampitheater seems to be the main concern in the motor city, however, and plans for 1937 are predicated on getting one ready in the next 12 months.

Toledo hopes to get a 5000-seat ampitheater completed for four or six weeks of light opera beginning about Aug. 1, probably under Shubert management.

In making an annual swing around the South last month in the interests of Municipal Opera, Beisman found himself as often in conference with backers of similar ventures as in advertising his own. New Orleans plans an outdoor theater in one of its parks, Memphis and San Antonio are interested in light musical entertainment. There have been no requests for grand opera.

A RIVAL to Municipal Opera, in size at least, is the extravaganza Billy Rose will be putting on at Fort Worth after July 1. With Dallas getting all the glory this year for the Texas Centennial, the citizens of Fort Worth, 30 miles away, decided to whoop things up on their own account. Now they are boasting that the "Frontier Centennial" of which Rose is impresario, is the big show of the biggest state this year.

With $5,000,000 of good Fort Worth currency as his bankroll, Rose is taking his huge circus-musical comedy, "Jumbo," direct from New York to Fort Worth, to put it on in an outdoor cafe setting where there will be tables and chairs for 4500 persons, a revolving stage 150 feet in diameter, 250 chorus girls and Sally Rand.

Dramatic festivals, indoors and outdoors, will be found by tourists all the way from California to the Atlantic seaboard as usual, and along the Atlantic the scores of barn theaters are cleaning out the haylofts for a place to store costumes, scenery or gallery customers. But musical shows, with large outlays for choruses and musicians as well as principals, are not to be brought forth as easily.

With Municipal Opera grounded in 18 years' experience, it might be expected that suggestions would be made for this unit to be the parent enterprise of a chain of summer operas. The idea is not a new one. It bobbed up with Municipal Opera's second season and has been repeated annually.

The local organization is willing to give advice, has given it and raised no objection to Schwab, a Broadway producer in his own right, investigating the invitations he received from Kansas City, Toledo, Detroit and other cities. But it definitely sets foot down on being connected with any other group, or making arrangements to exchange shows, talent or staff.

Committees in other centers are told that Municipal Opera depends on the guarantors here who stand back of it financially, a permanent office set-up and a more or less permanent body of musicians and young men and women chorus members who can be recruited each spring.

Faced with a difficult repertory problem, since Broadway itself is no longer supplying operettas and musical comedy, Municipal Opera could expect to benefit from a light opera revival which would attract writers and composers to the field. Until then, it must rely on its past successes and what new works, such as "Glamorous Night," that it can find abroad.

A week from tomorrow night, it will bring back Rudolf Friml's "The Three Musketeers," which it has staged only once previously, in 1931. In the cast will be Vivienne Segal, Joseph Macaulay, John Clarke and Detmar Poppen, all of the original cast, Guy Robertson, Georgie Price, Ruby Mercer, Ray Middleton, Albert Mahler, Noel Francis, Bertram Peacock, Helene Denizon, John Cherry, Inez Harvot and Earle MacVeigh.

Community Group Play Contest.

A one-act play contest, open to residents of St. Louis and St. Louis County, has been announced by the reorganized Community Players, non-professional group in the county. The two best plays in the contest, which ends Sept. 15, will be produced during the coming winter. Roberta Miller, 263 West Big Bend road, Webster Groves, is in charge of the competition.

Revue at Highlands.

A song and dance revue, in the form of a bathing beach style show, will be an added entertainment attraction at Forest Park Highlands today. A junior section, with a cast of 50 children, will be presented at 4 p. m. and the senior section, with 50 young women, at 9 p. m.

Double Bills at Local Houses Mark Annual Clean-Up of Leftovers

By COLVIN McPHERSON.

THE screen is taking its siesta. In this nonth of the cinema year, which is one for balancing the books and making resolutions, the ultimate consumer has to shift for himself and to pick out, from one double bill and another, the kind of amusement he favors.

"Trouble For Two," at Loew's, tenders Robert Montgomery and a Stevenson story — one originally called "A Tale From the Suicide Club. Adventure of the Young Man With the Cream Tarts"—which is too much for any marquee, and bring on your biggest. In "Trouble For Two," Montgomery is the Prince Florizel of Bohemia who journeys to London for adventure before marrying somebody he is quite sure he won't like. In the fogs around the Thames, he finds the scent of an adventure which he trails to that unique fraternity, the "Suicide Club." From then on, he is in and out of danger as often as Jane Arden. The screen play writers have expanded Stevenson's imaginations into even more fantastic happenings, to bring in Rosalind Russell, romance and foul plotters against Prince Florizel's future in the king business. Commendably, E. E. Clive is employed to represent Montgomery's father, and Frank Morgan his protective companion, an original Stevenson invention. Reginald Owen is president of the club. Not only Montgomery, but all the other principals play "Suicide Club" with evident relish and appreciation for its capricious qualities, so it is a pity the idea can't be worked over by Elsa Maxwell or someone for an excellent party game.

Uniquely inappropriate at this season is Loew's second film, "Three Wise Guys," which is a Christmas story written by Damon Runyon. A wealthy young man, Robert Young, marries a shady lady, Betty Furness, and her cast-off criminal companions beset the path of true love, finally turning chicken-hearted before a babe in the manger. It was a good story when Runyon wrote it, it still keeps sympathy, and it has the comic gifts of Raymond Walburn and Herman Bing to help it. A short subject, "Hit and Run Driver," at Loew's, is a highly dramatic treatment of a distinctly modern phase of crime. In its direct approach and tense handling, it might well serve as instruction to feature producers.

Early to Bed.

THE tenth Mary Boland-Charlie Ruggles film, "Early to Bed," at the Shubert, is a respectably aged farce played to ultimate abilities of the co-stars. Charlie is the timid underling in Robert Wade's glass eye factory. For years he has wanted to marry his Gibson girl sweetheart, Miss Boland, but always has been appalled by the thought of revealing his somnambulism. Comes a day when the worm turns. Charlie decides to take a chance, elopes with Mary and flaunts his employer's authority. But he is secretly after the big contract that George Barbier can give and heads for the resort where Barbier is taking a rest cure. Things are kept in a stir by the addition of burglary, murder and Charlie's hitch-hiking with the moon and Miss Boland has enough lines tossed her way to keep the customers from going home. In the case of the second feature "Too Many Parents" most of them I fear would take the easiest way out. Hollywood youngsters are brought together in a military academy to eat their little hearts out because they have no fathers and mothers.

Private Number.

NOW that Robert Taylor has become news, and his ascendancy is being compared to that of Clark Gable, it is interesting to observe how the gentleman is displayed to picture audiences. "Private Number," at the Fox, is not much different from "Small Town Girl" in which he last appeared, so the point holds. He is Prince Charming of the sport phaeton, the cabin cruiser and the elegant tailoring. In "Private Number" he marries his mother's personal maid secretly and goes back to college. When the baby comes Loretta is cast out by his wealthy parents, and misunderstandings move the lovers the proper distance apart. The villain is Basil Rathbone, butler in charge of the menage, who rises to fury when Loretta, an "obsession" with him, gives him no encouragement early in the film. But Bob and Loretta have many blissful moments together, and you should see him kiss her in the hammock scenes, and carry her down steps and that sort of thing. And when he learns the truth and knocks the bad butler over the table—oh, boy, oh, boy, oh, boy! The Fox's assisting picture is "Human Cargo," in which Claire Trevor and Brian Donlevy set out to solve alien smuggling, with a few side bets on which is the better newspaper reporter.

Palm Springs.

THE burdens of "Palm Springs" are cast on Frances Langford, at the Orpheum, and although the lady does her very best, by singing whenever things get too unbearably dull, her courage hardly succeeds. The story is a rather involved affair in which Frances, in search of her supposedly wealthy father, Sir Guy Standing, finds him acting as croupier in one of the palaces of wasted fortune at Southern California's popular hangout. Frances decides to become a golddigger in retaliation, and angles for a millionaire. Her plans are somewhat disturbed, however, by an acquaintance with Smith Ballew, a cowboy who sings at night and rents horses during the day. In time, Sir Guy turns the trick himself and settles the lariat on his daughter. "Murder by An Aristocrat"—a pretty common kind of homicide, at that—is the Orpheum's No. 2 selection. The Thatcher family is being blackmailed by one of its members, who knows a hatful of secrets, when somebody shoots him to death. And it turns out that one of the nicest Thatchers did it.

Grace Moore's light opera, "The Kign Steps Out," now moved to the Ambassador, is an exception to the film accumulations about town. Shrewdly directed by Josef von Sternberg, it is rollicking and refreshing entertainment.

Robert Montgomery and Rosalind Russell in "Trouble for Two," at Loew's Theater.

Tibetan Lamasery Built for Scenes In "Lost Horizon"

AFTER five months of construction work, the Shangri-La lamasery set for the screen production of "Lost Horizon" has been completed and scenes of the best-selling novel are being filmed daily under the direction of Frank Capra.

At Capra's insistence, the Tibetan retreat was built with natural lawns and gardens, a deep reflecting basin and active fountains. The entire outlay is therefore some 400 feet wide, with wings extending forward 300 feet. Vine-draped cliffs are combined with the formal setting.

To further carry out the idyllic atmosphere, the studio has hired Archie Beckingsdale, movie menagerie man, and 500 white pigeons. While scenes are being shot, Beckingsdale shoos the doves so that they flutter within camera range.

The stars of the production, incidentally, are Ronald Colman, Jane Wyatt and Isabel Jewell.

Jack Kirkland Named Producer for Studio

Jack Kirkland, former St. Louis newspaperman and author of the play, "Tobacco Road," is one of four writers for the Columbia studios who have been elevated to the rank of producers, in full charge of the pictures assigned to them. The others are Howard J. Green, who also was at one time on a St. Louis paper, Edward Chodorov and Sidney Buchman. Kirkland is at work on a picture tentatively titled, "Purple and Fine Linen," in which Jean Arthur will be starred.

The handsome young man (ask any woman!) is Robert Taylor, in "Private Number," at the Fox Theater.

Film Stars Learn How To Hold Radio Scripts

Mr. Gable Turns Trick With One Hand in His Pocket—Miss Dietrich Also Reads To Microphone With Greatest of Ease.

By H. H. NIEMEYER.

HOLLYWOOD, June 6.

WE WERE writing, last Sunday, about the way in which the stars put aside umbrellas and mackintoshes for rainy days. We can give you, today, a little line on how they are able to do it while building marble swimming pools and maintaining racing stables at the California tracks.

Just the other evening we were invited to the opening of a theater in Hollywood which has been taken over by a broadcasting chain for the sole purpose of making prospective customers around the world soap-conscious. Legitimate theaters are rather a drug on the market out here and that part of the expense wasn't very heavy. Maybe a bare $2000 a week. But after that the soap people cut loose. They engaged Cecil B. DeMille to stage a succession of once-a-week radio shows. Mr. DeMille is an expensive proposition. He demanded, and will get, $5000 a week for his part in the movement. Other capable directors could have been had for less money but Mr. DeMille has always been associated, in pictures, with bathtubs—that is what the middle initial of his name is said to stand for—and that looked like a big advantage to a soap campaign. Next Clark Gable and Marlene Dietrich were hired for the stellar roles in the opening drama. Mr. Gable and Miss Dietrich got $7500 apiece, a floral horseshoe and, it is presumed, a cake of soap for an hour's reading of their lines from a printed manuscript, for which a well-known writer was paid a comfortable sum. Then there was an orchestra, a good-sized supporting company, an applause director, a flock of technicians and announcers, to say nothing of the wire and mechanical costs. Next week Mr. Gable and Marlene will be replaced by William Powell and Myrna Loy who won't get quite as much money but the average cost of the hour's show will run, we would guess, about $50,000. That's more than it costs to put on a good play in New York with a star cast and a prospect of running a season or more.

Yes, movie and radio work is a good job—if you can get it.

THE BROADCASTING was tremendously interesting to watch. No costuming, no makeup, no scenery. Mr. Gable and Miss Dietrich and the rest of the company just sat in a row of chairs, up stage, and waited for their cues to step up to the microphones, manuscript in hand, and read their lines. Mr. DeMille, as befitted a director, stood up throughout. There was no acting on anybody's part. No emotion except by way of the voices. Miss Dietrich, without once changing her expression, held her manuscript in both hands. Mr. Gable, more at ease, hung on to his with one hand and kept the other in his trousers pocket. Mr. DeMille had a manuscript, too. In the radio game even a director is not trusted to ad lib. Everything is written out for him—and carefully timed.

In one exciting scene Gable was called upon to poke his commanding officer in the Foreign Legion in the jaw. "Take that, you cur!" said Mr. Gable. But he held onto his script and kept what might have been his swatting hand in his pocket. A property man on the sidelines hit a bass drum, or something, a resounding smack. The effect, over the air, was just the same, we daresay, as though Mr. Gable had cut loose.

It was something entirely new to us in the way of entertainment. Something new in the way of acting which we have been seeing, in all its forms, for about half a century. We are going to see all the soap dramas there are from now on.

MOTION pictures and motion picture audiences, year after year, run pretty true to form. Pistol pastorals attracted the first attention in the films or at least shared honors with the custard pies. Great train robbers, two-gun rustlers, murdering Arabs and other old time quick-trigger men gave way to modern gangsters, machine-gunners and bombers. The customers liked that sort of entertainment from the start. A picture with 10 sawed-off shotguns in it was twice as successful as one which boasted only five. Eventually Better Film Societies put an end to the killings on the ground that the pictures were glorifying crime and teaching the young idea how to shoot policemen. At least they thought they put an end to it. But the movie moguls had learned the boxoffice value of pocket cannons and to get around the ban divided the sidearms rather evenly between the law and the underworld. For every patrolman shot and killed it became necessary for his flatfooted partner to kill at least two gangsters. No longer was crime being glorified, the studios argued. The honors were going to the dicks so it was OK. G-men badges and G-men pistols replaced the Al Capone outfits in the toy shops and, so far, there has been no complaint. "Bullets or Ballots" is the newest of the uplift films. It is packing 'em in.

IN the Hollywood Whirl—Gladys George, who made such a hit on the stage this season in "Personal Appearance," has gone the way of all successful flesh. The movies have grabbed her and she will be starred in the flicker "Valiant Is the Word for Carrie" . . . And the stage tried to lure Owen Davis Jr. back to Broadway with a good offer for a summer show but the youngster's contract with R-K-O will keep him here . . . Warren William has bought his freedom from a Warner contract for $10,000 and will freelance. He wasn't satisfied with the line of parts he was getting . . . Joe E. Brown has passed up his China trip and will sail for Europe shortly . . . It had to happen. "Black Legion" will be made into a picture without delay by a major studio.

PREHISTORIC AMERICAN ROAD BECOMES MODERN HIGHWAY

An amazing prehistoric road map still visible in Clark County, Nevada.

How a Workers' Emergency Project and the Recent Finding of a Twenty-Thousand-Year-Old Skull in California Have Brought the Remote Past a Little Closer.

LOS ANGELES.

A CREW of WPA workers excavating for a storm drain recently turned up a human cranium buried 15 feet below the surface where the old channel of the Los Angeles River intersects Ballona Creek, in the Baldwin Hills section. The man whose spade had uncovered it stooped to examine his find, then tossed it with a chuckle to a fellow toiler. Presently the men were hurling the grim memento back and forth as if it had been an indoor baseball, shouting wisecracks about it as they played. The foreman confiscated it presently and had it delivered to the office of the Los Angeles County Sheriff, giving an accurate description of the spot where it had been unearthed. Deputies made an inspection, ruminating on the possibility that a murder had been committed. They planned a more exhaustive investigation. The skull was that of an old woman.

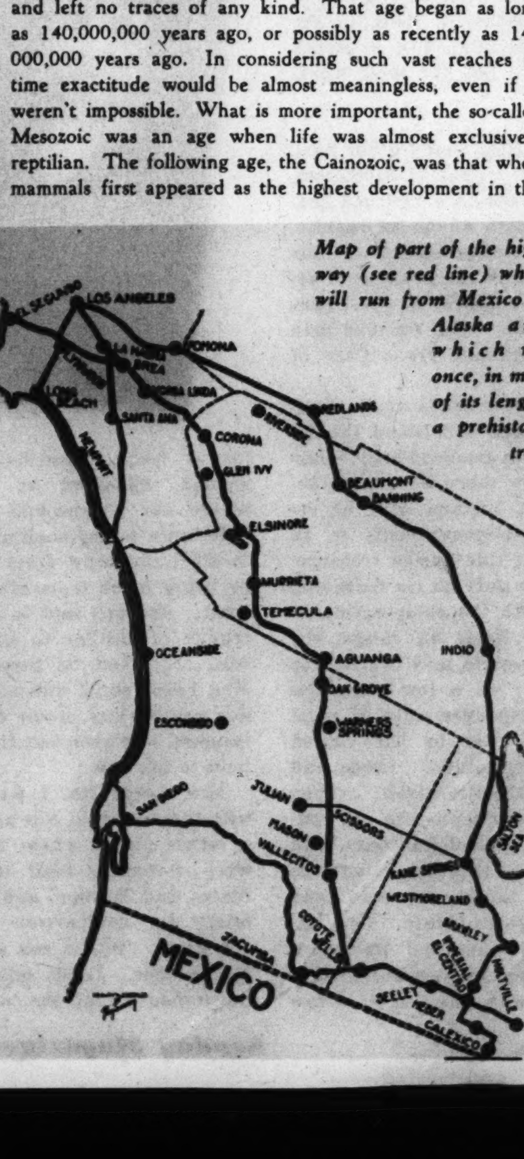
But if these sleuths were correct in their guess and a murder was really responsible for the old woman's demise, the case will have to stand on their books as unsolved. For when it seemed to criminologists that there was something peculiar about this clew and they decided to turn it over to anthropologists to determine what had been the race of the victim, it was immediately found that the corpus delicti had reposed in that spot for 200, possibly as long as 500 centuries.

The relic may have seemed an amusing joke to the ditch diggers and a dead-tired clew to the police. But to anthropologists it was more sensational than the most grisly and provocative murder in the year's news. A similar bit of human bone discovered in fragments in a Sussex gravel pit is guarded at the British Museum with greater care than is the most valuable gem in human possession, only scholars even being permitted to lay eyes on it. California anthropologists are doubtless quite as solicitous for the welfare of this one which received such scanty respect from its discoverers, for years ago one of the most sensational pre-glacial skulls turned up there (the Calaveras) occasioned world-wide conjecture and disputation before it was discovered that the piece that had been sent to Boston as the original find was spurious, and that the skull itself had been mislaid.

The geographical location of the Ballona skull (as it has been named) is nearly as important as the geological stratum in which it was found, for this links it up with the ancient highroad that prehistoric humanity traveled on its way from Asia to Mexico and the Southwest. It is still too early to draw conclusions from the new discovery and any imaginative generalization about it should be taboo. But it is safe to say that this will be another very important clew to the romantic puzzle of mankind's early origins and wanderings. That humanity traveled the ancient highroad through Southern California in the years before the last ice age has been known for some time. But the whole story of the tribes and races that warred and planted and hunted and loved in that misty past, is still a gigantic mystery told only in catches and fragments. The most trivial item becomes consequential when clews are so rare, and when a human relic is encountered, as this one was, in a layer older than that in which excavators from Yale and Harvard and the American Museum of Natural History have been discovering remains of dinosaurs, extinct ground sloths and wooly mammoths, its importance is obvious.

Before describing the skull and its implications more fully it is necessary to point out what is known about the highway near whose primitive course it was found. This route, which has as colorful a past as the ancient Roman roads through Europe and the Hellenistic caravan routes between China and the Mediterranean, is rich in signposts of antiquity. It is about to become a modern automobile highway from Alaska to Mexico, with various sections already completed, others under way.

And here it is necessary to turn the pages back still farther in order to focus the story in time . . . Man's first mammalian ancestors lived during the Mesozoic age and left no traces of any kind. That age began as long as 140,000,000 years ago, or possibly as recently as 14,000,000 years ago. In considering such vast reaches of time exactitude would be almost meaningless, even if it weren't impossible. What is more important, the so-called Mesozoic was an age when life was almost exclusively reptilian. The following age, the Cainozoic, was that when mammals first appeared as the highest development in the animal kingdom. The oldest creature that can be classified as man—or something resembling him—was the Pithecanthropus; only one example of his species has been found, and that at Trinil near Java. It can be assumed, though, that subhuman animals, of which one species was the ancestor of mankind, were developing from the time (about half a million years ago) of the Pithecanthropus, until about 20,000 B. C., when man was a well-developed species capable of shaping and using tools, of controlling fire and of hunting other animals for food. During that long stretch of time—the so-called Pleistocene Age—the world was invaded by four catastrophic glacial periods. It was in those timeless dawn years, during which America was four times turned into a half-arctic country, when the ice that covered the world took up so much of the water that oceans receded and great islands and possibly continents no longer in existence were formed, that the old woman of Ballona Creek lived.



Map of part of the highway (see red line) which will run from Mexico to Alaska and which was once, in most of its length, a prehistoric trail.

Dr. Ivan A. Lopatin, of the Archeological Department of the University of California, examining the skull found at Ballona Creek, California.

No one knows exactly when or how men first came to America. It seems more than likely that the species Homo sapiens originated in Eastern Asia and spread from there to the ends of the earth. Civilizations are known to have existed for about 7000 years and during some 90,000 years previous to that, man-like animals were living in what are now Germany and France and England.

THERE are those who speak of great continents in the Atlantic and Pacific Oceans and in spite of the fact that much that they say is dreamy and unsubstantial stuff, there is reason to believe that civilizations of a sort have been buried under the oceans, irretrievably. Whether the men of prehistoric America were descendants of these people of Atlantis and Lemuria or whether they crossed from Asia, as later prehistoric people did, is inconsequential now. The subject is brought up simply to indicate the vast time and space and change that antedates knowledge and history.

The Ballona skull is now being studied by Dr. A. O. Bowden, head of the anthropology department at the University of Southern California. Although the skull is really only a fossilized cranium or brain case, and has no face or jaw, he has been able to establish to his own satisfaction that it belonged to an old woman (the sutures are clearly visible) and that it had a cranial capacity of 1200 to 1300 cubic centimeters. Modern Europeans have a cranial capacity of about 1448, Negroes of 1344, American Indians of 1376, if these figures are any help. Naturally there are wide individual variations and there's no reason to suppose the Ballona skull was typical of its race. The shape of the cranium and the layer in which it was buried indicate, however, that the people it represents were similar in time and development to the Cro-Magnon men of the first stone age, which means that they lived during the last half of the Pleistocene (the glacial period.)

Men of this type were fairly well advanced. There were doubtless already several races of true men, all of them driving the subhuman varieties into extinction. They lived in close contact with other animals, too, eating such Young Billy Leeds Goes American and Romantic After Both His Mother and Himself Had Made Alliances With Greek Royalty.

The Princess Xenia who was the first Mrs. Leeds.

An informal beach snapshot of Mrs. Leeds.

NEW YORK.

THE spell of the Almanach de Gotha over the Leeds tin plate fortune evidently has been broken. After matrimonial and financial adventures by two generations of Leedses among the nobility of Europe, William B. Leeds, son and heir of the man who amassed these millions, has married a plain (socially speaking) American girl and thus eliminated himself from the field of "eligibles" in titled society.

A quarter of a century ago the handsome, ambitious and widowed Nonnie Leeds invaded Europe, and, backed by the wealth which her late husband had extracted from the tin plate and railroad industries, created a considerable ripple in aristocratic circles. Courted by an assortment of titled gentlemen, she finally married Prince Christopher of Greece, brother of King Constantine, and her money is supposed to have helped Constantine regain the throne from which he had been ousted. Then her son, William, married Princess Xenia, niece of Constantine, and a new bond was formed between the American fortune and European royalty. There probably were high hopes that the young husband would give up his American citizenship and establish in Greece a permanent abiding place for himself and the Leeds dollars. It was publicly suggested that the Greek Government confer a title on him.

But Princess Anastasia—the Dollar Princess who had been Mrs. William B. Leeds Sr.—died, and so ended that link between royalty and the tin plate millions, as the bulk of her former husband's estate was in a trust whose principal she could not touch. Some years later young Leeds and the Princess Xenia were divorced. Now that he has married an American—furthermore, an American who has been a working girl—it is apparent that this inheritor of the Leeds fortune is free from the bedazzlement which drew his mother into a world of coronets and ancient names.

The young woman who has succeeded a royal Princess as "Billy" Leeds' wife was Miss Olive Hamilton, daughter of a Pittsburgh steel worker. She used to be a telephone operator in Atlantic City. Six years ago Leeds rescued her from drowning; when he saw her fall out of a row boat the young millionaire, without waiting for his valet to change him into proper swimimng garb, dived overboard from his yacht and towed her to safety.

Miss Hamilton was a pretty girl, small, blue-eyed and dark-haired. And Leeds had been recently divorced. He spent a good deal of time that summer teaching her to drive a speed boat, one of his own favorite pursuits. Since then they have been much together. It was not until a few weeks ago, however, when Leeds was cruising in his yacht in the West Indies, with a party of guests including Miss Hamilton, that it became known they contemplated marriage. The wedding ceremony was performed aboard the yacht by the master, Captain John B. Fox.

Thus closes a chapter in one of the guadiest of American "success" stories. For two generations it has been prominent in the pageantry of wealth.

The story begins in 1883 when a young Indianian, William B. Leeds, was fired from his $50-a-month job as a conductor on the Vandalia Railroad. Leonard F. Loree, new manager of the road, discharged Leeds and another conductor, Daniel G. Reid, in the interests of economy; $50 a month was too much to pay for their work, he thought.

LEEDS and Reid found other jobs, the latter in a bank in Richmond, Indiana, Leeds in a railroad surveying crew. Both advanced rapidly. Reid became vice-president of his bank, Leeds rose to the position of assistant division engineer of the Pennsylvania Railroad. The railroad man married Miss Jeanette Irene Carr of Richmond.

Early in the 90's Leeds took a holiday trip to Europe and found the tin industry in Wales tremendously interesting. He knew there were large deposits of tin in Indiana, and he returned home scheming busily to do something about this buried treasure. The placing of a duty on tin furthered his plans. With the co-operation of his old friend Reid, he raised the money for a tin-plate mill, which was a huge success. In a few years the business had expanded into a trust and was taken over by the United States Steel Corporation. Leeds and Reid were multimillionaires. They used some of their money to get control of the Rock Island Railroad—and took advantage of that opportunity to get even with Loree, the man who had fired them years before. They induced Loree to leave the Baltimore and Ohio and become general manager of the Rock Island, then, after a few months, discharged him as inefficient.

Virtually at the height of his financial success, Leeds went through a domestic revolution. In Cleveland he met a young matron, Mrs. George E. Worthington, who entranced him. Before her marriage she had been Miss Nonnie May Stewart and her father was a wealthy Cleveland man. She enjoyed considerable fame as a beauty. Leeds was only about 40 years old and had the prestige of his rapid rise in the financial world. Mrs. Worthington got a divorce. Mrs. Leeds, at her husband's insistence, divorced him; it was understood he paid her $1,000,000 for his freedom. Leeds then married Mrs. Worthington.

There was an immediate sequel which was both amusing and tragic. The first Mrs. Leeds, hurt and resentful at being discarded for another woman, appeared at Palm Beach, where her ex-husband and his new wife were honeymooning, and sought to steal the show from her successor by being much more magnificently attired. She was said to have taken 30 trunks of clothes to the Florida resort. Taken by surprise, the new Mrs. Leeds could not match the splendor and variety of the other woman's raiment, and soon left the Palm Beach field to her foe.

Mrs. Leeds No. 1 was not content with this triumph. She kept bobbing up at other places where the newlyweds were stopping, both in the United States and Europe, and parading her finery for comparison with that of the bride. But it was a losing struggle for her. Leeds had a great deal more money than she had and he was willing to lavish large amounts on his new love. The discarded wife gave up when her successor appeared wearing a matched-pearl necklace which was said to have cost her doting husband in the neighborhood of a quarter of a million dollars. A suit over the customs duty on the necklace helped advertise its value.

Princess Anastasia and Prince Christopher of Greece.

Having married an important fortune, Nonnie Leeds lost little time in putting it to work as a lever to raise her to social eminence. She sought entrance to that exclusive set containing the Astors, Vanderbilts, Goulds and such. Her task was not easy. For one thing, the divorces which paved the way for the Leeds marriage imparted a touch of scandal to their union; divorce was not a commonplace in the top reaches of society in those days. But Mrs. Leeds was determined and resourceful as well as beautiful. She had at her command a mansion in New York, a million-dollar "cottage" in Newport, a luxurious yacht and an indulgent, wealthy husband. In addition, she was fortunate enough to win the support of the influential Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, one of the insiders—who had been divorced herself. After two Newport seasons of uncertainty, the Leeds were "accepted," and furnished some of the most glittering ornamentation of the Gilded Age.

Their Newport house, Rough Point, was one of the show places of the summer colony, and was the scene of elaborate and costly entertainments in a period when a party sometimes cost $100,000 or more. Mrs. Leeds had a dress allowance of $40,000 a year, but couldn't keep within it; she brought back many trunks filled with new clothes whenever she went to Paris. She impulsively made expensive gifts to shop girls and servants, spent money at a tremendous rate.

The tin plate magnate died in 1908, leaving $1,000,000 to a son by his first wife and virtually everything else to his second wife. At the time, it was reported that the trust estate from which Mrs. Leeds was to draw the income amounted to $29,000,000.

AFTER an interval of mourning, the widow Leeds took her social ambitions to Europe, and most of the remainder of her life was spent there. She first laid siege to English society, and, under the guidance of Lady Arthur Paget, entertained in lavish style. It appears that her campaign was not entirely successful. The insecurity of her position was illustrated when at an entertainment for charity for which she had put up $80,000, she found that the box assigned to her had been appropriated by an English Duchess, and Mrs. Leeds and her party had to remain afoot.

Mrs. Leeds did not lack suitors, however, and titled ones, among them Prince Joachim Murat. For a number of years she said "no" to all of them, and apparently enjoyed her free existence, living expensively in London, Paris, Switzerland, Biarritz or wherever her fancy took her.

Her son, William, remained in America most of the time, attended and guarded by nurses, governesses, tutors and other family employes, escorted to and from his fashionable private school, practically shut off from the world. Occasionally his mother visited him, and sometimes he was taken to Europe to see her. Later he was placed in an English school. Once, at a bazaar given at Mrs. Leeds' home in London, William was seized by a guard as he was entering his mother's rooms and was about to be hauled off to jail as a burglar when he was recognized by a household servant; the boy had not disclosed his identity to his captor, thinking it would be a great lark to be arrested.

In 1920 Mrs. Leeds married Prince Christopher in Switzerland, where King Constantine had found asylum following his dethronement. The bride became a member of the Greek Orthodox Church and took the name of Anastasia. From then on she was Princess Anastasia. Her husband was the youngest brother of Constantine.

After Constantine's restoration to the throne it was said that Princess Anastasia's money accomplished it. But Anastasia did not long enjoy her

First an Auto Smashup Then a Marital Smashup for the Baroness Thyssen

BUDAPEST.

LATE on the night of last August first, a sleek black Rolls coupe, its five lamps blazing, slashed a white electric swath down the nocturnal landscape bordering the highway between Palamos and Figueras in Northern Spain. The top was rolled back and the bobbed black hair of the girl in the front seat blew in the wind. The man at the wheel chatted gaily as he drove. The needle of the speedometer quivered across the dots as the pair streaked down that narrow road. The coupe was traveling at about 75 English miles an hour as it swept around a bend and straightened out to cross a little concrete culvert. As it went past, the left fender, the one away from the driver, struck the concrete slab. The heavy fender crumpled. The car bounded to one side. It turned turtle so fast that a truck driver approaching the spot didn't know how many times it rolled. It landed up with its nose in a ditch as the girl lay unconscious many feet off in a field. The driver's head was thrown through the windshield.

The woman he had been chatting with a moment before was one of the most admired beauties in Europe, the Baroness Maud von Thyssen. The dead man, as they discovered when they extracted his papers from the wreckage, was the famous Prince Alexis Mdvani, recently divorced husband of Barbara Hutton.

Where had they been driving that night? What was their destination? Europe is still guessing and gossiping, almost a year after their catastrophe. The tragedy of having such an eventful, ornamental vitality snuffed out pointlessly in a moment, has seemed pitiful even to those who were little interested in the Prince's career while he was alive. And the disfigurement of a countenance so lovely as Maud von Thyssen's was tragic enough in itself. She was and, they say, is again, a woman of extraordinary vitality with one of those faces that are a career in themselves. Her eyes (one of them was blinded in the accident) had the imponderable inner sparkle of molten tar. Her mouth (which was disfigured) had a seductive eloquence of line given only to those who have been the darlings of irresponsible laughter-loving gods. Even her nose was expressive and the clean chiselling of the white forehead, the upslant of cheek bones and the sharp lineaments of the chin were models of classic excellence.

This exquisite creature was the daughter of a humble postal clerk in Berlin and began life as a likewise humble seamstress. She became the wife of a man whose family name is a story by itself. The Thyssens are a sinister dynasty, not kings, but emperors in a world where power is blood and high test steel. Fritz von Thyssen, the head of the family, is said to be the real ruler of Germany, the man who bought Hitler his dictatorship, the heir of Krupp and Kaiser in a new Germany where armament makers sway the destiny of nations and give orders to the puny survivals of monarchy. The rise of the Thyssens is not easy to trace, for its crucial chapters are sealed in mystery.

Less than 70 years ago the founder of the family, old August Thyssen, was a commonplace German burgher working in a machine shop in the flat western section of the lower Rhine. He was the proprietor of the shop, but it was a small shop indeed, quartered in a great cow barn and employing only seven workers. It only took 25 years to build this establishment into one of the major firms in Germany, a steel works, employing some 50,000 men.

August Thyssen was married and had three sons, Fritz, August and Heinrich. He hoped they would succeed him in controlling and expanding his great industry. They were educated strictly and inoculated with the same reverence for church and state which governed the father.

IN THE case of the younger sons, August and Heinrich, the inoculation didn't take; they became as alien to all that the great steel magnate stood for as he had been alien to his own simple surroundings. Only Fritz followed the path intended for them all. The other two set themselves a different course. Their lives were a succession of domestic accidents and crises overshadowed by the prospect of inheriting a third each of a fortune estimated at $100,000,000 or more.

It was Heinrich who was to marry the heroine of this story. Heinrich, born in 1874, was socially ambitious. His friendship with members of the aristocracy was a continual thorn in the side of the old August, who believed in sticking to business and playing in one's own back yard. Their differences of opinion culminated in 1900 when Heinrich took unto himself a new father, one with a title and lineage who had never sullied his fingers in a smithy. He was Baron Bornemisza de Kaszon, a Hungarian nobleman who was Chamberlain to the Emperor of Austria-Hungary. When he became the Baron's adopted son, Heinrich Thyssen also assumed his name and became Baron Heinrich Thyssen Bornemisza de Kaszon, a Hungarian subject. Seven years after this curious proceedure, Henrich riveted his relations with the family even more firmly by marrying the Baron's daughter, Maria.

The two children of this marriage were called Stephan and Maria Louise. The boy set out, apparently, to cause his father as much discomfiture as he had caused his own father. At 20 Stephan was sent to America to study at Boston University. That was in 1929. Almost immediately he fell in love and eloped with Elizabeth Clarkson, a fellow student who was the daughter of a Texas landowner. In 1930 he came to St. Louis to divorce her.

Stephan next went to Birmingham, England, to do graduate work. Again he fell in love, this time with a young Austrian Baroness, Maria von Forster. They became engaged. But the marriage never came off. On April 8, 1931. while he and his fiancee were stopping at the castle of Count Telek, at Szob, Hungary, she was the victime of a shooting accident. What apparently happened was that she and Stephan were doing some target shooting on their host's shooting range. The Baroness' revolver jammed. Stephan attempted to release it, carelessly let the muzzle cover her as he did it, and shot her in the abdomen. She died the following day and he was barely prevented from committing suicide. A military court absolved him of guilt.

That same year Heinrich's wife, Stephan's mother, died. It was five years after the death of old August Thyssen and the Baron decided to liquidate his legacy. Fritz, who had succeeded the old industrialist as head of the firm, was mustering his forces to become the dominant steel magnate of Germany, maneuvering for the undoing of the aristocratic political group whom Heinrich naturally favored as the rulers of Germany. The latter was anxious to divorce himself entirely from the family fortunes. He went to Berlin that same winter with the express purpose of doing so. After lengthy negotiations he agreed to sell his share in the profitable steel firm for $6,000,000. That must have represented a loss of more than $24,000,000, but Heinrich didn't much care. Apparently he was willing to sever the connection at any cost.

The late Alexis Mdvani.

He spent the rest of the winter season in Berlin, apparently trying to recapture his lost youth, throwing himself enthusiastically into the night life he had missed during his long sojourns in the rural castles of the Hungarian hinterland. That is how he happened to meet Maud Feller.

The future Baroness had been born in 1910, one of the numerous children of a postal clerk. She had become a seamstress but it wasn't long before her beauty impressed her employers and she was made a manikin.

HER picture began to find its way into fashion magazines. Overnight she became famous in Berlin. She acquired without difficulty a wealthy friend eager to educate her in the ways of the world and to complete the charms with which nature had so lavishly endowed her. He took her to England, helped her to learn English, saw to it that she was introduced to the right people there, got her a job in the movies. She became an actress at Elmstree Studios; not a particularly good one or especially distinguished, to be sure. But the experience was invaluable, and when she returned to Berlin for the 1932 winter season, she was an established beauty and mingled with the best of that conglomerate society which has come to dominate Berlin since the war. . . . That is how she came to marry Heinrich Thyssen.

The wedding trip began in the spring of 1932, took in several of the Baron's Hungarian castles with side excursions to Paris, Monte Carlo and the Italian spas. Heinrich was 58; the pace began to tell. He longed for the old quiet of his country seat and preferred his own Tokay to the dry champagne favored by his sprightly wife.

He was allowed to rest for a few weeks during her confinement in 1933. But after a daughter, Helen, had been born the young Baroness wanted to be off again. When Heinrich refused to travel with her, she went off on her own.

It was during the St. Moritz season of 1934 that she became acquainted with the Princess Russie Mdvani-Sert, the wife of the successful Spanish mural painter, Jose Maria de Sert, whose works embellish the walls of the new Waldorf-Astoria and the great foyer of Rockefeller Center, in New York. She stayed with the Serts at their villa near Palamos, Northern Spain, during the summer of 1935, while her daughter was beginning her education at a nursery school nearby. Another house guest who was there at that time was Prince Alexis Mdvani, former husband of Louise Astor Van Alen, a descendant of John Jacob Astor; and more recently the husband of Barbara Hutton, the Woolworth heiress, who had divorced him during the previous spring and subsequently married Count Kurt Haugwitz-Reventlow. Alexis, said to have been one of the most charming of the marrying brothers and one of the more attractive dilletantes of the international circuit, immediately ingratiated himself with the lovely Baroness Maud.

They were together the night she planned to leave Palamos for Barcelona—August 1. The Serts gave a farewell party for her. Time sped. She forgot about having to catch the train. That, at any rate, is her subsequent account of what happened on the night of the fatal accident. She has said that Prince Alexis offered to drive her to the Figueras station, 35 miles off, in hopes of intercepting the train.

All of which seemed a little peculiar to Heinrich in view of the fact that the Baroness was wearing only shorts and a blouse and had no baggage with her save an alligator handbag containing nearly $200,000 worth of jewels.

The crash was a savage mishap. Mdvani was killed instantly. Maud, who was rushed to the hospital at Gerona by ambulance, was given only an even chance for recovery. Her nose was broken, her skull fractured, her jaw cracked. Her face was badly cut up, her right foot fractured, both eyes were injured. Her tongue was gashed so badly that one report had it that it had been bitten off in the impact. She was unconscious for 10 days. When she awoke her companion had already been buried in a tiny chapel on his estate near Palamos, a relic of Czar Peter III's journey through Europe. Her first conscious act was to scribble a note asking what had become of him. She wasn't told of his death for more than a month, and suffered a serious relapse when she learned of it.

It was discovered as soon as the Baroness became conscious that the handbag containing her jewels was missing. Three weeks after the accident a detachment of the Civil Guard marched to Alos, the village nearest the scene of the accident. A bugler and a drummer paraded noisily through the streets until all 200 of the citizens had assembled at the church. Then the sergeant made an announcement regarding the jewelry, asking how many persons had been at the scene of the accident. About two dozen responded. Some reported having found jewelry which had been turned in. Nothing had been seen of the alligator bag.

AS SOON as she was out of the hospital, the Baroness took a room in the village near the Prince's Spanish estate and was seen to make daily visits, heavily veiled and wearing deep mourning, to his grave. Shortly afterwards she filed suit against the Mdvani estate, asking $400,000 damages for her injuries. The heirs agreed that this was reasonable and didn't contest the suit.

Heinrich, who had rushed to his wife's bedside as soon as he learned of the accident, was disconcerted by the rumor that his wife had been carrying on a too close friendship with the late Prince Alexis. Almost before she regained consciousness he dashed over to the Sert Villa and scolded and fumed alleging that the Serts had encouraged this friendship between his wife and Senora Sert's brother. Subsequently he has filed secret suit for a divorce allegedly using letters to prove that the Baroness was on intimate terms with the late Prince. They have been separated for months now; by court order the Baron has been paying $800 a month in temporary alimony.

And the Baroness, who has spent most of her time recovering from a series of operations which are said to have succeeded to a large extent in restoring her former beauty, has filed a countersuit asking that her husband settle $500,000 on her and the baby for their future support. The case may drag on for a very long time; when Heinrich Thyssen's mother sued old August Thyssen for a division of his estate, after divorcing him, the litigation lasted 30 years. After the recent hearing, in which the Baroness declared she had only known Mdvani for two weeks before his death, the case was put off indefinitely.

The LAST DAYS OF A CURLY HAIRED BOY MURDERER

The Fourth in Former Warden Holohan's Series of What Goes on in the Strange Half-World Behind the Bars of the World's Largest Prison.

This is the fourth of a series of articles on intimate aspects of prison life by James Bernard Holohan, who retired April 15 after eight and one-half years as warden of the California State penitentiary at San Quentin, the largest institution of its kind and, during part of his period in office, one of the most dangerously crowded.

Within the penitentiary walls he shows a strange half-world, physically side by side with the "normal" everyday world of free men and women, but, in every human element, incredibly remote. The unavoidable restrictions, the enforced contacts, the hope of freedom or certainty of doom or imminence of death, alike contribute to the other-world scheme of values and taboos that make up the "prison mind." In "My San Quentin Years," former Warden Holohan shows its workings—with the sure and authoritative touch of first-hand experience—in friendship and feud and in the dash for freedom, in crowded cell and swarming prison yard, in Condemned Row and even on the steps of the gallows.

By JAMES B. HOLOHAN

THE worst nuisance, the most flagrant coward I ever saw in San Quentin's death cell, was Gordon Stewart Northcott. Convicted of the degenerate murder of a number of boys on a Riverside County chicken ranch, he was heralded as an "ape man." But he turned out to be a prevaricator and a trouble maker who went to his death in 1930 whimpering and cringing.

Everything this 22-year-old boy did was melodramatic. Hoping to forestall the hanging he gave us a "map" purporting to show where the bodies of 16 murdered boys were buried. I sent guards to the scene. They found Northcott was lying.

Several days before the hanging, he faked a suicide attempt. The hour of his death he writhed as though in pain and cried he had drunk some poison smuggled to him by another prisoner. We pumped him out in time for the execution. No trace of poison was found. When it came time for the last walk he went all to pieces, despite his bragging that he would die like a man. He insisted we blindfold him. He wept all the way to the gallows and was trying to shriek, "Don't, oh don't!" when the trap dropped.

Now compare the behavior of this young fiend, Northcott, with that of little, inoffensive Clarence DeMoss, whose execution a month ago was the last I witnessed as San Quentin warden.

DeMoss, who shot his wife in a moment of drunken frenzy, went to his death calmly. He truly regretted his act and firmly believed he would be reunited happily with his "darling wife over there." His greatest hope was that his six children "would come to see the truth" and forgive him.

On the day before his execution he wrote a touching letter to Joe Kristy, who was occupying a cell in Condemned Row.

"Well, Joe, it won't be long now," the letter said. "So far I'm holding up all right. Regards to all the boys (in Condemned Row) and better luck to them than I'm having."

Before he went, DeMoss got my permission to send his fountain pen to Kristy. With it he sent a note advising Kristy, "Don't let Mack take this away from you too soon." Alexander Mackay was Kristy's partner in the January, 1935, prison break.

David Lamson was one of the most philosophical men I ever saw in Condemned Row. And he fitted himself into prison life with amazing rapidity. Prison is no place for a "high hat" and Lamson realized it. Never once did he show an inclination to adopt a superior attitude toward his fellows in Condemned Row, to hold himself aloof or show any bitterness.

HE OCCUPIED his mind by weaving on a hand loom he had in his cell. His devoted sisters and mother visited him frequently. Led from Condemned Row to the office of the Captain of the Yard he would chat with them under the watchful eyes of prison officers.

David Lamson is a free man now. Once convicted of the murder of his wife, Allene, on the Stanford University campus, he escaped from the shadow of the noose when Santa Clara County authorities dropped his case after his fourth trial.

The book he planned while in Condemned Row proved a best seller. The movies bought it, hired Lamson to help adapt it.

"Well, he got the breaks," say San Quentin's inmates. "That's the way with the law. You can't dope it out."

We come now to the last days of William Edward Hickman, the curly-haired boy whose brutal, senseless murder of 12-year-old Marion Parker caused a sensation back in 1927.

Hickman (self-dubbed The Fox), was one of those rare criminals whose deed was so revolting that he came to Condemned Row hated and despised by every convict in San Quentin. Usually the inmates are sympathetic toward a "fish" ,(newcomer). There is a leveling democracy about finding any man in the same boat with yourself. And that gentleness extends particularly to the men about to die.

But many of the men in San Quentin viewed Hickman as a rattlesnake who ought to be stamped into the earth. They knew how he had kidnaped little Marion, murdered her, then delivered her mutilated body, the eyes sewn open to simulate life, to her frantic father on a Los Angeles street.

Yes, Hickman was despised. But gradually the hatred of the convict population thawed. To them he became, as do all doomed men, a fellow human being very much up against it.

I detail the story of Hickman's last days (much of it has never before been published) because it shows what all condemned men must go through—and illustrates, too, the experience that was my lot 57 times at San Quentin. For while Hickman's case was the Hauptmann case of the late 1920s, the little-publicized murderer and the warden charged with conducting his execution must go through much the same thing.

Hickman was about the last person you'd pick to have committed such a terrible crime. He struck me, when he first arrived and many times after, as a mild-mannered little fellow, pretty well educated and well informed on many subjects.

HICKMAN, JUST A BOY AGAIN, THROWS HIMSELF ON THE COT AND WEEPS.

His last days flash through my mind. It is Tuesday, October 16, 1928. Governor C. C. Young refuses to intervene. The boy's elderly father and mother have made their last pleas for commutation. His attorney makes a desperate last-minute play, saying: "Warden Holohan is the only person who stands between Hickman and the noose," and asking me to order Hickman examined by alienists.

ACTUALLY nothing stood between Hickman and the noose. There was no reason for me to play up to this tragic farce of a call for alienists. Hickman was sane. And he admitted it when the attorney talked for an hour with him in his cell. I know. I was there.

Wednesday, October 14. . . . Hickman has two more days to live. He is bearing up well. The stiff, curly hair, clipped when he came to prison, is long again. He is jaunty, fluent. But he has the chalky green complexion caged men acquire and his eyes are red-rimmed from the nights of sitting up writing long letters.

These letters were a curious manifestation of this strange youth's psychology. Some were to police all over the country confessing many robberies. One letter he signed, "The Vanishing American;" another, "A contrite and humble sinner."

Then there was a lengthy letter addressed "To the Young of America—so that they may escape my fate." It related how he had been intensely religious and planned to be a minister during his boyhood in Arkansas, how he read agnostic books, lost his faith and turned to robbery.

The prison bugler is sounding taps at 9:30 p. m. Wednesday as William Edward Hickman and I walk from Condemned Row, across the Garden Beautiful, up a long flight of stairs clinging against the side of a brick building. At the top of those stairs is the gallows, behind it the white, wooden-slatted death chamber.

Hickman is cool, one of the coolest it was ever my lot to escort to the death house. His father, visiting him in the afternoon, has gone away in tears. Hickman remains calm. But he does want to see his mother. I tell him he will be allowed to talk to her if she comes from Kansas in time. She does not come, but writes a letter instead. I take him the letter. The murderer vanishes. Hickman, just a boy again, throws himself on the cot and weeps.

Hickman drops into a sound sleep during his first hours in the death cell, then arises. He gets up at 2:45 a. m., writes two letters pouring out his faith. . . . "I have no fear of death for I have tried to atone for my wrongs. I believe I shall have everlasting life." . . .

Thursday, October 15. . . . As is my custom, I go to the condemned man's cell for a talk. Hickman brings out a picture of himself, autographs it "Dear Warden Holohan—William Edward Hickman." It is still in my collection.

Just as nearly every slayer will do, as his doom nears, he gropes about in his mind for some shred of justification for his crime.

"I let the little girl go into a rest room in a theater when I had her kidnaped," he repeats. "She could have got away then."

The fact that little Marion Parker came back to her doom seems to make him feel better.

He has asked me for a bouquet of flowers from the prison garden and for a phonograph in his cell. He gets both. Over and over again he plays a record inscribed with his prison number, "No. 45,041." The haunting strains of Humoresque float out of the death cell, to die in the still air of Hickman's last night on earth.

FRIDAY—the day of death . . . the public has been trying to make a circus out of this execution. More than a thousand people apply to witness it — several of them women or men who say they would like to have a chance to "swing Hickman" themselves. (The psychology of those who yearn to participate in the law's vengeance is hard to understand. God knows, it is the last thing I would go through with were it not my legal duty).

Two hundred witnesses are admitted to the death chamber. I go to Hickman's cell. I purposely keep the conversation on commonplace things.

The clock's hands move relentlessly toward 10 a. m. Hickman stands up, says "Good-by, Warden," quite cheerily. Father William A. Fleming has advised him to solace himself with prayer on the "last mile." The boy's lips are forming a prayer as we come out of the death cell. Thirty feet away dangles the noose.

Hickman climbs the 13 steps with a swinging stride. But on the trap, as the noose drops around his neck his nerve breaks. The black cap covers his face. He collapses, sinking in a faint just as the trap falls.

Usually the fall of 5 feet 3 inches breaks their necks instantly. But Hickman's wilting body has struck the side of the platform.

From 10:10 to 10:25 we stand there, watching the figure at the end of the rope. The 15 minutes seem to stretch into hours. A witness faints, slumping grotesquely, then another, and a third. Finally, the prison doctor intones, "I pronounce this man dead."

Fifty-seven times I have seen such scenes enacted. Yet . . .

IT IS 25 years since, a State Senator at Sacramento, I voted against the abolition of capital punishment. Today, after having officially witnessed 57 hangings, I would vote just as I did in 1909 and 1911.

Now, don't misunderstand me. An execution is an ugly thing. I went through a mental hell on each time I had to officiate at the killing of a fellow human being. But I firmly believe the death penalty should be retained.

I do favor one change, though—the adoption of the lethal gas chamber.

Even the most ardent foes of the death penalty admit that killers cannot be allowed to roam at large.

They say, "These are dangerous men and must be removed from society. Let us substitute life imprisonment, without hope of pardon or parole in the place of capital punishment."

My eight and one-half years experience as warden of the world's biggest Big House make me say "No!" to such a proposal. A prison filled with men condemned to such punishment would be the world's worst hell.

Murderers robbed of the hope of pardon or parole, doomed to live on in prison until they die, would be the most desperate, fiendish human beings on the face of the earth. If you "threw away the keys" this desperate brood would take any kind of a chance to escape. You would simply be sacrificing the lives of the men whose task it was to keep them imprisoned as well as peace officers in recapturing them.

No ordinary prison could hold such men. You would have to build a fortress bristling with machine guns. And over the gloomy portals would be the message, "Abandon hope, all ye who enter here." Take hope away

SKETCHES FROM LIFE

High Lights on Unusual Personalities

MRS. HARRISON EUSTIS
MILDRED HELEN McAFEE

The FOUNDER OF THE 'SEEING EYE'

MORRISTOWN, New Jersey.

ON MAY 7, 1936, the National Institute of Social Sciences awarded a gold medal for "distinguished service rendered to humanity" to trim, energetic, forthright, wealthy Mrs. Harrison Eustis, daughter of the late Charles Custis Harrison, former provost of the University of Pennsylvania and famed philanthropist. The service Mrs. Eustice has rendered and is now rendering to humanity is a unique one; it consists in training German shepherd dogs to act as guides for blind men and women.

At the Seeing Eye, Incorporated, an estate of some 50 acres here in Morristown, New Jersey, of which Mrs. Eustis is president, the dogs are trained to lead the blind through traffic and over long and unfamiliar distances; there, too, the prospective masters come for a course in learning the art of being led around by the faithful and intelligent animals. There are today in the United States more than 100 "educated graduates" of the Seeing Eye; there are at present in Morristown 210 dogs which are undergoing the training course that will fit them to act as the eyes of a blind human being. How much more there is to be done at Seeing Eye can be judged from the fact that Mrs. Eustis estimates that there are about 11,000 blind men and women in the country today who could make excellent use of the shepherd dogs both in helping them earn a living and receiving from the dog companionship and joy.

It has been some years since Mrs. Harrison Eustis first became interested in dogs for the blind. The daughter of a millionaire father who at his death in 1929 left his many millions to his five children and his wife, Dorothy Harrison went to the Agnes Irwin School, a fashionable finishing school near the Harrison family estate, Happy Creek Farms in St. David's, a suburb of Philadelphia.

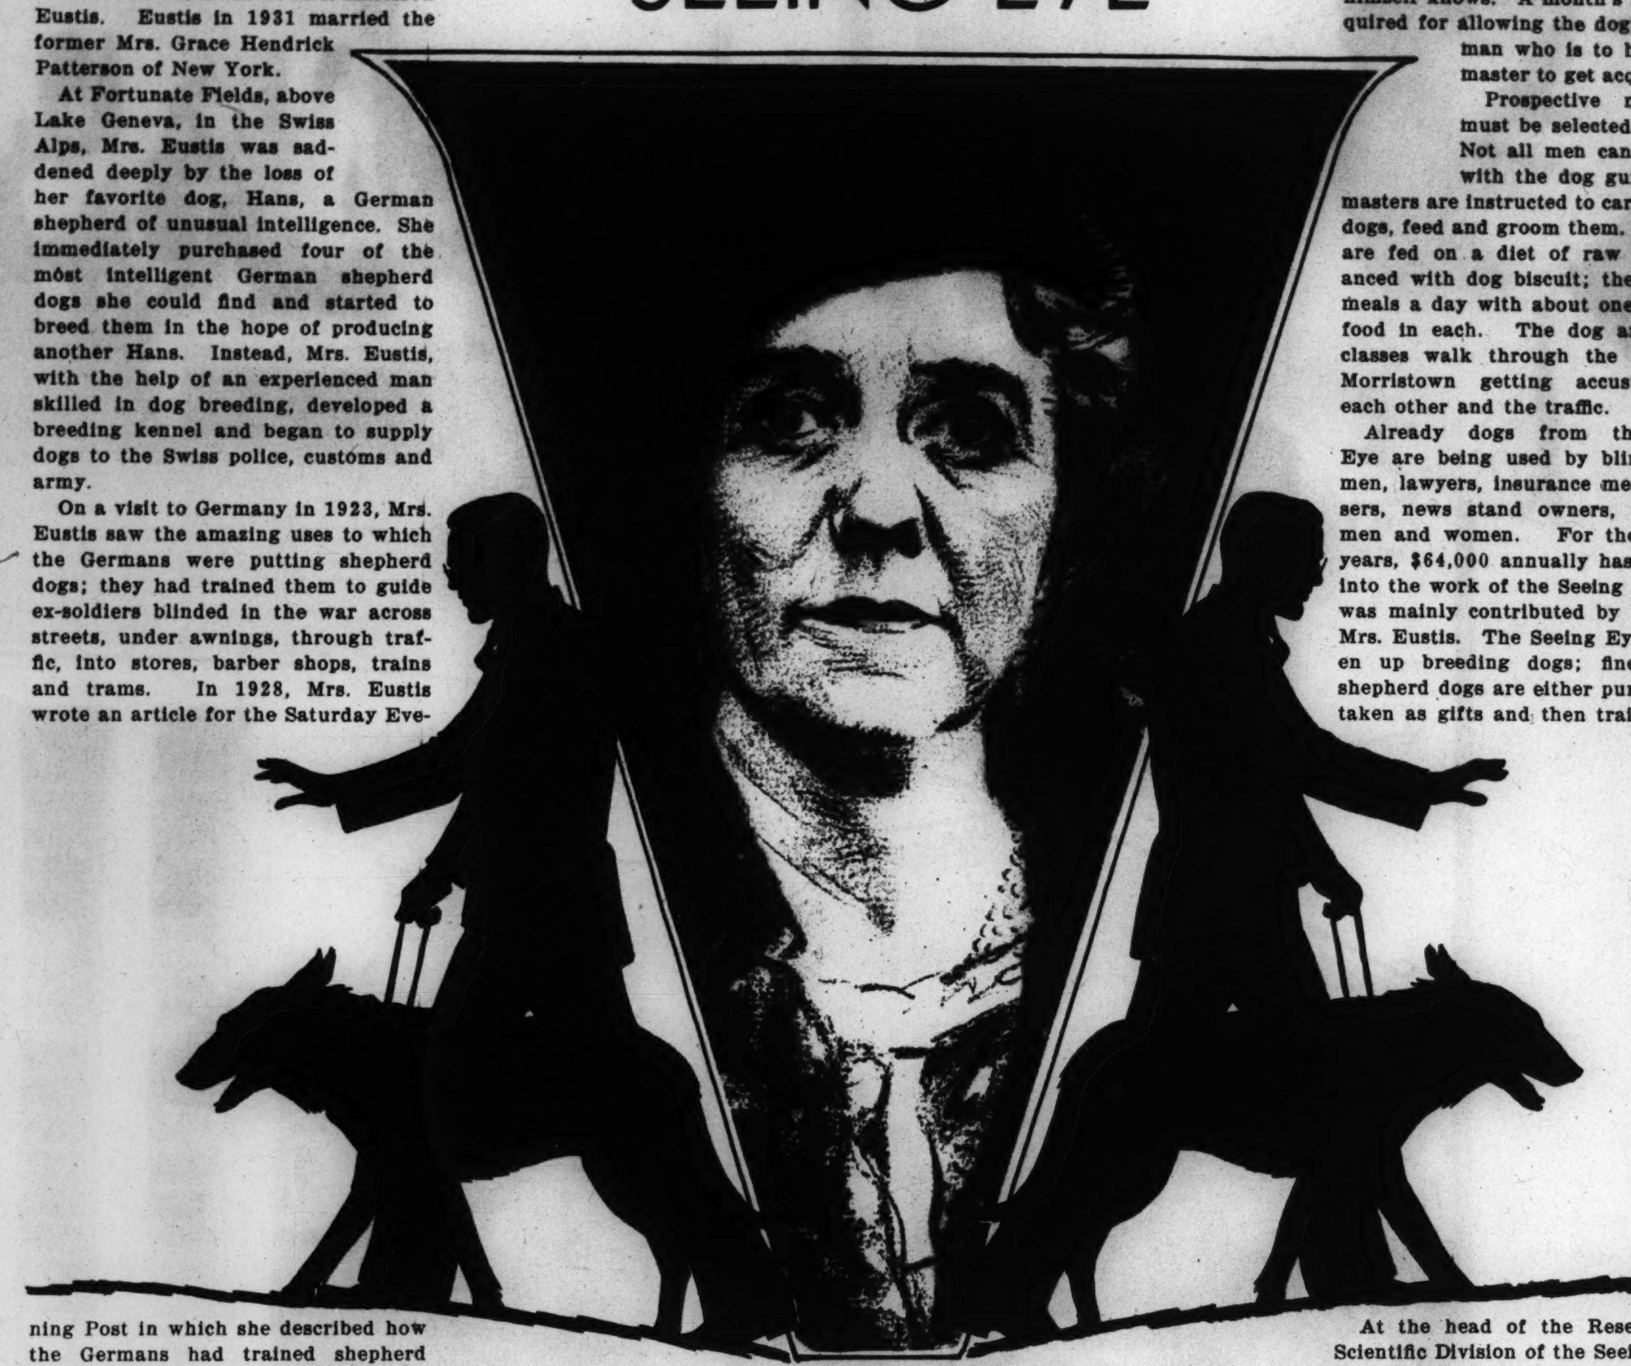
Miss Harrison was graduated from the Agnes Irwin School in 1903; she made her debut in 1904; and in 1906 she married Senator Walter A. Wood.

As a young girl, Dorothy Harrison was greatly interested in dogs, in animal intelligence and behavior, from a scientific and practical as well as a humane point of view. She began, in Philadelphia, the study of genetics which led her, after she had become the wife of Senator Wood and moved with him to Hoosic Falls, New York, into the field of selective cattle breeding. Continued research made her interested in a study of dog intelligence.

Senator Wood and his wife had two sons, Harrison Wood and Walter Wood; in 1915, Senator Wood died and his widow and two sons moved back to St. David's with the Harrisons. In 1923, Mrs. Dorothy Harrison Wood became Mrs. George Morris Eustis. Her second husband, who is the son of Mrs. Josef Hofmann of Newport, Rhode Island, and Aiken, South Carolina, shared her great fondness for animals. Together that year they went to their estate, Fortunate Fields, at Montpelier, Switzerland, near Lausanne. There they studied and experimented with French briards, Labrador retrievers, Doberman Pinschers and German shepherds. Nevertheless, despite this great common interest, the Eustises were divorced in 1929. Mrs. Eustis took the name of Mrs. Harrison Eustis. Eustis in 1931 married the former Mrs. Grace Hendrick Patterson of New York.

At Fortunate Fields, above Lake Geneva, in the Swiss Alps, Mrs. Eustis was saddened deeply by the loss of her favorite dog, Hans, a German shepherd of unusual intelligence. She immediately purchased four of the most intelligent German shepherd dogs she could find and started to breed them in the hope of producing another Hans. Instead, Mrs. Eustis, with the help of an experienced man skilled in dog breeding, developed a breeding kennel and began to supply dogs to the Swiss police, customs and army.

On a visit to Germany in 1923, Mrs. Eustis saw the amazing uses to which the Germans were putting shepherd dogs; they had trained them to guide ex-soldiers blinded in the war across streets, under awnings, through traffic, into stores, barber shops, trains and trams. In 1928, Mrs. Eustis wrote an article for the Saturday Evening Post in which she described how the Germans had trained shepherd dogs to lead their blind and how she hoped to do the same thing, how she was developing a patrol dog service for the Swiss State police and the Italian metropolitan police, how she was raising dogs for the prisons of New York and Pennsylvania, how she had developed messenger dog service for the Swiss Army and had had considerable success with dogs for the blind at Fortunate Fields.



Mrs. Harrison Eustis.

In Nashville, Tennessee, Morris Frank, a young man who had recently been graduated from Vanderbilt University and who was interested in the problems of the blind since he himself had lost his eyesight in 1925 through an accident while boxing in college, listened to a friend of his read the article in which Mrs. Eustis described what Germany had done with dogs for the blind. It happened that Morris Frank's mother was also interested in the same problem. She had been blind for 20 years and had been instrumental in having Tennessee pass legislation favorable to the blind.

After hearing the article, Morris Frank wanted to learn all there was to know about the dogs. He immediately set sail for Fortunate Fields in Switzerland and there he was introduced to Buddy, the dog which has been his Seeing Eye ever since. Frank returned with Buddy to New York and tried him out with great success in the heavy traffic. Then Frank returned to Nashville and there began training dogs for other blind persons.

In 1929 Mrs. Harrison Eustis and Colonel Morris Frank—he has been made a Colonel because of his work with dogs for the blind — together founded Seeing Eye, Incorporated, in Morristown, New Jersey. Mrs. Eustis's dogs were moved from Fortunate Fields, Switzerland, to the Morristown estate. The work of finding trainers for the dogs began on a large scale and Seeing Eye initiated its work.

By the beginning of 1935, a hundred fully "graduated" dogs had left school to help blind men and women throughout the country. A class of dog trainers to increase production was under way. Mrs. Eustis, with the help of experts, worked out a definite schedule for the Seeing Eye. The period of training for each dog is three months; the period of training for a dog trainer is four years, for a dog trainer must be able to handle dogs, to understand the blind man's needs, and to teach both man and dog what he himself knows. A month's time is required for allowing the dog and blind man who is to become his master to get acquainted.

Prospective masters must be selected carefully. Not all men can be happy with the dog guides. The masters are instructed to care for their dogs, feed and groom them. The dogs are fed on a diet of raw meat balanced with dog biscuit; they get two meals a day with about one pound of food in each. The dog and master classes walk through the streets of Morristown getting accustomed to each other and the traffic.

Already dogs from the Seeing Eye are being used by blind clergymen, lawyers, insurance men, canvassers, news stand owners, and plain men and women. For the last few years, $64,000 annually has been put into the work of the Seeing Eye. This was mainly contributed by friends of Mrs. Eustis. The Seeing Eye has given up breeding dogs; fine German shepherd dogs are either purchased or taken as gifts and then trained.

At the head of the Research and Scientific Division of the Seeing Eye is Elliott S. Humphrey, animal breeder and trainer of long experience. Humphrey was with Mrs. Eustis in Switzerland at the training school which was called L'Oeil Qui Voit. The dogs begin to get their training at 14 months of age; the period of service of a dog is 10 years. Shepherds, or what are commonly called police dogs, are used because they have no wolf blood in them, as is commonly supposed, and their unfailing instinct is to protect and serve their masters.

Female dogs are preferred by the Seeing Eye because they are gentle and more eager to please and less inclined to quarrel with other dogs than the male shepherds. The dogs which guide the blind wear a leather harness around the chest and shoulders; from this a stiff handle extends to reach the master's hand so that he can feel her every movement. The dog's first lesson is to learn to obey. Her second lesson is also to disobey if necessary when she sees danger; she must know how to detour around obstructions, like awnings, which the blind man can not see, and she must sit down close to the edge of a curb or steps so that the man can find the edge with his cane or his foot.

Great success has been achieved with Seeing Eye dogs. They give both help and companionship. Colonel Frank traveled 60,000 miles with the aid of Buddy. David Sillman went through the University of Pennsylvania with his dog Arga; Walter Moran attended the same college with his dog Bina. The State of Pennsylvania leads all others in the country in the number of dogs for the blind; it has 30 per cent of these "educated" dogs.

Mrs. Eustis sees the shepherd dog as a Niagara of energy going to waste, as intelligence waiting to be used intelligently, as a potential helper and useful citizen. She says that the best part of her job as president of Seeing Eye—Morris Frank is vice-president—is "to see man and dog go out into the world as pals."

THE cost of a guide dog is $950; this includes $300, the average cost per dog of training instructors, keeping up the school, etc.; $75 for the instruction and maintenance of the blind man at the school for a month, and the rest for the price of the animal itself. But blind persons are not usually expected to pay anything like that sum. There are a number of scholarships offered to blind men who can not afford to pay anything If after he has a dog, one of them makes enough money to pay off his debts, the scholarship is then immediately transferred to someone else. If a man can afford to pay something, an arrangement is made whereby he can pay a little per month over a long period of time. Sometimes a blind man can afford to pay for his dog in full and then he does so. Usually the blind people have paid anywhere from $25 to $300 for their dogs.

Mrs. Eustis and Humphrey have established a most complete tabulation of shepherd dog blood lines. Mrs. Eustis has received many honors. Among them have been an honorary master of science from the University of Pennsylvania, and a decoration from the Swiss Government. She personally worked with Mussolini to whom she presented 12 dogs for his police service.

She travels a great deal, dividing her time between her estate in Switzerland, her estate in New Jersey, her apartment in New York, and visits to her family in Philadelphia. She is looking forward to the time when every blind person who wants a dog to guide him can have one; she says that although blindness at birth is definitely on the decrease, blindness through accidents is on the increase and therefore the work of the Seeing Eye is of great importance.

MADELIN BLITZSTEIN.

A Former MISSOURIAN Becomes PRESIDENT of WELLESLEY COLLEGE at 36

WELLESLEY, Massachusetts.

WHEN Robert Maynard Hutchins was appointed head of the University of Chicago a few years ago, he immediately became known throughout the country as the "boy president." Now that the board of trustees of Wellesley College, one of the best known women's colleges in the land, has elected as their next president Miss Mildred Helen McAfee, a warm, human, alert, vivacious, and friendly young woman, equipped with a keen sense of humor, it is altogether probable that she will be heralded as the girl president, for she celebrated her thirty-sixth birthday on May 12. Miss McAfee will succeed Dr. Ellen Fitz Pendleton, who became president of Wellesley in 1911 and will retire at commencement this June.

At present, Miss McAfee is Dean of Women at Oberlin College in Ohio, a position which she has held since 1934; during the years since her graduation from Vassar College in 1920, she has held a great many positions and enjoyed a wide variety of experience in education and social service work. When Miss McAfee was told of her selection the other day, she said:

"It's a grand opportunity for any woman and I am proud to have the chance to build on the splendid past of Wellesley in 1911 and will retire at been in its leadership in the education of women. I have no thoughts of reform. Wellesley needs no reformation.

"I am anticipating with much pleasure the privilege of working with the Wellesley faculty and continuing with them in their progressive and modern emphasis in the college which has so long maintained a foremost place under the distinguished presidency of Dr. Pendleton.

"I am not so much concerned with the structural changes which are being proposed as I am in making certain that the student has first consideration and that the college course is personalized and individualized. I am a liberal, but I believe liberalism in education can best be developed in an institution with sound traditions such as there are at Wellesley, and where high standards in both social and educational fields have always been maintained."

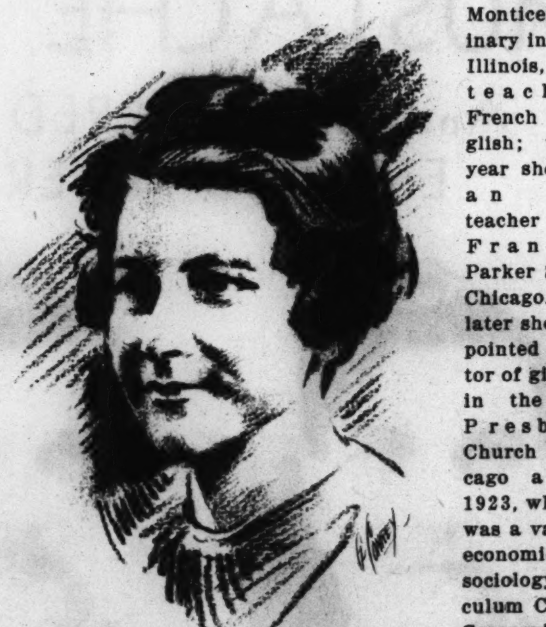
Wellesley's new president, who will take office this coming fall, was born in 1900, in Parkville, Missouri, where her father, the Rev. Dr. Cleland Boyd McAfee, was professor of mental and moral philosophy at Park College. Dr. McAfee is now secretary of the Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions and former moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church. He is now a resident of New York City.

Miss McAfee's grandfather, the Rev. John Armstrong McAfee, was president of Park College.

After attending grammar and high school in Missouri, Mildred McAfee went to Vassar College. There she was one of the most popular members of the undergraduate body, distinguishing herself in her studies as well as in extra-curricular affairs. She received the honor of being elected head of the student council. Although her interests as an undergraduate were centered mainly in economics and sociology, she also devoted a great deal of time to the study of languages. And, although since graduation she has not maintained any active interest in any sports or hobbies, at Vassar she did play hockey and basketball very well.

In the years since she received her bachelor of arts degree at Vassar in 1920, Miss McAfee has found time to teach French, English, economics and sociology on the faculties of a grammar school, a high school, a normal school, two colleges, and a summer school for industrial workers; she has directed the girls' work of a large church and the activities of the alumnae of her own alma mater; she has served as dean of women in two colleges, both co-educational, and she has taken graduate courses at Columbia University and the University of Chicago during several summers.

The first year she was out of college, Mildred McAfee was on the faculty of the Monticello Seminary in Godfrey, Illinois, as a teacher of French and English; the next year she became an assistant teacher in the Francis W. Parker School in Chicago. A year later she was appointed the ditor of girls' work in the Fourth Presbyterian Church in Chicago and in 1923, when there was a vacancy in economics and sociology at Tusculum College in Greensville, Tennessee, Miss McAfee was appointed acting professor in those subjects.



Miss Mildred Helen McAfee.

Miss McAfee stayed on at Tusculum until 1926, when she left in order to study at the University of Chicago from which she received the degree of master of arts in 1928. But she was never satisfied with study and nothing else. The years became even more crowded with activity and the summer of 1927 saw Miss McAfee in the East, tutoring in economics at the Bryn Mawr School for Women in Industry, a summer school for working women on the Bryn Mawr College campus.

In the fall of 1928 Miss McAfee was appointed dean of women at Center College in Danville, Kentucky; she acted as professor of sociology at Center College at the same time. Her summers since 1929 have been spent mainly in studying economics and sociology at Columbia University and the University of Chicago, except for the summer of 1930 when she taught the social sciences at Asheville Normal School in Asheville, North Carolina.

Four years ago Miss McAfee returned to her alma mater as executive secretary of the Vassar College Associate Alumnae, and in 1934 she went out to Oberlin College in Ohio as dean of women.

When Miss McAfee is inducted as the seventh president of Wellesley College since its founding in Wellesley, Massachusetts, she will be the youngest ever to hold the post with the exception of Miss Alice Freeman, who became the second president of Welleslay at the age of 26. Miss McAfee has another distinction as well, for she will be the first Wellesley president to bring to her work training in the social sciences.

Miss Alice Freeman, who later married George Herbert Palmer, was a professor of history; Miss Helen Shafer and Miss Pendleton were professors of mathematics; Mrs. Julia Irvine was a professor of Greek, all on the Wellesley College faculty before they became presidents of the college. And although the other two presidents, Miss Ada Howard and Miss Caroline Hazard, were not professors at Wellesley, they were Wellesley alumnae, as were all the presidents with the exception of Miss Pendelton, now retiring, and Miss McAfee, now entering.

Since President Pendleton announced her intention of retiring, in a statement in January, 1935, the trustees have been busy asking the faculty and the alumnae of Wellesley to suggest candidates for the presidency. A committee composed of faculty members and graduates was appointed to tabulate and summarize the replies, which ran into many thousands. From the answers, the committee said they received "an excellent cross-section of alumnae opinion coming from all parts of the country, from cities, small towns and rural communities, from alumnae of practically all classes who were engaged in all avenues of endeavor."

AMONG suggested qualifications which came to the surface as the result of these replies were "intellectual honesty, leadership, tolerance, savoir faire, sympathetic understanding of youth, vision and a sense of humor." The trustees then had the task of looking for these qualities plus the requirements of experience, scholarship and executive ability. They considered more than 100 persons.

In appointing a woman, the trustees have acted in line with the policy initiated by the founders of the college. This policy was outlined in an article in the Nation, in 1911, when Miss Pendleton was elected. The article stated, in part, in explaining why it believed it was proper to appoint women presidents for women's colleges, that "It is an anomaly that women should be permitted to enter upon an intellectual career and should not be permitted to look forward to the rewards of successful labor."

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colorado.

DESPITE its remoteness from the great centers of artistic thought and the ruggedness of the civilization surrounding it, this little mountain city has long paid homage to culture. When the mining camps and cow towns of Colorado were appeasing their esthetic yearnings with entertainment of the dance hall variety, Colorado Springs was being treated to more cerebral fare—lectures, concerts, "strictly high-class" dramatic productions and the like. Literary and art clubs flourished and it was fairly safe for a male to admit a liking for poetry. The establishment of Colorado College here strengthened the cultural forces and the influence of this institution of higher learning has been felt in many of the intellectual activities of the town in the years that have followed.

New prominence as a seat of mental development has now come to Colorado Springs. There was recently completed here a handsome building dedicated to the study and appreciation of the arts. It is open to the public and its facilities are free. Here residents of Colorado and visitors alike may follow their artistic interests in music, painting, the drama and kindred subjects, or delve into the archeology, ethnology and history of the West.

The Colorado Springs Fine Arts Center is the gift of Mrs. Fred Morgan Pike Taylor of this city, widow of an investment broker and daughter of the late Judson Bemis, St. Louis jute magnate. Her philanthropies include a $100,000 day nursery here and a $300,000 library for Colorado College; plans for the library have just been drawn.

The cost of the art center was $600,000. In addition, Mrs. Taylor has given it about $150,000 worth of relics of the Southwest and 9000 volumes of Americana, and has provided an endowment of $12,000 a year.

A building whose exterior is made up of the flat planes and box-like masses of modernist architecture, the art center rests almost at the foot of Pike's Peak, surrounded by the grandeur of the Rockies. It is built principally of concrete and marble, with aluminum doors, windows and balconies, and covers more than 40,000 square feet of ground. The architect was John G. Meem of Santa Fe, New Mexico.

Housed in this structure are an art school, theater, music department, museum, galleries, libraries, work shops and offices. The art department includes a permanent exhibition gallery, a gallery for current exhibitions and a room for prints. There are also studios for visiting artists as well as members of the staff, and a study room and art library for students. This department is affiliated with Colorado College. The music and concert room has in connection a music library, dressing rooms and a kitchenette. These facilities are available to various musical organizations.

The theater has 400 seats, so arranged that there is a good view of the stage from every one. Between it and the art department is a large work room where scenery may be built and painted — an activity in which art students may be employed.

There is a room for the library of Early Americana, which is expected to be of particular interest to research students. The museum houses outstanding collections of Southwestern Indian relics and examples of Spanish Colonial arts. Some of the relics date back to the twelfth century, including pottery, rugs, baskets, silver work, carvings and primitive implements.

In the fields of anthropology and archeology the institution plans for the coming year a restricted program of research and a series of small exhibits. The work of the museum staff will be supplemented by lectures by outside authorities.

The director of the new art center is Stanley B. Lothrop, a Harvard graduate who has been assistant at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, professor of Medieval and Renaissance art at the American Academy of Rome and organizer and director of the Louis Comfort Tiffany Foundation in New York, an art community for the encouragement of young and talented artists.

BOARDMAN ROBINSON, well-known for his murals, is the art director of the center, his work including supervision of classes in painting, sculpture, lithography and drawing. Some of the walls in this civic institution are adorned with murals by Robinson. Just now he is executing a commission in the Department of Justice Building at Washington.

The opening of the art center recently was celebrated with a week of special programs, outstanding performers in various branches of art being brought here for the occasion. The first program was given by the Colorado Springs Civic Orchestra. The other artists were Martha Graham, dancer; Albert Spalding, violinist; Sando Masatti, conductor; John Kirkpatrick, harpsichordist; Walt Kuhn, painter, and Eva Gauthier, soprano.

With such a start for its new cultural enterprise, Colorado Springs is looking forward to a career of growing brilliance in the world of the mind, even to outgrowing the sobriquet in which it has long rejoiced—"Little London."

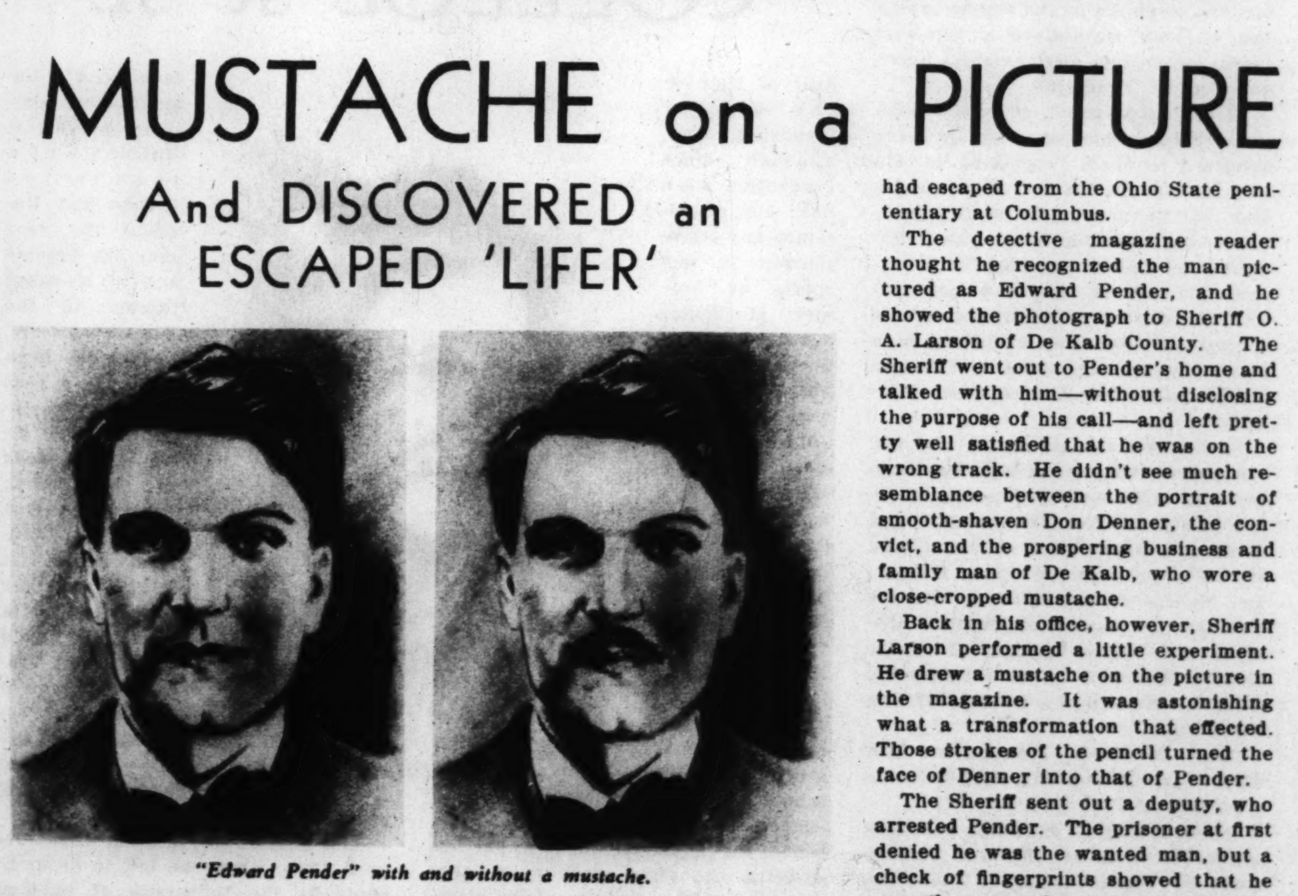
And DISCOVERED an ESCAPED 'LIFER'

DE KALB, Illinois.

A YEAR and a half ago Edward Pender settled here and began to get ahead rapidly. Working as a carpenter, he soon became known as an able artisan and a thrifty, industrious dependable man. Of his past no one knew anything except that he had worked at his trade several years in Spring Valley, Illinois, before coming here, but there was no particular curiosity about it as he was a reasonably personable, friendly fellow, with no air of mystery about him.

He hadn't been here long before he met Hattie Kadie, daughter of one of the town's respected citizens. After a brief courtship they married. He continued to work hard and look ahead, and presently he was able to start a used automobile business. It did well.

Pender built a home on a two-acre tract which he had bought on time payments. It was a small house at first, as he built it a room at a time, not wanting to get heavily in debt. Recently he had the satisfaction of telling his wife that there was only a $100 or so left to pay on the place. In a modest way, the career of Edward Pender seemed to be following the pattern of a typical American "success" story. He was only 40, still young enough to expect a good deal of the future.



"Edward Pender" with and without a mustache.

Then someone in this neighborhood saw a picture in a detective magazine. It was a photograph of Don Denner, and he was wanted in Ohio as an escaped convict. In 1914, when Denner was a youth of 18, he had killed his brother-in-law, John Vainer, on the latter's farm near Bloomingsburg, Ohio.

Denner had said Vanier treated his sister badly, and that in a quarrel he had killed the man in self-defense, but he was sent to prison for life. In 1930, after becoming a trusty, Denner had escaped from the Ohio State penitentiary at Columbus.

The detective magazine reader thought he recognized the man pictured as Edward Pender, and he showed the photograph to Sheriff O. A. Larson of De Kalb County. The Sheriff went out to Pender's home and talked with him—without disclosing the purpose of his call—and left pretty well satisfied that he was on the wrong track. He didn't see much resemblance between the portrait of smooth-shaven Don Denner, the convict, and the prospering business and family man of De Kalb, who wore a close-cropped mustache.

Back in his office, however, Sheriff Larson performed a little experiment. He drew a mustache on the picture in the magazine. It was astonishing what a transformation that effected. Those strokes of the pencil turned the face of Denner into that of Pender.

The Sheriff sent out a deputy, who arrested Pender. The prisoner at first denied he was the wanted man, but a check of fingerprints showed that he was the escaped convict. Then he confessed. His confession included the statement that he had another wife.

So Edward Pender abandoned the role of hero in a success story and returned to the grim reality of being Don Denner, convict. A pencil had written finis to his romantic interlude.

TOOK to a TREE—But HIS WIFE WOULDN'T FOLLOW

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

MONTCLAIR, New Jersey.

C. MELKIN ARSLANIAN is up a tree. As a matter of fact he's been up one tree or another for a long, long time. That, said his wife, Emilie, was the trouble. And for that reason he's really up a tree now, for she said it in a Newark divorce court, and for more than a month she's been not his wife, but his former wife.

Arslanian, prosperous rug dealer, returned to his tree, terribly, terribly hurt about it all. It was with some difficulty that a reporter persuaded him to lean out on a limb and tell about it.

Not any tree would do, it seemed. Certainly not any sissy of a town-bred tree here in Montclair. Arslanian has his tree out in Crystal Lake Park, in the Orange Mountains. Near it he has a cottage. Formally, he lives in the cottage. But actually (so his wife told the Judge) he lives in the tree. And every morning he dons his shorts and runs the 10 miles to his shop in town—barefoot.

He puts on shoes now, though, when there's snow on the ground. A doctor is responsible for that. He just dotes on the feel of snow around his bare toes. Once he enjoyed it for 15 miles. Next day his toes had a sort of hangover. The doctor said he'd be able to walk in a week or so. And now, says Arslanian, blushing a little at the weakness, he doesn't venture into the snow unshod—, that is, not into any real snow for a real run, say 10 or 14 miles.

He likes to cut holes in the ice for a plunge, too. Crystal Lake is practically in his front yard, and he swims in it all winter. It was just an unhappy chance that Mrs. Arslanian divorced him in May, when he had no ice or snow to turn to. But there's still the tree.

Mrs. Arslanian complained that he took to the tall timber soon after they married. There was one urban interlude, a European honeymoon. But, Mrs. Arslanian declared, Arslanian left her waving on the dock and went alone.

When he returned they took the house at Crystal Lake. But, she said, he found the house confining. So he set up a tent on the roof. More than that, he expected her to share the tent with him. And then he retreated to a platform in a tree.

Goodness knows (she insists) she tried. But she couldn't eradicate an inner respect for steam heat. And in about a year she decided she was barking up the wrong tree.

"She lives in a two-dimensional world," replies Arslanian. "Just on one plane. Never gets off the ground, except maybe going up in an elevator—and that is soaring in a very confining sort of way."

HE STILL doesn't see why people should incarcerate themselves in houses. But as for the assertion that he slept in a tent—or up a tree—all the time, he says it's exaggerated. As a matter of fact, he does not, he explains, sleep much anywhere.

"I like music at night," he says. "I sit down by the brook and harmonize with the bullfrogs and the insects of the night, and accompany them on my violin."

He's taking lessons on the violin. Also in sculpture and painting. He has studied five years at Yale, and before that he graduated from an Armenian college.

"I thought we'd be happy as doves," he says. But cheerfully as may be, he admits his mistake: "I was," he concedes, "terribly mistaken in her."

royal rank. In 1923 she died, in London.

Before her death, Anastasia had the satisfaction of seeing her son also united by marriage to royalty. In 1921 young William, then 19, went to Athens to visit his mother. There he met Princess Xenia, 18-year-old niece of King Constantine. There are two versions of subsequent developments. According to one, Anastasia arranged a marriage between the two youngsters, and her son rather indifferently consented. The other account is that William and Xenia fell in love and insisted on marrying although Anastasia wanted them to wait until they were older. At all events, William and the Princess were married October 8 in Paris. There were three ceremonies, first a civil one, then a wedding at an American Episcopal church, followed by another in a Russian church. Among those who attended the ceremonies was the bride's mother, Princess Marie, sister of Constantine. Xenia's father, the Grand Duke Georges-Michaelovitch, a cousin of Czar Nicholas of Russia, had been killed in the Russian revolution.

Anastasia gave William an allowance "sufficient for a gentleman to live on." After her death, he received the income from his father's estate.

A propensity for going places distinguished the married life of the young Leedses. William, especially, was always popping from one place on the map to another, sometimes quite on the spur of the moment. The arrival of a daughter in 1925 failed to end these impulses to travel.

Transportation seemed to have a peculiar fascination for the son of the tin plate magnate. He was particularly fond of the sea, maintaining a yacht and a succession of speed boats. But he also learned to fly an airplane and enjoyed driving fast automobiles. A long series of accidents, involving several narrow escapes from death, apparently failed to quench his enthusiasm for such activities.

When a gasoline launch carrying Leeds and several companions sank off the coast of Georgia, the nautical host got the party to land in a row boat which had been towed behind the larger craft. In 1928, his $75,000 speed boat caught fire at a pier at Oyster Bay, New York, and Leeds lifted Miss Adele Astaire, the dancer, out of the vessel and pushed it away from the landing stage just before the thing exploded; Miss Astaire and her brother, Fred, were house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Leeds at the time.

Another time a speed boat of his caught fire on a lake in the Adirondacks and Billy beat out the flames with his coat, as his wife looked on apprehensively.

Billy and Xenia were supposed to get on well with each other. She shared his liking for speed boats and travel, and apparently didn't mind his lack of awe of her royal lineage—he called her Tommy. He spent $586 to talk to her by telephone from San Francisco to Oyster Bay. But early in 1930 Xenia sued for divorce, and got it. Just what she alleged against him has never been made public; the papers were sealed and the Judge wouldn't talk. Xenia received custody of the daughter, Nancy, and a property settlement. After the decree was granted, the young millionaire and the Princess both declared they were still friends and expected to remain friends.

It is understood that the property settlement gave Xenia dower right to one-third of Leeds' propery exclusive of the trust fund, that is, about $5,000,000. Under the provisions of the elder Leeds' will, the income from the trust, on the son's death, is expected to go to his daughter, Nancy, and on her death, the principal is scheduled to go to the New York Lying-in Hospital. It is reported that Billy has already created a trust for his new wife. On his thirty-fifth birthday—his next one—he is to receive $500,000 cash from his father's estate.

IT WAS nearly two years before his parting with Xenia that Leeds met Miss Hamilton. He was a guest of a friend in a cottage at Atlantic City and the girl was a phone operator in one of the hotels there. They met at a party given by the host, and seemed to be attracted to each other at once. Soon there were rumors of a romance. A desire to avoid publicity was said to have prompted Miss Hamilton to leave Atlantic City and take an apartment in Greenwich Village.

It was after his divorce that Leeds rescued the pretty brunette from drowning. That revived talk about a romance between them. Questioned on this point, Billy was quoted at that time as having said: "I like Olive. She's a sweet girl. We've had lots of good times together. But if we marry our good times would end, no doubt. I'm just not the marrying type. No woman should stand for me long if she were my wife and I'm not in love with any girl."

William Bateman Leeds is six years older now—at 34, a short, square-shouldered fellow with blue eyes in a bronzed, outdoor face, and a considerable gift for making friends. Maybe he'll make a better husband for the retired phone girl than he did for the Princess. At least, this man who was connected by two marriages with royalty has pretty definitely "gone American."

creatures as primitive ponies, reindeer, bison and mammoths.

It isn't entirely accurate to speak of migrations during this era between 15,000 and 40,000 B. C. As the climate changed and the shape of the land was drastically modified over the centuries, men moved over the face of the earth, whole nations and even races were wiped out, others increased and multiplied and became distinct from one another. And the process went on and on down stretches of years longer than the whole range of known and fabulous history—a tiny span indeed in contrast with these aeons. This notion is important. It shows that in estimating the character of an archaic culture one is likely to make mistakes much more serious than if a student were to confuse the time of Moses with that of King Charles II or of Charlemagne with that of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Doubtless the people who inhabited California at that time were more different in many respects from those who lived contemporaneously in Europe, than modern Americans from modern Chinese for their cultures were separated by distances which involved centuries of migration in that period.

California is likely to be a rich field for exploration of this distant past owing to the fact that this area is highly volcanic. Volcanoes have preserved invaluable relics of social history in such comparatively recent periods as that of Pompeii. The volcanoes responsible for the earthquakes in California nowadays, were highly destructive during the Pleistocene epoch. They must have wiped out more than a few communities in successive centuries, for literally hundreds of miles are covered by recent lava beds. The mining of the gold rush days when shafts were sunk through volcanic rock resulted in many important finds, but the invaders of '49 were clearly more interested in exploiting the present than in discovering the ancient mysteries.

One of the most fertile grounds for such excavations is the ancient highway system extending down California. Judging by the age of the Ballona skull, the area through which some of these highways pass has been inhabited for an unthinkably long period, intermittently of course, but possibly for many centuries at a time. Two distinct racial groups, both considerably more recent than the Ballona men, have been traced through the territory now occupied by Mexico, New Mexico, California, Texas, Nevada and Arizona. These two races are differentiated by the shapes of their skulls—one long-headed (dolichocephalic), the other round-headed (brachycephalic). Dr. Mark Raymond Harrington of Southwest Museum, Los Angeles, points out that the former type of skull is characteristic of the Shoshone Indians. Although he does not say so explicitly, he implies that the great civilizations of the Aztecs and the Toltecs may have descended from this race.

It is believed that the two races waged war against each other, the long-heads winning out after their invention of bows and arrows had made them superior to the dart throwing round-heads.

Hugh Matier, a geologist at the University of Southern California, has traced the course of the long-headed race from the Pacific Coast of China across Bering Strait and down the Pacific Coast. Depot points and resting places along this route have been discovered. One of the most interesting of these is the one Dr. Otto William Geist of the Alaska School of Mines found in the Diomedes Islands, off the Alaskan coast. It is believed that immigrants from Asia used to camp there before setting off on the long journey down the Pacific shore. The inference is that travelers passed back and forth after the first migrations, so that it was afterwards possible for Asiatics to know their destination.

GRADUALLY, in the course of centuries, well-established routes came into existence. The main highway followed the coast line—or what is now the coast line—from Alaska to Central California. From here there were several branches, one of them directly into Mexico, others going off laterally and following the receding valleys up to and across the Rocky Mountains. One went down Step Toe Valley into Nevada, one from what is now San Diego to Yuma, Arizona, another crossed the Mojave Desert.

Graves along these antique highways indicate that the two races that frequented them had certain customary similarities. Both, for example, believed in an after life, for they buried their dead with two bowls or jugs—one presumably containing water, the other food for the sustenance of the soul on its journey to eternity. At a relatively early time some of these tribes were becoming agricultural nations, living in villages and eating food that they cultivated themselves. Agriculture is a necessary forerunner of culture and a large population. Dr. Byron Cummings of the University of Arizona thinks the ancient nations of America were as large as those of the Mediterranean and equally civilized. Certainly they developed a kind of writing and their cryptographs are still more or less decipherable.

What is most interesting in this connection is that the great highways were carefully marked with what might be called road maps. According to Dr. Harrington, "Drawings on rock in Clark County, Nevada, and on the New Mexico-Arizona border, west of Gallup, are undoubtedly road maps, giving directions of trail and locations of springs and places where Joshua trees and game might be found. There are other rock road maps at springs on various routes." The ones reproduced with this article are from Clark County, Nevada. One of them shows a mammoth, carrying what might be taken for an elephant howdah, like those in which Indian princes ride to the hunt. It is a hint at the possibility that prehistoric Americans domesticated the primitive elephant and used it for transportation.

One of the most heavily traveled sections of road was that which followed the Agua Caliente fault. This trail is replete with springs — many of them hot springs. It lies in a valley between two high mountain ranges and prehistoric sign boards are numerous. In recent times the Agua Caliente route has had an eventful history. Kit Carson discovered it in 1829 and 17 years later led General Phil Kearney's troops over it to the conquest of California. A year later the Mormon Battalion rode down this trail in oxcarts, and during the ensuing 20 years more than 100,000 traveled it in search of gold. But after the Civil War it fell again into disuse as other roads were built. There seems to have been no good geographical reason why the modern highways shouldn't have followed the prehistoric ones. It just happened that they didn't. But now they are building on the ancient roadbed again. Most of the central coast line is traversed by fast State and Federal highways. The route from Hazelton, Canada, to Fairbanks, Alaska, has just been surveyed for a co-operative highway by the Canadian and United States Governments. The road from Mexico City to Laredo, Texas, has just been completed by the Mexican Government and another to Agua Caliente and up the hot springs route is partly planned, already under construction. A California highway association is sponsoring the American section.

Presently the American tourist will be whisking at top speed through a landscape which may once have been surveyed at leisure from the swaying back of a mammoth, stopping to munch hotdogs where prehistoric savages gnawed at roast haunch of pony. Perhaps the ancient road maps that told wanderers 10,000 years ago where to seek Joshua trees and game will give them pause as they scuttle by at 60 miles an hour trying to save 10 precious minutes af the lavish time that has rolled down those roads for so many millenia.

from any man, especially an imprisoned man, and what's anybody's life worth to him?

For it is worse than death to a man to know that the only way he will ever leave prison is, as they say, to go out feet first. No matter how slender is the hope of winning eventual parole, still a convict will nurture the thought that he may have the good fortune to get some consideration. Remove that hope and a prison can be reduced to a shambles by wild plots to escape.

Some men will go to any lengths to win their way to freedom. In a subsequent chapter I shall relate the desperate efforts to escape of Ethan McNabb and William Bagley, two of the most daring convicts San Quentin ever held. They are examples of men who knew they faced nothing but caging. Given a few more McNabbs and Bagleys and an explosion could not be prevented at an overcrowded prison like San Quentin.

I believe, too, that capital punishment goes far toward suppressing lynchings. California had an example not long ago in the lynching of Clyde Johnson at Dunsmuir. Two years before, a man named George Hall had been convicted of killing a State highway patrolman and a deputy sheriff in a holdup at Yreka. For two years Hall had been cheating the noose by various legal technicalities. The countryside was aroused.

Johnson killed Police Chief F. R. Daw in a holdup. Angered by the law's delays in the Hall case, the citizenry dragged Johnson forth and hanged him to a tree.

Think of how much more frequently things like this might occur if the death penalty did not exist.

OF COURSE, there are paradoxes. There are counties where juries usually will bring in death verdicts, and on the other hand there are counties where, under a set of similar or even more flagrant circumstances, juries will bring in a manslaughter verdict carrying a term of one to 10 years, or set the slayer free.

I once served on a jury in a criminal case years ago. I remember two sanctimonious individuals who, the moment we got into the jury room, announced, "We've got to convict this fellow. Look at the expense of the trial he's put this county to." And I remember arguing, "But as it happens, there's no evidence as far as I can see to prove him guilty."

I am personally opposed to extreme penalties for crimes plainly committed in the heat of passion and in defense of the sanctity of the home. These men are not real killers. They are, most of them, heartbroken at what they have done. They would never have taken human life again. But where a jury has gone too far, the Governor can right the injustice by executive clemency.

Even granting that rank miscarriages of justice occur under the death penalty, there are times when the accused has a better chance at acquittal than he would if life imprisonment were the maximum penalty.

I refer to cases based on circumstantial evidence. Here the death penalty frequently defeats itself by its own severity. A jury fights shy of sending a man to the gallows when any doubt of his guilt exists. And even if he is convicted, his chances remain good. He can win popular support and an appeals court is more apt to hunt for a technical flaw in his trial and give him another chance.

Executions should not be shows. This romancing about "the last mile" and "the 13 steps" doesn't constitute a pretty picture of our modern civilization.

THAT'S one of the reasons I favor lethal gas executions. They are over in a flash. There is no atmosphere of violence. They are devoid of the sensationalism the press and the public attach to hangings, and are more humane.

Nevada introduced the lethal gas chamber. At the late Governor James Rolph's request for a recommendation, I went to Carson City and witnessed an execution. The condemned man was swiftly strapped in a chair. Pellets of cyanide were dropped into a jar of sulphuric acid, sending up deadly fumes. The effect was instantaneous. One whiff and the man stiffened in death. A physician listening at a special stethoscope outside the glassed-in chamber pronounced him dead within a comparatively short time.

I recommended that California adopt the lethal chamber, and both houses of the Legislature passed a bill to make the change, but Governor Rolph pocket-vetoed it in the jam of measures left by the Legislature at the close of the session. Today Nevada, Colorado, Arizona and North Carolina use this system of ridding society of its murderous misfits.

Seven of the 14 states that once abolished capital punishment have restored it. They are Arizona, Colorado, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Oregon and Tennessee. The states that have no death penalty are Michigan, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Rhode Island, Maine and Wisconsin, and it is a well-known fact that a killer, wanted for several murders, breathes a sigh of relief if one of his crimes has been committed in one of these states. He can always "beat the rap" by pleading guilty there.

"Why should I put up with jarring 'all-at-once' cathartics?"

I know a better way to relieve constipation—the new scientific 3-minute way. You simply chew delicious FEEN-A-MINT for 3 minutes at night. And, because you chew it, it goes to work easily, gradually—not all at once. No wonder every one in our family says: "No more old-fashioned cathartics—we're FEEN-A-MINT fans." MUNY OPERA DRESSOGRAPHS

Vivienne Segal

VIVIENNE SEGAL is the first of the Municipal Opera stars who will appear on this page during the Forest Park season, which began Friday night. Miss Segal, born in Philadelphia, made her first professional appearance as leading woman of the music play, "The Blue Paradise," after four rehearsals. She has had leading roles on Broadway in the Ziegfeld "Follies," "The Chocolate Soldier" and other successes; and in such films as "Viennese Nights," and "The Cat and the Fiddle." She is a featured soloist on a national radio network.

Accompanying Miss Segal are three sets of costumes she wears in Municipal Opera shows. Cut out the star and paste on cardboard. Then cut out the costumes. Now dress her in her proper outfits, being careful to assemble each costume correctly. The three types of costumes shown here are worn by this actress in the following productions: Constance in "The Three Musketeers," in which she plays a lady of old France; Carmen in "Kid Boots"; Lucille in "No, No, Nanette," and in this show she wears an evening gown.

Next week: Georgie Price.

THE CHARACTERS

BUNGALOW BEN—A turtle interested in politics.

GRUMPY—An old bear who is Mayor of Hickory Hollow.

And other happly little citizens of the Hollow.

One can hardly blame Bungalow Ben for taking the coming election seriously. Each year the house he carries on his back grows bigger and bigger, and since one is taxed according to the size of one's house in Hickory Hollow, the poor old turtle's taxes keep getting bigger. Now it is this tax on houses that Bungalow Ben wants changed and, knowing that it will be impossible to change it if Grumpy is re-elected Mayor, Ben is campaigning against the old bear. But so far he has met with very little success, and we see him walking along muttering to himself as

THE PLAY BEGINS

BUNGALOW BEN—How anybody can be so stupid as to vote for that old tyrant, Grumpy, is more than I can understand. All he ever thinks about is taxes. Tax this and tax that. Why I honestly think we'd have a tax on breathing if that fool bear ever thought of it. The folks in this town ought to band together and . . . (He hears voices.) What's this? (Bungalow Ben stops and listens and a moment later a happy group of grown-ups and their children come trooping along. Harry Hoarder is one of them.)

HARRY HOARDER—Hello, Ben. Aren't you going to the graduating exercises? You know this is the last day of school, don't you?

BUNGALOW BEN—No, I didn't, Harry. I've been so busy with politics that I haven't had time for anything else. But I'll go along. I always like to see the children graduate. Hm-m-m. You know, Harry, it would be a fine place for someone to get up and say something about the coming election, since most everyone in town will be there. (Just then he hears a deep, rumbling voice behind him and he turns around, and there is Grumpy all dressed up and smiling from ear to ear.)

GRUMPY—That's a very good suggestion, Ben, and, as Mayor of this town I'll do it. Ha! Ha! Ha!

WHERE HERONS NEST on the MISSOURI RIVER

Photos by Clint Murphy of the Post-Dispatch staff.

A pair of great blue herons sailing majestically above the cottonwoods where they nest.

A black crowned night heron over its nest.

A fledgling great blue (distinguished by its bill) is ungainly and looks only half done.

Seen close up, the great blue heron is a rather gawky animal, its gangly legs hanging awkwardly, its neck angular. But its wing spread is impressive and its sweeping flight is graceful and smooth. →

ITS 12-CYLINDER ENGINE
WRITES A NEW RECORD ON THE ROADS

THE LINCOLN-ZEPHYR is the only car under $3000 with a V-12 cylinder engine. That in itself is enough to stamp the car a new kind of value. But what does the engine, and the car, do on the roads? What is its record of economy?

LINCOLN-ZEPHYR owners report 14 to 18 miles per gallon on roads good, bad, and indifferent! If that figure seems too good to be true, remember that this 110-horsepower engine provides a high ratio of power to weight; that the car, for all its size, is light in weight because of its unusual design; and that advanced streamlining cuts down wind resistance to a marked degree, particularly at higher speeds. It is no wonder that the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR, under these conditions, should perform as it does.

And no one who understands engineering will wonder at the comfort of the car. It is full of new ideas, sound ideas. Body and frame are one, a complete unit, to which is welded steel paneling on top, sides, and bottom. This rigid structure, great in strength, is cradled on soft, transverse springs. Road shocks are absorbed before they reach passengers. Six people ride near the center of the car—a "front-seat" ride for every one!

Hundreds of owners have written spontaneously of their enthusiasm for this new kind of transportation—for the best friends of the LINCOLN-ZEPHYR are those who have driven it. The Lincoln Motor Company, builders of Lincoln and Lincoln-Zephyr motor cars.

V-12 engine develops 110 horsepower. Wheelbase 122 inches. Springbase 133 inches. Room for six passengers and luggage. Seven colors. Safety Glass throughout. Available in two sedan body types. Convenient terms through UCC ½% per month Finance Plans.

The Hermit of the Wittenberg Belfry

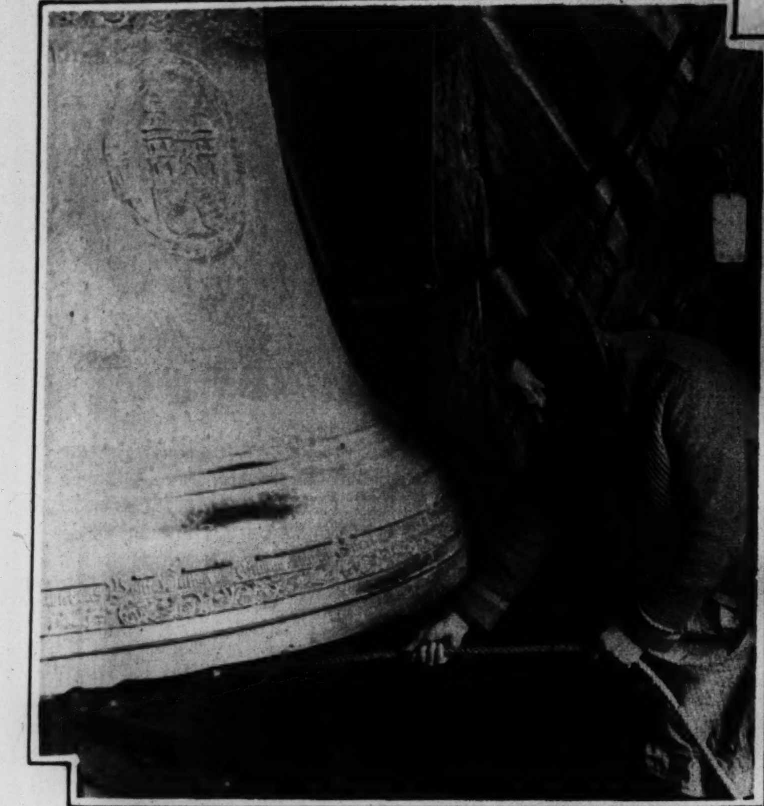
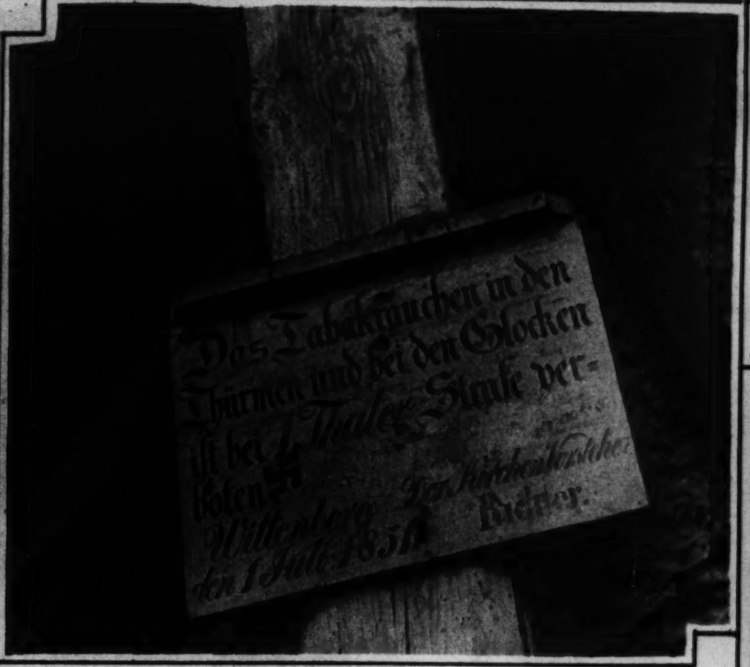
Mrs. Otto, the 76-year-old bell ringer of the fifteenth century church at Wittenberg, Germany, has lived in the steeple for 44 years. The photographs show various phases of her isolated daily life. Above she is shown entertaining a visitor, one of her grandchildren.

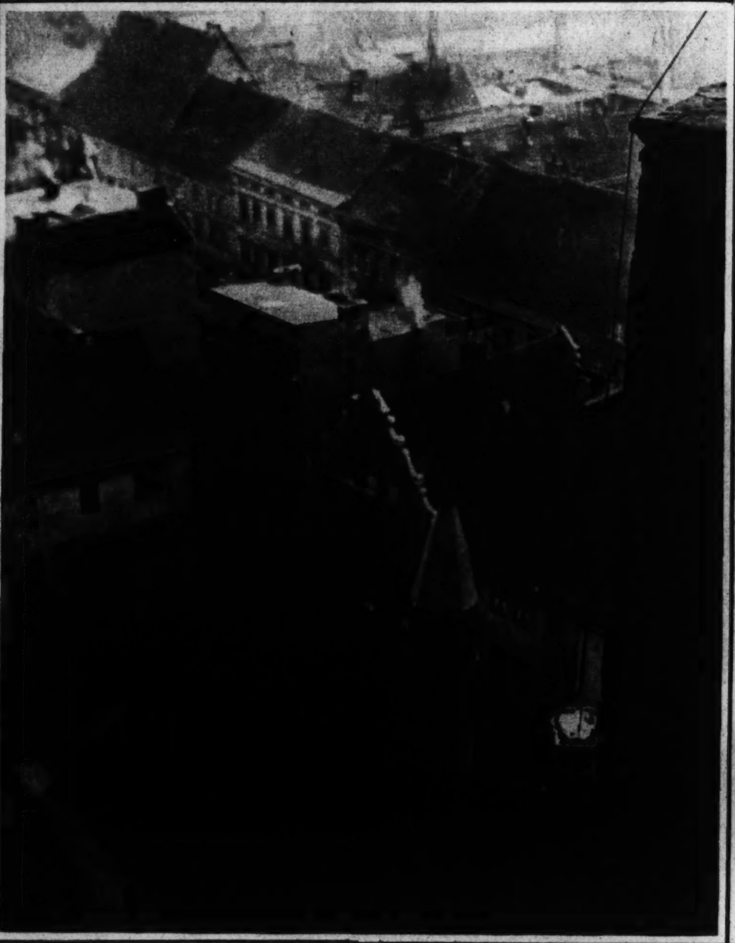


Ringing the great bell is Mrs. Otto's only exercise.

Mrs. Otto does all her shopping by lowering a market basket and waiting until someone brings her groceries. She was only 28 when she moved into the tower of Wittenberg Church and almost never descends its 184 steps nowadays.



"Tobacco smoking in the tower and near the bells is forbidden by a fine of one thaler.
"The Church Warden Richter.
"Wittenberg, July 1, 1851."



The groceries are delivered by a primitive dumb waiter.

To receive a visitor Mrs. Otto must lower her latch key as shown.

DON'T LET ADOLESCENT PIMPLES MAKE YOU FEEL ILL AT EASE

BOYS AND GIRLS who are victims of pimples naturally hate to face people. Unfortunately, poor skin is very common after the start of adolescence—from about 13 to 25, or even longer.

During these years, important glands develop and final growth takes place. This causes disturbances throughout the body. The skin gets oversensitive. Waste poisons in the blood irritate this sensitive skin, causing it to break out in unsightly pimples.

But you can get rid of adolescent pimples. Fleischmann's fresh Yeast clears these skin irritants out of the blood. With the cause removed—pimples soon go!

Eat 3 cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast daily, one cake about ½ hour before meals—plain, or in a little water—until your skin clears. Start today.

—clears the skin

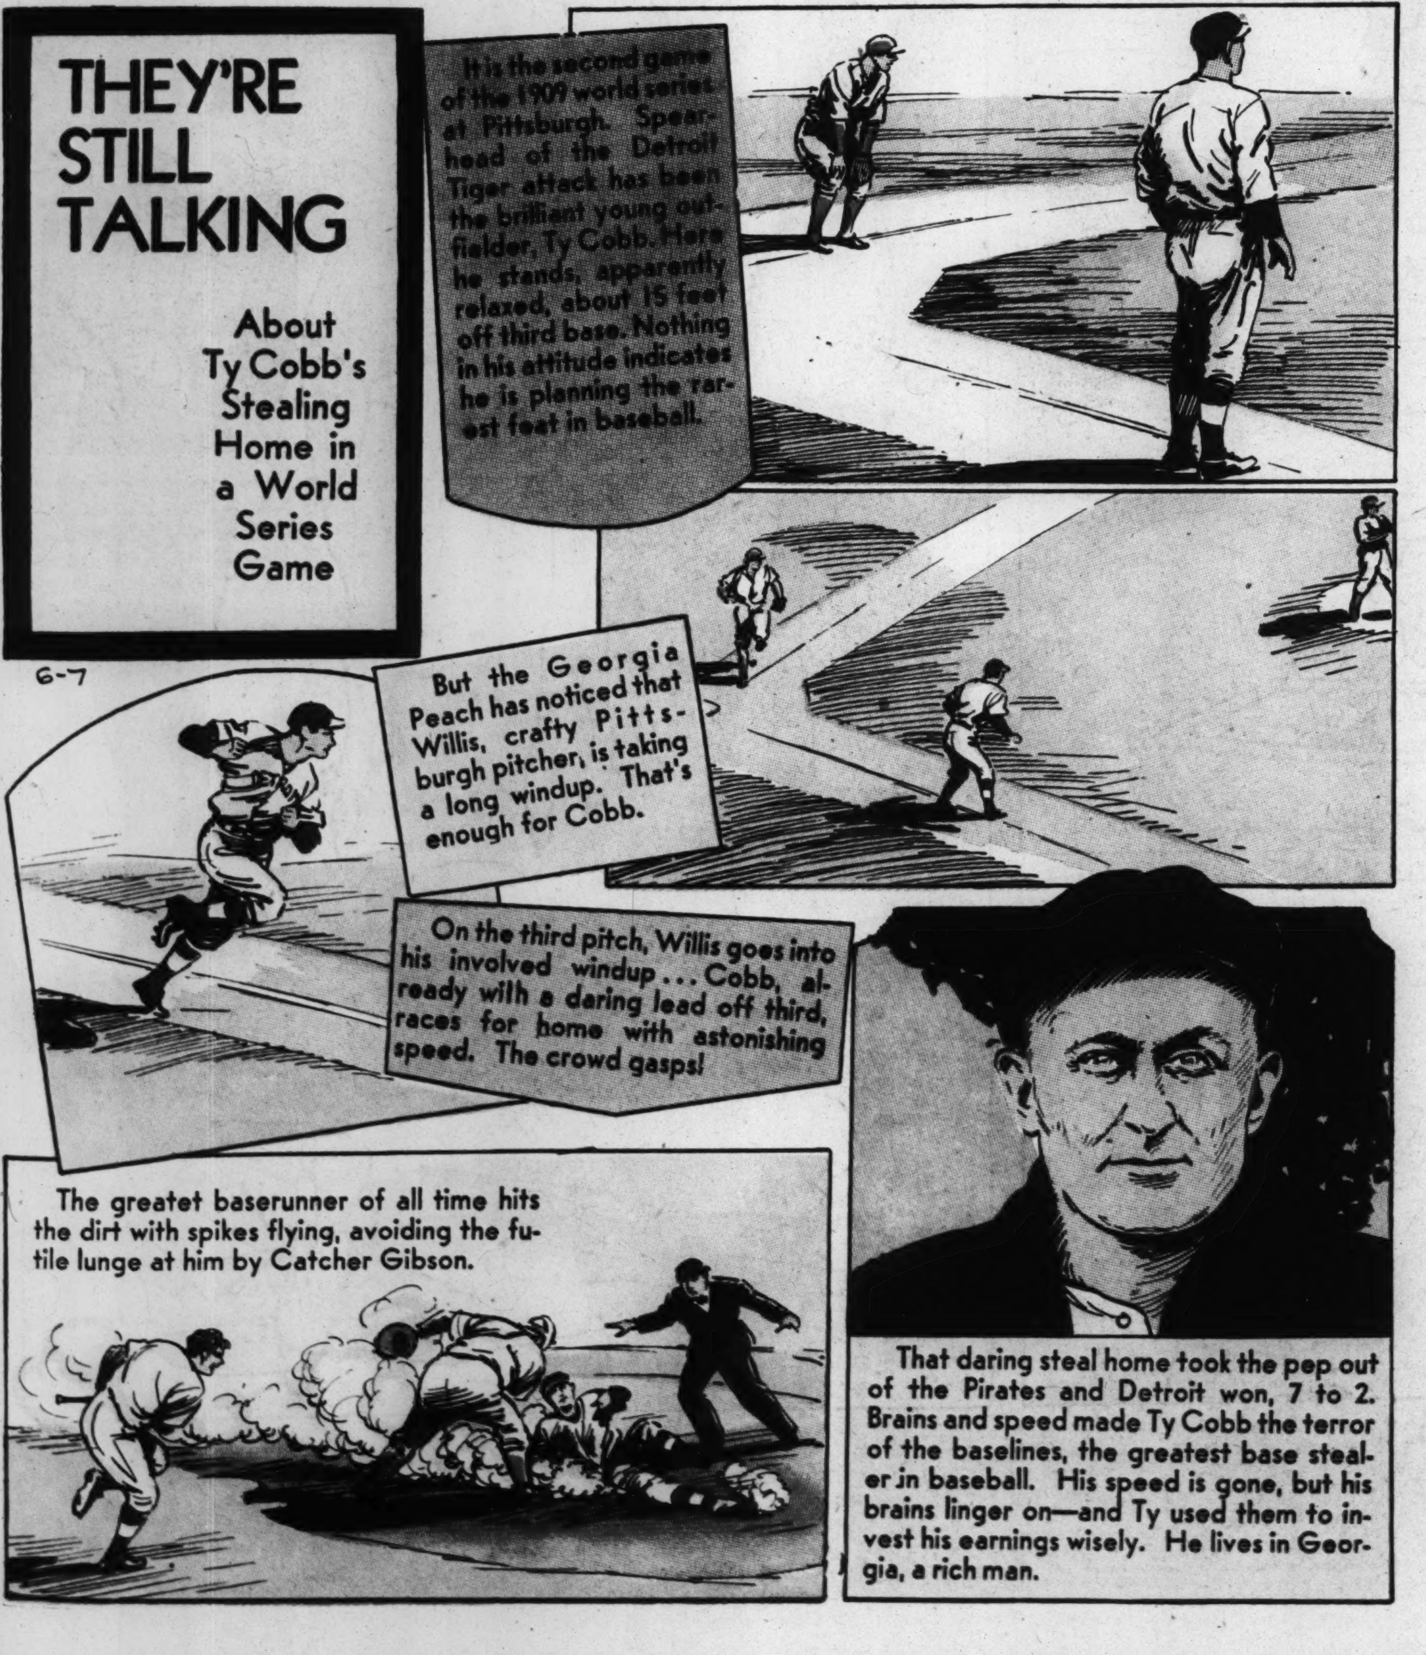
THEY'RE STILL TALKING

About Ty Cobb's Stealing Home in a World Series Game



It is the second game of the 1909 world series at Pittsburgh. Spearhead of the Detroit Tiger attack has been the brilliant young outfielder, Ty Cobb. Here he stands, apparently relaxed, about 15 feet off third base. Nothing in his attitude indicates he is planning the rarest feat in baseball.

But the Georgia Peach has noticed that Willis, crafty Pittsburgh pitcher, is taking a long windup. That's enough for Cobb.

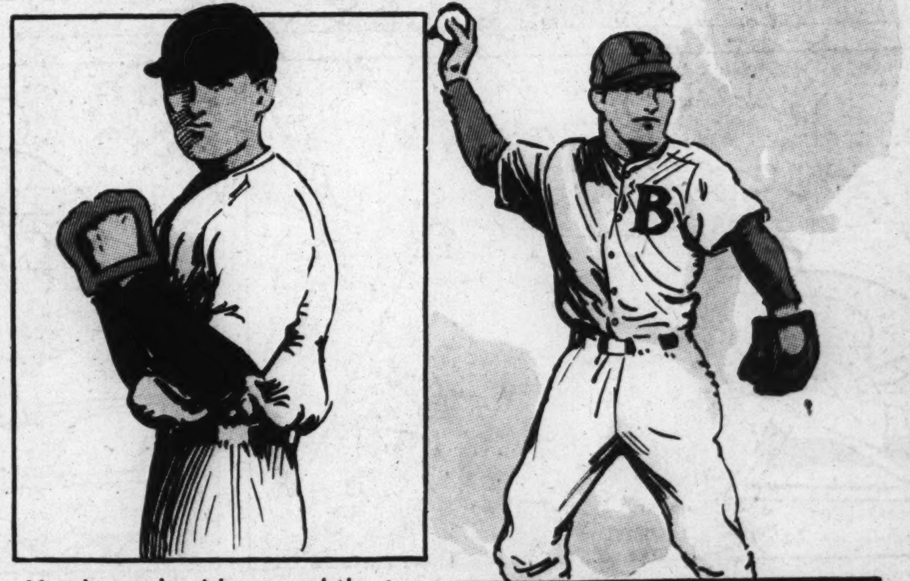
On the third pitch, Willis goes into his involved windup . . . Cobb, already with a daring lead off third, races for home with astonishing speed. The crowd gasps!

The greatet baserunner of all time hits the dirt with spikes flying, avoiding the futile lunge at him by Catcher Gibson.

That daring steal home took the pep out of the Pirates and Detroit won, 7 to 2. Brains and speed made Ty Cobb the terror of the baselines, the greatest base stealer in baseball. His speed is gone, but his brains linger on—and Ty used them to invest his earnings wisely. He lives in Georgia, a rich man.

Baseball . . . . By NED BRANT

Pitcher's Windup



You boys should conceal the type of curve you plan to throw by gripping the ball in the hand behind the gloved hand.

Use the same windup for all pitches. Then the batter can't tell by your motion what kind of a curve you plan to throw.

When there are runners on base the pitcher should not use a windup. You should assume a position such as the boy in the upper drawing and limit your movement to stretching the arms above your head.

MOTHERS! Ovaltine is a delicious pure food beverage first created in Switzerland (now made in the U. S. A.) and approved by 20,000 doctors. It contains more than 15 food elements valuable in the diet of the growing child—and is particularly valued because of the noticeable increases in weight, appetite, and nerve poise which so frequently occur when Ovaltine is added to a child's regular daily diet.

Thousands of nervous people—men and women—use Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. It is also highly recommended as a strengthening food-drink for convalescents, and the aged—and for sleeplessness, when taken as a hot drink at bedtime.

Ovaltine is very inexpensive to serve—and can be obtained at all drug and grocery stores. You simply give it mixed with milk—either hot or cold—and children love its delicious taste.
